The headlines pretty much tell the story of the demands placed on our military personnel. And those are only from one day in our regional daily newspapers.

Just talk to a military family and they'll tell you of the sleepless nights, the worry and the overwhelming pride they have for their son, daughter, wife, husband or cousin serving our country at this time of war. It is exacting a high toll on the military as well as their families. Their concern seems to mount as daily reports speak of insurgents and violence in Iraq and other parts of the Middle East.

GIFTS of HOPE
YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

Our efforts in places most of us have never heard of before have strained the military to new levels, with more and more National Guard and other branches of the military forced to use their reservists to protect our country's interests at home and abroad.

That's why we at Community Newspaper Company/South decided this would be the perfect year to show our support for the troops and their families by making military assistance efforts our beneficiary for this season's Gifts of Hope campaign.

Throughout the holiday season we'll be writing stories and profiling the work of three South Shore efforts geared to helping military families in need. We'll be partnering with the Pembroke Military Support Group; Care Packs of Weymouth; and the Quincy based operations of the National Guard's Family Readiness Groups. All are devoted to providing needed support — financial or otherwise — to our soldiers and their families.

Supt. reception, a nice welcome

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said the welcome reception for new Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh, held at the Lightkeepers' Residence Nov. 14, went very well.

"It was a really nice reception for a really nice person," she said. Although there was low attendance, MacCarthy said among those who did attend, many were new faces, some of which have students in kindergarten. "It's nice to know there's another group coming in and they want to be involved," said MacCarthy.

MacCarthy offered her thanks to everyone who helped plan the reception, including the generous donation of the Lightkeepers' Residence for the event. "It's a great opportunity to be able to share the facility with people," she said.

Girl Scouts bake sale for charity

The Girl Scouts in Troop 4778 had a very successful bake sale last week, and raised $85.50 which they donated to the Boston Rescue Mission to help feed the homeless. The girls, who are all in fourth grade, sold baked goods during the fourth grade lunch at Deer Hill Nov. 16, and took turns working the table and making change.

Before the sale, the girls made posters and hung them around the Deer Hill School to promote the event, and also wrote an announcement which Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley read over the PA system.

The girls came up with the idea after Troop leader Mary McKelvey received a brown paper bag in the mail a few weeks ago which said for a $1.78 donation, a homeless person could be given a Thanksgiving dinner, complete with turkey. The girls estimate their donation will be enough to feed 48 people.

Strategic Planning brochure available

Copies of the schools' strategic planning brochure is now available for the public. Copies can be picked up at the superintendent's office, and the School Committee said it will also be made available at the Town Library as well as online in the coming weeks. The brochure outlines the goals and objectives of the schools moving forward for the next five years.

Register to vote

Friday Nov. 26 will be the last day to register to vote in the upcoming Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting. Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on Nov. 26 from 9 a.m. until 8 p.m. Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later meetings or elections. For more information, please contact the Town Clerk's office at (781) 383-4100.

CPC fund receives dollar-for-dollar match

On Oct. 15 Cohasset's Community Preservation Fund received $254,690 from the Massachusetts Department of Revenue. This was the third consecutive year that the Commonwealth matched dollar-for-dollar all money raised by Cohasset through the Community Preservation Act.

The money received from the Commonwealth was deposited into Cohasset's Community Preservation Fund and combined with the revenues raised locally by assessing a 1.5 percent surcharge against real property values. The fund is spent on projects endorsed by the Community Preservation Committee and then approved by Town Meeting.

Recent projects include:

- purchasing several lots bordering Lily Pond (in order to protect the water supply);
- creating two senior housing units in the former Paul Pratt Memorial Library;
- constructing playing fields and play grounds, and the highly successful acquisition of the "Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary", which was purchased without any impact to the tax base.

The Community Preservation Committee recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation, CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey explains.

The money provided by the Department of Revenue is raised by a surcharge assessed at all Recorder of Deeds offices each time someone records a deed or mortgage on the land records.

"During the most recent budget session on Beacon Hill, legislators made seven attempts to spend this money on unrelated special interest projects," Ivimey said. "But thanks to a bipartisan effort that included leadership by state Sen. Robert Hedlund and Rep. Garrett Bradley, the Commonwealth's fund was fully preserved."

Anyone interested in applying for Community Preservation funding is encouraged to contact Stuart Ivimey at (781) 383-2604.

School officials look at ways to boost the bottom line

Could charge for non-academics

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There's going to be a budget shortfall for the current fiscal year, which started July 1.

Although the fiscal year 2005 number is far from being concrete and could be as high as $500,000 — the schools are looking at ways to help the bottom line.

Some school programs could experience an implementation of fees, or could be cut altogether, while additional programs could be added to help increase revenue.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said while it may seem counter-intuitive to add programs at a time when resources are low, she has an idea which could help generate the revenue the school department needs.

She said if the school department can start up its own preschool and also expand to full-day kindergarten —which would be run on a fee basis — it could "possibly generate a net gain equivalent to three teachers." Currently there is a preschool program being run by the South Shore Educational Collaborative out of the Osgood School.

But there are other possible revenue options which have been floated in the past and will be considered again, such as implementing fees for transportation, extra-curricular activities, and athletics, and increasing lunch prices.

Last year, the School Committee discussed increasing fees for high school athletics, but ultimately decided to cut the middle school athletic program, and replace it with an intramural sports program, funded solely by fees. However, School Committee member Rick Flynn said when fees are increased too much at the high school level, "Depending on how high you go, you can tend to drive more kids away."

Flynn said many Cohasset students are able to go to college as a result of sports scholarships, and it might not be the best solution to begin implementing fees for such a beneficial program which could deter some athletes from participating. In addition, in order to raise the kind of money the schools really need, increasing fees can only do so much.

However, Walsh said she knows of other schools which have experienced the same budget woes as Cohasset and they have been forced to cut all funding for everything non-academic. Those schools systems have taken the approach that it is the school's responsibility to educate first and foremost, and everything else must be secondary. That means anything extra-curricular, from music to art class to sports, is not included in the budget, and is funded solely through user fees or the local boosters clubs.

Walsh said she has also heard of towns beginning extra-curricular or athletic funds where residents can make tax-deductible contributions to help keep programs going. However, Flynn pointed out the town already has an organization that accepts donations —the Cohasset Educational Foundation — but, with the exception of the funds raised last year to save teaching positions, funding is usually contributed to cover one-time items such as the language lab or computer lab. "The question is, do we want to support our operating costs with donated funds," said Flynn.

"We need to regroup, knowing the challenges we have ahead and deal with those issues right now."
— Jamie Williams, School Committee

Asking those who ride the bus to pay a fee may seem like a viable option, but when the particulars are really looked at, Walsh said there would only be a small number of students who could be charged. She said the schools are required to transport students in kindergarten through grade six, and any other students for whom it would be dangerous to walk to school. That would include any child who lives on the other side of Route 3A,as well as any children living on a street which does not have a sidewalk. To single out a small percentage of students to pay the fees not only would be unfair, but would be unprofitable, she said. While parking fees could be implemented for those students who choose to drive to school instead of taking the bus and paying the transportation fee, in the end, Walsh said transportation fees won't be a viable solution.

Without any certain means of generating funding, School Committee member Chartis Tebbetts said the board has three options: do nothing and watch the figures to see if they go up or down; look at other ways to increase revenue; or look at areas to cut back services, such as salaries for paraprofessionals and support staff.

However, Committee member Jamie Williams said in her opinion, sitting back is not an option.

"We need to regroup, knowing the challenges we have ahead and deal with those issues right now," Williams said. She added the board needs to group all of its energy and focus to create a "realistic, documented budget, and make sure it is clear so even the individual who is not budget savvy can understand."

Moving forward into the FY05 and FY06 budgets, Williams said the Committee must realize the state is not going to give the schools the funding they need, and the school department needs to do what it must to ensure the education of students is not compromised.

"We have to say, 'No more Mr. Nice Guy,' and we have to pay for the education of our students. If that means implementing athletic fees, music fees, or raising lunch fees, if it is not academic," it should be a secondary consideration. "Our business is to educate when it's all said and done," she said.

Williams also said she has heard a lot of talk about solutions, both this year and last, but it's time the Committee start making some concrete decisions to begin moving forward. "Our best effort is what will prevent a deficit. We need to be proactive," she said.

State of finances

When the town passed a $400,000 override last year, it was understood the school department received a roughly 6.8 percent increase. However, School Financial Assistant Karen Park said in actuality, when all fixed costs are factored in, the schools only received a 2.8 percent increase.

The largest portion of both the FY04 and FY05 budgets is the amount paid for salaries. In FY04, $8,927,331 was paid, and in FY05, the cost has increased to $9,285,833. Walsh said it is important to note, if the total increase in the budget is less than 3 percent, with 3 percent salary raises set in stone for contractual obligations, it is impossible to break even.

While the salary increases could be planned for, Park said there were unexpected changes which needed to take place throughout the course of the fiscal year. She said the original FY04 budget was set at $11,177,297, but an additional custodial contract for $41,000 was added to the budget, as well as an increase of $200,000 for utilities. The adjusted budget was up to $11,418,297 as of June 30, 2004.

At the Special Town Meeting this Dec. 6, the school department will ask for $93,000 to cover a Keyspan gas bill which was left over from FY04, as well as $65,000 to cover FY04 unemployment costs, bringing the budget up to $11,576,297. Fiscal year 2004 ended June 30.

While the schools were previously awarded a $55,000 utility rebate for making energy saving upgrades in the schools, that was a one-time opportunity and the funds to cover that cost on a continual basis were also added to the FY04 budget.

Walsh said she has heard the School Committee talk about the overwhelming support of the town when the schools needed the override last year, and the "last message we want to send is that it was not appreciated." She understands fully why people might have questions about how the schools arrived at this point after passing an override, and said she will provide the answers.

As budget season progresses, the final counts for expenses will begin to be more concrete. Walsh said the numbers the schools are currently using in their budget scenarios are estimates and "We can't say," what they will be. "It could be less, it could be more. There are a lot of 'coulds' out there."

One thing that is certain, is that the budget process will change moving into FY06, as all budgets will start from zero. Actual figures, based on estimates from the previous actual costs from the year before, will be plugged in, allowing the School Committee to achieve one of its strategic planning goals — to have a true budget, Walsh said.

School board provides budget tutorial at meeting

Goes over last year's process

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Balancing the budget every year is no easy task, the School Committee says. For school board members, the process begins in October. By mid-winter last year, it was clear the schools needed more than the town could appropriate under the limits of Prop. 2-1/2 – the state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year.

Last April following a strong lobbying campaign by the schools, a majority of voters opted to pass a $400,000 override to subsidize the school budget.

This year, with budget discussions underway and a possible $500,000 deficit, members of the School Committee want to remind residents of last year's process and ensure the public that the budget talks will continue to unfold in the weeks ahead giving a clear picture of where the schools stand.

School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts said planning for the FY05 budget began in early October, 2003. She said at that time, she, along with former School Committee members Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo both sat on the board, as well as current Chairman Rick Shea, and Rick Flynn. Tebbetts said current member Adrienne MacCarthy had been kept abreast of the budget situation because of her involvement with the PSO, and member Jamie Williams "became more in tune," with the budget as election season began. The election took place the first weekend of April 2004, one week after the annual Town Meeting, and voters passed the override, and elected MacCarthy and Williams to seats on the board.

The first red flag to present itself in the budget was an unexpected rise in utility costs. The actual total cost for utilities for all three schools was $259,925 — but the schools had only budgeted $95,900. This left a deficit of $164,025, due in large part to the construction going on at the middle-high school with utilities used by workers during extended hours, with some effect from Deer Hill construction. In addition, the increased price in natural gas coupled with a severe winter pushed the budget further off its mark.

which would be located between the parking lot and beach. He said as the dune grows, it will trap sand and keep it from traveling up onto the parking lot, and across Atlantic Avenue into Little Harbor, which is an especially big problem during the winter months.

Lawrence also said the association has put in a Request for Determination of Applicability, or RDA, with the Conservation Commission, which would give permission for the association to install a low snow fence roughly 5 feet inside the current sea wall at the beach to help trap the sand and keep it from traveling.

He said the town has also put in an RDA which would allow it to take all the sand off the paved surfaces at the beach, and put it back on the beach, "from whence it came."

A meeting between the Conservation Commission Sandy Beach Association and the Board of Selectmen is tentatively scheduled for Thursday Dec. 2 at 8:15, to discuss the requests as well as the best way to proceed with the situation.

Lawrence said for roughly the past 80 years, the town and the Sandy Beach Association have been working together to remove sand from the parking lot and put it back on the beach using heavy machinery during the fall and spring.

In an effort to improve sight lines for motorists exiting the beach, sand — which Lawrence describes as being a "linear sand feature" — located between the parking lot and Atlantic Avenue was removed this past spring.

The Sandy Beach Association, which owns the beach; the town, which owns the parking lot; and the Conservation Commission, which oversees the environmental status of the beach — do not believe the sand which was removed qualifies as a dune. However, there are some residents who believe when vegetation began to grow on the sand, it qualified the sand as a dune.

"A dune has to be contiguous and serve a purpose," such as preventing coastal flooding, said Lawrence. He said the sand between the lot and the street is not contiguous with anything, and would be similar to having the same pile up of sand in the middle of the parking lot, whether vegetation grows on it or not. He said he believes the orders of conditions for both the association and the town allowed the activity which had taken place at the beach.

A Conservation Commission meeting is tentatively scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 2 to discuss the Sandy Beach issues. For more information, please call the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

months – the amount of notice he is contractually required to provide Bourne. He will come to Cohasset via Bourne, Dedham and Plymouth. He has served in the top administrative post in all three municipalities, accumulating the most time in Plymouth (roughly 18 years).

In Dedham and Bourne, he was the first Town Administrator. In Plymouth, Griffin was the first Town Manager after serving as that town's Executive Secretary. In Cohasset, he will follow Town Manager Mark Haddad who served in the post for seven years.

[Executive Secretary, Town Administrator and Town Manager are different forms of local government – with the Town Manager form having the most authority vested in that position].

Relaxed and affable while in the "hot seat" Saturday, Griffin described himself as a "generalist" who knows a little about a lot with a knack for encouraging people to work like a team. He said he realized Cohasset has had a tough couple of years.

"I think I can help," he said. "I've had a good relationship will all the Boards of Selectmen (I've worked with) and I want to be a resource to you."

Griffin said he would try to develop a 10-year financial plan for the town, looking at both revenue and expenditures. He would also look at formulating a consortium with other towns to develop a benchmark to see how Cohasset compares to communities of similar size and character in terms of services and budgetary issues.

He said in his experience, he was used to setting a number and having the schools come in well above that. But he would work with the schools early on in the budget process and endeavor to bring a balanced budget to Town Meeting. "The towns I've worked in, overrides have not been part of the mix," he said, adding he would welcome reviewing the budget quarterly with Selectmen.

Griffin said he would be accessible to officials and the general public, even speaking to groups such as the Lion's Club.

"I don't always have the answers people want to hear but I want them to know I put the time into it," he said. He said he gives honest answers and builds credibility one person at a time.

The married, father of two said he has a good relationship with state agencies and knows when to call upon state legislators. In Plymouth, which was under a consent order for its wastewater disposal, Griffin worked with the Department of Environmental Protection. He also dealt with the MBTA in Dedham.

Griffin said he would team up with Cohasset's financial staff and talk to the employees in town about what they think needs to be done to improve services and solve problems, while honoring the structural relationship between the employee and department heads. He said he would create an environment where input is welcome.

"I want department heads to feel I can help make their job better and foster their professional development," Griffin said.

He said Selectmen set the direction. "It's my job with staff to get the job done," he said. "I have to come up with a plan to accomplish that."

Griffin said he would welcome interacting with individual members of the Board of Selectmen and would work through the chairman in setting meeting agendas. "I want you to feel you have access to me," he said to the entire board.

Sullivan asked how Griffin balances the fine line between advice, recommendation and conviction.

"You're not going to agree with me all the time," Griffin said. "That's OK" But, he said, keeping the lines of communication open at all times. would be a priority.

Griffin, who will commute from Plymouth, said while there were no impediments to taking the position, he would provide Bourne a two-month notice. "I always honor (agreements) with the communities I'm working for," he said. If picked for the post and until he comes on board, he said he would try to attend some government meetings. He said he would also ask interim Town Manager Michael Buckley, who is also the Finance Director, to provide five years of budget recap sheets.

Griffin said he liked the size of Cohasset and thinks with his management style, he can be successful here.

Selectman Fred Koed described Griffin as very professional and very well respected, with a lot of experience and a nice manner. "I would be very comfortable with him," Koed said.

Selectman Rob Spofford, who chaired the Town Manager Search Committee, said he received many unsolicited calls from other Town Managers praising Griffin. "He's a strong candidate," Spofford said. "What we see with Bill is what we get with him."

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he liked the 10-year financial plan and the fact Griffin would encourage employees to further their career goals.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she was very impressed with Griffin. "This is the first time I've listened to the (other) board members speak and agreed with everything they said," McMorris quipped.

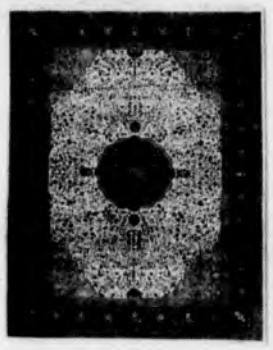
While she also praised James R. Merriam, the board's second choice, she liked the strength in Griffin's answers and how he said he would relate to town employees and residents.

In addition to Merriam, who is the former Wrentham Town Administrator, Robert T. Markel, the Town Administrator in Norfolk, was also in the running.

Spofford said the search committee received 86 résumés and eventually narrowed the field down to five and then to three.

Selectmen said they could not comment on salary range or length of Griffin's contract. Those issues will be hashed out during negotiations. Griffin's current salary in Bourne is about $107,000. Haddad's salary was roughly $110,000 when he resigned in May.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, Griffin said he is very pleased to have been selected.



"I was especially pleased that it was a unanimous vote of the board," he said. "Now we're working on terms of the agreement and I'm confident it will all work out.

"I'm looking forward to the opportunity of working in Cohasset."

Opposing groups are cordial during uncommon sewer rally

By Jim Hamilton
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

While the three Town Manager finalists were being interviewed at Town Hall Saturday morning, Cohasset Common provided the setting for the backers of connecting Cook Estate to the sewer versus those who are pushing for sewering existing residences first (SERF).

Proponents in favor of the town developing the Cook Estate were fortified with coffee, doughnut holes, chocolate chip cookies and juice. They mustered on the common where they were accompanied by a folk singer.

SERF folks turned out with an impressive array of signs which were set up along North Main Street. They also stood out and waved to passing cars.

Small-town issues, especially ones that involve the creation of senior housing and sewer capacity, can bring out the emotions in anyone, but these groups got along quite well. They chatted, enjoyed the music and a fine fall morning.

Avalon eyes buying sewer capacity from Hull

Pipes would run near Cook Estate

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Avalon developers are in the process of seeking a sewer connection from Hull. Vice President of Development Scott Dale said that town looks eager to find a mutually beneficial solution.

While talks seem to be going well, Avalon developers say nothing is set in stone, and are not ruling out the two other possible wastewater solutions for the site, including on-site treatment or a Cohasset municipal sewer connection.

Although the project has three possible wastewater solutions it is simultaneously pursuing, according to a letter sent by Dale to Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan — the fact that the town is supporting other multi-unit developments that are also seeking a connection has resulted in a continued effort by Avalon to pursue Cohasset sewer.

Slated to bring 200-units of rental housing off Route 3A (across from Good Sport), Avalon is a 40B project which would help the town meet the affordable housing threshold set by the state. Chapter 40B is the state law that allows developers to skirt local zoning regulations in exchange for providing 25 percent affordable housing. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 units would be rentals, all units — affordable and market rate — would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory. In other words, Avalon could help the town get out from under future 40B projects in one fell swoop by adding 200 units that would meet the 10 percent affordable housing benchmark set by the state.

Avalon was granted a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals last October, but due to wastewater disposal issues, the project has not yet broken ground. A short time after approval was granted, the Water Commission appealed the ZBA's decision over concerns wastewater from the apartments would negatively impact the Lily Pond Watershed, the major source of the town's drinking water.

One of the conditions in the permit states Avalon may connect its project into either the Cohasset municipal system or the Hull municipal system, subject only to the verification of capacity. In light of that condition, Avalon contacted the Sewer Commission, requesting written confirmation capacity exists at the town's Elm Street wastewater treatment plant. When developers did not receive a response, Avalon concluded the Sewer Commissioners "may not feel it is in their best interest to provide this verification. As a result, we are left with no other alternative than to take this matter up with the Board of Appeals as a request for a modification to our comprehensive permit as a local approval under Chapter 40B," Dale stated in his letter to Sullivan.

ZBA Chairman Woody Chittick said Avalon developers have not come before his board recently, and he has not had any indication they will be back before the board. However, he said if they are looking to modify the permit, "It's only a matter of time, I guess," before he'll be seeing them again. He said for a modification, there would need to be a public hearing, but only new information pertinent to the modification could be presented. The first time around, sewer capacity was not well discussed, as it was thought the development would have an on-site system, he said. Until Avalon actually files information, Chittick said he can only speculate on what the wastewater disposal future of the development will be.

Avalon developers say they are still committed to an on-site treatment system, and are "more confident than ever," it is a viable solution that would ultimately be approved by the Department of Environmental Protection.

"The principal advantage of this approach from our perspective is that we would not need any third party to proceed with this option, other than DEP approval," the letter states.

Avalon also said while the on-site treatment option is the most direct alternative, they recognize, although disagree with, the objections of the Water Commission, relative to the location of the potential treatment plant. As a result of the conflict of opinion, Avalon developers say it might be a waste of time and resources for both parties to further proceed in that direction.

At a meeting with many town boards Monday night, Dale said a connection to Hull's sewer treatment plant is looking like a good solution. He said if given permission to connect, Avalon would run pipes down Route 3A and take advantage of that town's 1.2 million gallons of excessive capacity. He said Hull has proposed a price equivalent to what a new treatment plant would cost, and said that town is also willing to take over the sewer line once installed. Dale said a Hull connection would bring sewer to the development at zero cost to Cohasset, and would also bring in a sewer line one-eighth of a mile from the Cook Estate.

Sewer question may not reach voters at Dec. 6 STM

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With Town Meeting only two weeks away, and many unresolved issues still on the table, the Advisory Committee held an all-encompassing meeting with members of the Board of Selectmen, Planning Board, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, and Town Counsel on Monday to help provide the answers necessary to allow it to make its final recommendations on the Town Meeting Warrant.

With Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee leading the charge, the boards took on the task of evaluating two of the most pressing issues Town Meeting will face: the sewering of Little Harbor and the Cook Estate, both of which could have reverberating consequences. However, in the opinion of Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, neither article may be appropriate for the Warrant.

Article seven asks the town to authorize the expansion of the Central Sewer District to include the Cook Estate property, located on Sohier Street. Since last year the town has been working with Northland Residential developers to build on the site. When soil tests deemed the site could not support an on-site wastewater system for the proposed development, alternate means of disposal were looked into, including connecting to municipal lines. At this stage, developers say sewer is the only viable option.

The article states its being passed is contingent on sufficient treatment capacity being reserved for the Little Harbor area of town, which has been looking for a sewer connection for many years.

However, DeRensis said in his opinion, allowing a development to be added to a sewer district is "not a Town Meeting issue." He said the issue is one for the Sewer Commission, and the article ignores the fact that the town is a defendant in a lawsuit regarding capacity. Cedarmere, another housing project comparable to the Cook Estate, is slated to be built off Beechwood Street, and is also looking for a sewer connection. When the project was denied by the Sewer Commission, it sued the town, stating the town cannot reserve capacity for future projects. "If (the article) passed and was rendered mandatory, it could subject the town to a variety of different lawsuits," he said.

"There are many ways Cook can be done, it's just not stated here," he said of the article.

DeRensis said article eight, which would ask the town to formalize its commitment to the sewering of Little Harbor by incorporating a sewer schedule to the Second Amended Final Judgment, is also not appropriate for the town to vote on. He said Town Meeting usually votes on issues such as appropriating money or purchasing property, and this article does not fall into either category.

The Second Amended Final Judgment was handed down by the state, which he believes is not Town Meeting business. In1979, the town violated the Federal Clean Waters Act, and in turn, the state gave the town a judgment, followed by a second amended judgment, which the town needed to comply with, or face fines of up to $10,000 per day. DeRensis said if the article was re-written to include a monetary value, it would be more appropriate.

Because there are currently four separate entities looking for sewer connections in town including Little Harbor, Cedarmere, the Cook Estate, and Avalon, a 200-unit 40B development slated for Route 3A, Selectman Ronnie McMorris asked whether expanding the framework of the Cook Estate article to encompass other developers would help the situation. Because there has been some dispute regarding which project was in line for a connection first, incorporating more than one project for sewer consideration would seem like a viable alternative.

However, DeRensis said it would take a change in state law to change sewer districts, which could have happened had the Sewer Commission left its Home Rule Petition on the Warrant. Currently none of the projects are in the Central Sewer District and are not eligible for a connection. However, the judgment from the state gives the town some flexibility to connect Little Harbor.

The Home Rule Petition would have allowed the commissioners to allow "checker-boarding" of districts, by giving them the authority to designate new sewer districts wherever it deemed they were necessary. The Home Rule Petition would have been first passed at Town Meeting, then by the Legislature. However, he said without that article, the town is left with existing law which can be challenged, and hooking up the three housing projects isn't an option.

"You can't do spot sewering," DeRensis said, and anyone abutting sewer lines can connect to the system the way the laws are now, meaning to run pipes down one street opens up the possibility of not only having a development connect, but all those who abut the line. "Legislatively we wanted to stop that because it multiplies the demands on the system," he said.

In DeRensis' opinion, he does not think Little Harbor must be tied in to the municipal sewer, and the judgment only requires the town to prepare a study of the pollution problems in the Little Harbor area followed by an action plan, which does not need to include sewer. He said the town has implemented that plan, and in his view, has met all the requirements necessary under the judgment.

"There is no requirement to sewer Little Harbor, only to continue with the measures already underway," DeRensis said.

However, although DeRensis says the town has met all the necessary requirements set by the state to comply with the judgment, he said the town currently has nothing in writing which confirms it is in compliance.

Because sewers and senior housing are such hot topics in town, a new committee will be appointed to help iron out some of the details, and accomplish as much as is possible throughout the next two weeks, leading up to Town Meeting. Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee has been appointed to chair the new committee, but new members have not been announced as of yet. For more information or meeting times, please contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Local birders see many of their feathered friends

Walk leader, Sally Avery of Cohasset, lines up her scope to share sightings with other birders during the walk sponsored by the Straits Pond Watershed Association on Saturday.

Red-breasted mergansers were sighted on Straits Pond during Saturday's walk.

Straits Pond group hosts walk

By Nancy Kramer
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Sally Avery, Cohasset birder, was the leader again for the Straits Pond Watershed Association's annual Fall bird walk around the Pond.

We saw a few Mute Swans, Canada Geese, American Black Ducks, Mallards, Hooded Mergansers, Red-breasted Mergansers, Buffleheads and Ruddy Ducks feeding and swimming. Land birds were scarce but we did see some Rock Doves, (recently renamed Rock Pigeon), Mourning Doves, Downy Woodpecker, Black-capped Chickadees, White-breasted Nuthatch, Carolina Wren, Northern Mockingbird, many European Starlings, House Finch, American Goldfinch, and many House Sparrows.

At Gunrock and Black Rock ocean areas, we used Sally's birding telescope to spot Red-throated Loon, Common Loon, Red-necked Grebe, Horned Grebe, Great Cormorant, Common Eider, White-winged Scoter, Black Scoter, Ring-billed Gulls, Herring Gulls, and Great Black-backed Gulls. Bufflehead and Mergansers were also spotted in ocean areas.

A tree sparrow house set in the pond encourages birds to stay and feed on midges.

EXCEPTIONAL SEASON

I hope that everyone had a wonderful Thanksgiving and that by the time you are reading this paper, the CHS Skippers are Champions of the Thanksgiving Day game. If for some remote chance they did not win, Cohasset still would like them to know how proud of them we all are as they have played an exceptional season!

As we all hopefully took some time yesterday to reflect on family and friends, I hope that each of us took the time to reflect on the year that went by since last Thanksgiving and really looks ahead at the year to come. Life changes so fast and so quick that we really need to focus more on family time and the quality of how we spend it.

I give thanks each day for the family and friends that we have and for health and happiness for us all. I hope that we can all slow the craziness of our lives down even if for a day and just enjoy each other instead of always rushing to work, sports, school and the many other things that eat up a day. Happy Holidays, Cohasset.

IT'S A GIRL!

Welcome to the world to Amanda Rose Oliver who was born on Oct. 30, 2004 to Billy and Katie Oliver.

She joined her big bother Bobby and big sister Abby where everyone is loving her to pieces. Congratulations to all of you as you enjoy your holidays with your beautiful new addition.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Happy Birthday wishes go out to "Princess Pooh Bear" more commonly known as Abbey Johnson. Abbey is turning four-years-old on Monday and all of her family and friends, especially her Mom, Dad, big brother Jake and new puppy Maxie want to wish her a very special birthday wish. Abbey, Happy Birthday and enjoy your day!

SNOWFLAKE FAIR AT BEECHWOOD

The Snowflake Fair will be held on Sat. Dec. 4 at the Beechwood Church on Church Street from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Beach glass candy will be available this year! Crafts by The Crafty Ladies as well as baked goods and attic treasures will be for sale. Lunch will be served.

COMMENDED SCHOLAR

Mr. Stephen Hughes, the principal, of Boston College High School, is pleased to announce that senior Andrew J. Flynn of Cohasset, has been named a Commended Scholar in the 2004 National Merit Scholarship program. Commended Students placed among the top 5 percent of more than 1.3 million students who entered the 2004 Merit Program by taking the 2002 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

Congratulations to you Andrew on this wonderful achievement.

CHILDREN'S BENEFIT

Please join your friends and neighbors for a "Ladies Night Out" to benefit the Italian Home for Children. This holiday dinner and fashion show is being held on Thursday, Dec. 2 at 6:30p.m. at Black Rock Country Club in Hingham with fashions by Ports & Co., Shoe Market and Shoe Market Kids. The Italian Home is a residential and day treatment facility for emotionally disturbed children of all races, nationalities and religions. For more information and tickets, please contact Bebe McCarron at (781) 383-1038.

UNICORN SINGERS

The Unicorn Singers, now in their 26th season of making music on the South Shore, are looking forward to entertaining you in December. They come from ten surrounding communities, meeting weekly at House of Prayer in Hingham. They invite you to join their enthusiastic audience and to discover what fun their style of interactive programming can be! They are all soloists, song leaders and choristers, and they would like to sing with you this Christmas! This event will be held on Friday, Dec. 10 at 8 p.m. at St. John's in Hingham and Sunday, Dec. 12 at 4 p.m. at First Parish in Cohasset.

Tickets are $15 at the door and $12 in advance at First Parish's office by calling (781) 383-1100.

VILLAGE FAIR

Cohasset's Village Fair is planned for Saturday, December 4th from 10-3 p.m. Join the Village churches and the non-profit Cohasset Appalachia Service Project as they work together to create this wonderful holiday marketplace on and around the Common. The Estate(ish) Sale (formerly Jumble Sale) is back at First Parish. Beautiful handmade decorations and ornaments, fresh holiday greens and great gift ideas abound at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, the Second Congregational Church, First Parish Unitarian Universalist, and Town Hall. The food alone is well worth a visit - baked goods and a snack shop, fancy French herb rubs, homemade clam chowder, and a Swedish Bake Shop all on the Common. Santa will be the guest of honor from 11 - 2 p.m., and the Rusty Skippers play their free Holiday Concert at 12 noon in the First Parish Meeting House. Proceeds from the fair support the charitable work of the churches and the ASP.

That is all for the week. Send me all of your news, information for events and anything else that can be shared with Cohasset no later than Tuesdays by noon.

WEDDINGS

Lubitz - Manchester Wedding

Jessica Wood Manchester, the daughter of Robert and Judith Alling Manchester of Shelburne, Vt. married Mr. Gerhard William Lubitz, son of Edward J. and Kyle H. Lubitz of Cohasset on Saturday, Oct. 23, 2004 at Shelburne United Methodist Church, Shelburne, Vermont. The Rev. Garry Campbell of New York officiated.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Coach Barn on Shelburne Farms.

Katherine Winder was Maid of Honor. Bridesmaids were Hannah Fairbank, Moira Feeney, Libby Foster, Mary Connell Grubb, Aoife Meehan and Stephanie Lubitz, the groom's sister.

Bradford Johnston and John E. Lubitz, brother of the groom, were Best Men. Groomsmen were Theodore Grannatt, Roman Iwachiw, Michael Lennon, Holt Manchester, brother of the bride, and Matthew Wheeler.

Attendants were Scott and Duncan Sewall, cousins of the bride.

The bride is a 1994 graduate of Milton Academy and graduated with honors in 1998 from Brown University. She received her law degree from Northwestern School of Law in 2003. She is a law associate at the Boston Law Office of Piper Rudnick.

The groom graduated from Noble and Greenough School in 1994 and from Williams College in 1998 where he was captain of the Williams Varsity Crew. He received his law degree from Northwestern School of Law in 2003. He is a law associate with the Boston law firm of Testa, Hurwitz and Thibeault, LLP.

Following a honeymoon in Hawaii, the couple resides in Boston.

LIBRARY CORNER

E-mail address

A new automated system for booking meeting rooms and museum passes has been implemented. Provide the library with your e-mail address so you the library can send you reminders via e-mail of the passes and meeting rooms you have booked. They will also notify you of your available holds and any items you have checked out that will be due soon.

Independent films

The film "The Rage in Placid Lake," a whimsical, satirical comedy featuring Placid Lake, an odd fish in a sea of mediocrity whose brilliant ideas get him into more trouble than success, will be shown in the Meeting Room on Dec. 9, at 7 p.m. Admission and refreshments are free.

'Celebrate with a book'

Donate a book to the library to celebrate a special event or a special person. Every donated book is identified with a bookplate that will honor the individual or group for whom the book is donated. The donation is tax deductible. Call the library 781 383-1348 for more details.

Artist exhibit

Jeanne L. Replogle's recent paintings will be on display in the Meeting Room through Dec. 31.

Children's room

Pizza and Books —Dec. 14, from 5:30 to 6 p.m. This month's books selection is "What Child is This?: A Christmas Story," by Caroline Cooney. Call now to reserve your space.

You may place a hold on this book by going to our web site at www.cohassetlibrary.org. This group is open to students ages 10 to 13. Mrs. Barbara Mullin will lead the discussion.

'Letters About Literature' — The Center for the Book in the Library of Congress in partnership with Target Stores presents "Letters About Literature" a national reading and writing promotion for children and young adults.

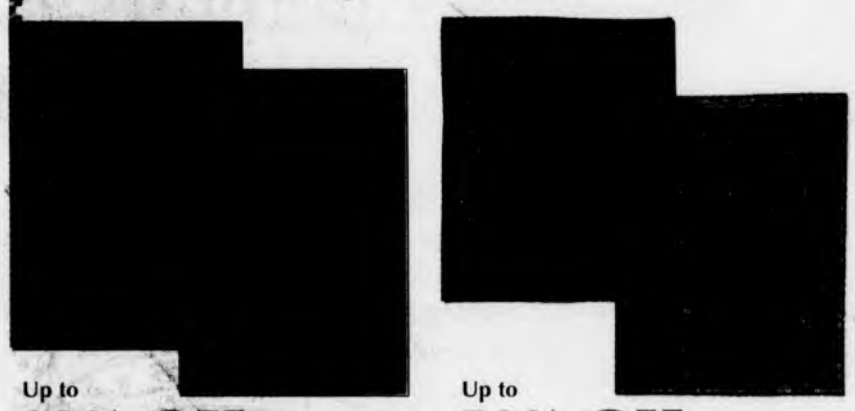
This contest asks you to think about a book that inspired you, and then asks you to write a personal letter to the author to explain how and why this book changed you or inspired you. Applications are available in the Young Adult Room and in the Children's Room. You can also go on-line at www.massbook.org or www.loc.gov/letters. If you have any call or come see Mrs. Moody.

Spanish canceled — Spanish Story Hour scheduled to take place on Saturday mornings in December and January has been canceled due to unforeseen circumstances. We hope to reschedule in January.

Mother-daughter team book signing

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Rt. 3A, Cohasset will host Duxbury natives Debbie and Brynne Blackington on Sun. Nov. 28 at 2 p.m. "Mama's Wish/Daughter's Wish" is the title of their collaboration and it is the story about the adoption of a Chinese daughter. The story written by both mother and daughter (Brynne, currently age 7, told her story to her mother when she was four) actually contains two stories.

The perspective of mother and daughter is presented from different ends of the book and then meeting in the middle. A unique feature of this book is the red thread that runs through the pages that translates (Translated by Xiaolan Z. Sommer) the story from English to Mandarin. The author writes, "A Chinese proverb states that there is an invisible red thread that connects those destined to meet, regardless of time, place or circumstance.



The thread may stretch or tangle, but never break." This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Love story

Buttonwood Books & Toys welcomes Nardi Reeder Campion, on Saturday. Dec. 4, at 1 p.m. She will read from and sign her latest book "Everyday Matters: A Love Story" (University of New England Press, $24.95) an anecdote filled memoir that typifies her wit, charm and candor. Campion is a graduate of Wellesley College (class of 1938). This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Reardon was very involved in the community he loved, serving as an alter boy at St. Anthony's Church, and playing football on the high school team. He was a standout athlete and was selected as co-captain of the Cohasset football team as well as co-captain of the Mayshore League team. He was also chosen to be a member of the Patriot Ledger Football All Scholastic team.

After graduating from Cohasset High School, Reardon went on to study at Boston College, where he majored in finance. He was a member of the Delta Sigma Pi fraternity and graduated in 1967 with a bachelor's degree in science. Shortly after, Reardon volunteered for service in the United States Marine Corps, and was commissioned a 2nd Lt. on Nov. 1, 1967. At that time, Reardon's brother Norbert was also serving as a Marine officer. Reardon was the third oldest of six children, and had three sisters and two brothers.

Reardon went on to attend flight school at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., and earned his wings as a naval aviator on April 25, 1969. That September, he received orders assigning him to HMM-364 — the Purple Foxes — a helicopter squadron located at Marble Mountain in Vietnam.

On Nov. 29, 1969, Reardon received the orders which would be his last. On a mission to evacuate combat casualties from a location in the Que San Mountains, 20 miles south of Da Nang, Reardon's CH-46 helicopter exploded in flight, killing Reardon and his entire flight crew.

After Reardon's death, his parents, Mary and Norbert, received a letter from Reardon's commanding officer, Lt. Col. C.R. Dunbaugh, informing them of the tragedy. He wrote, "Even though Dennis had been with this squadron for a short period of time, he quickly made friends and leaves us with lasting memories. He was extremely conscientious and devoted to his duties and immediately gained the respect of his fellow Marines. We will miss him a great deal, and hope that you find some comfort knowing this."

Vietnam took a heavy toll on the town, as eight men were killed, including Peter J. Albiani, Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Craig M. Simeone, and Reardon. Cohasset lost the same number of soldiers during World War II.

The worst eight months of Vietnam were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals. By the end of the year, Cohasset had sacrificed three men from the Cohasset High School class of 1966.

For his heroism, Reardon was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star medal with the Combat "V", the Air Medal with Numeral 7, the Purple Heart, and the Republic of Vietnam Armed Forces Honor medal. In addition, Cohasset residents dedicated the Dennis Joseph Reardon Memorial Square in his memory to ensure the boy who gave his life for his hometown and his country, receives eternal thanks.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on Dennis Reardon or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Campaign reaches out to the military

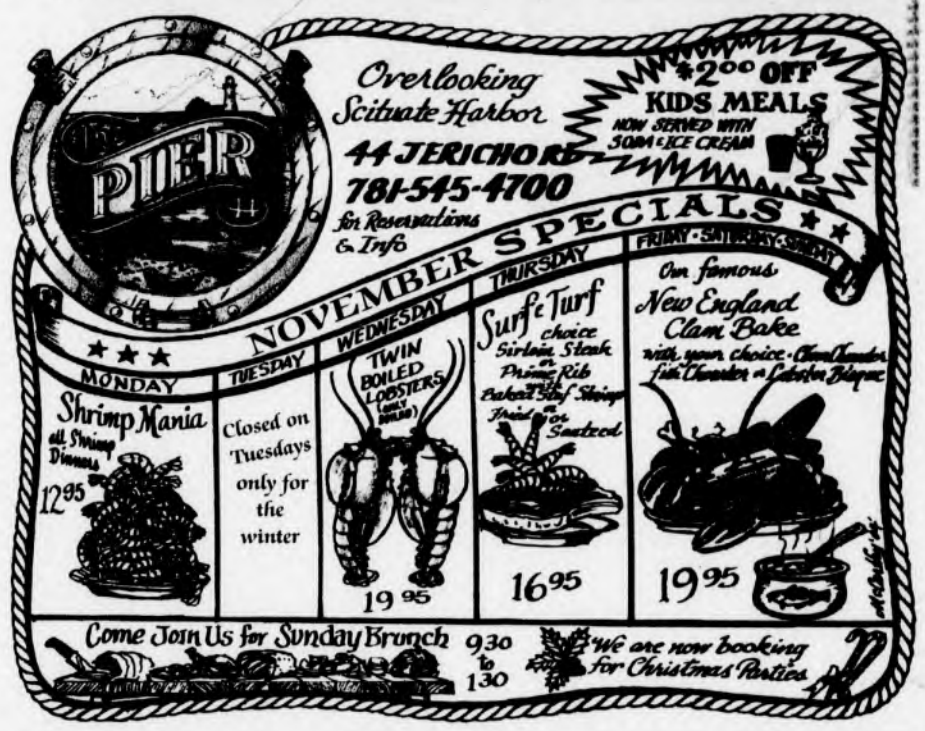
"The Family Group becomes and important link to support families during this difficult time," explained. Jill Price, of the National Guard.

The goal of the Gifts of Hope campaign this season is to raise awareness and any contributions possible to assist in these causes.

"Whether it's care packages for the troops, financial assistance to a family struggling while their loved one serves our country, or emotional support, we want to make sure these organizations have the resources they need," explained Mark Skala, CNC/South editor in chief. "They are sacrificing so much and we want to help make a small difference."



Skala said readers have been particularly generous in past years when the Gifts of Hope campaign focused on assisting programs that work with the homeless. He said South Shore residents showed amazing generosity and hopes stories over the next several weeks will encourage people to contribute.

Campaign is a show of support

GIFTS of HOPE
YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

The yellow ribbon bumper sticker with the words "Support Our Troops" has never had more meaning than right now.

With more and more of our family and friends serving our country in military operations across the globe — particularly in the Iraq war — we need to reach out to soldiers and their families to let them know we support their efforts.

The soldiers and their families are sacrificing more than most of us can fathom. There are jobs and lives put on hold while they fight for our country's interests.

That's why we at Community Newspaper Company on the South Shore have decided our Gifts of Hope campaign this year should promote efforts geared toward helping the military and their families.

The holiday season often exacerbates the challenges families face when they are missing a loved one. It is even harder to cope with financial issues when you add the demands of holiday gift giving and celebrating. Loneliness and depression can generally set in as someone thinks about their partner, dad, mom, daughter or son so far away.

The Pembroke Military Support Group, Care Packs in Weymouth, and the National Guard's Family Readiness Groups want to help ease some of those burdens. And we hope our generous readers will join in the efforts.

Care Packs is a South Weymouth neighborhood group that has come together to assemble, pack and ship care packages to U.S. troops in Iraq and Afghanistan. These caring people answered the call after they heard many of the troops were lacking basic supplies they needed on a daily basis — sunscreen, powdered sweet drinks, or just a letter letting them know we here at home care about them.

The group's goal is a simple one: boosting troop morale while they face deadly conditions.

The National Guard's Family Readiness Group and the Pembroke Military Support Group have similar goals. They all want to support in any way they can, both the soldiers and their families.

The efforts of these three groups are incredibly noble and worthwhile. Yet they still pale in comparison to what our troops and their families are doing.

Over the next several weeks we plan to share with our readers stories on how people are making a difference during this time of war. We hope our readers reach into their wallets and pocketbooks to provide some kind of donation, no matter how small or large, so we can send a strong message to our troops and their families. We need to let them now loud and clear that we support them not only with words and bumper stickers, but with deeds.

To donate a Gift of Hope, make your check out to one of the charities of your choice and mail to:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Recall is divisive; counterproductive

TO THE EDITOR:

Article 16 in the Warrant for the December 6 Town Meeting is potentially mischievous and divisive for sure, and will not help our town to move forward after a difficult year.

Cohasset has been well-served for more than 200 years by citizens willing to step up and take responsibility for its governance on both volunteer and elected boards. Who now will be willing to commit time, energy and money to run for an elected office if they can be voted out in six months?

All it will take is 100 people to file a petition for recall and 10 percent of registered voters or approximately 500 people to order a special election for the purpose of recall. Many of our town elections are closely contested. A candidate who receives 1,000 votes, but lost his/her bid for election, could easily round-up 500 votes and demand a recall six months later.

We have never had a problem that required a recall in this town in 200 years and there is no reason to change our election laws now. It will discourage public-spirited people from running.

Let us vote for indefinite postponement for Article 16 and move on with the town's business.

Sewer outflow hurts health of the harbor

TO THE EDITOR:

Paul Pattison is 75 years old, his brother Bob is 59 and has been lobstering for 48 of those years. Both men grew up in Cohasset, clamming in front of the Cohasset Lobster Shop owned by their grandfather and father.

The Lobster Shop is no longer at the head of the harbor. The clams aren't either. Last year, Paul seeded the Cove with 75 healthy clams. When he last checked, less than six were alive. The others were dead with their necks sticking up out of their holes.

Paul has been monitoring water quality in the Harbor's Cove Inlet for the last two years, ever since he was on his boat at the mooring and felt the boat rock as treated effluents were discharged from one of the three Harbor outflows located between the Atlantica and the Cohasset Harbor Inn. At that time, Paul had 10 lobster pots and was holding lobsters in a lobster car or water pen near his mooring in preparation for a family clambake. He decided to check on the lobsters. "I pulled out one nearly-dead lobster after another. They all looked as if they had velvet sweaters on," he says. He threw the lobsters back into the Harbor and hopes they were able to swim away. "I wasn't going to risk my family's health," he explains.

Bob Figueiredo has been lobstering out of Cohasset for 60 of his 75 years. His son Paul is the fourth generation to lobster Cohasset waters. Bob describes the environment in Cohasset Harbor as "a disgrace." His family used to have a [lobster] car for storing lobsters in the Harbor to hold them until they could get the most favorable market price. Today Bob says, "I wouldn't dare leave any lobsters in a car because of the sewer outflow." He adds in explanation that fresh water is "...the worst thing for lobsters. It kills them."

All three men I spoke with agree that the Harbor can't support sewering another development and must be cleaned up first. Paul Pattison points out that eelgrass is no longer prevalent in the Harbor and that the rocks surrounding the inner Cove are no longer covered with seaweed—as they should be if the water quality is healthy enough to support clams, lobsters, smelt and other marine life.

Cohasset is a coastal community and a lot of its appeal is dependent on the health of his harbor. Before we think of allotting new, uncommitted space to our sewer system, we owe it to our fishing community and ourselves to correct the quality and possibly the location of the water being discharged from the sewer treatment plant.

Horrified by scheme detailed in news story

TO THE EDITOR:

Concerning the latest "scheme of the month" from a couple of the Selectmen as outlined in the "Budget Cushion" Mariner article of Nov. 19, I can best describe my reaction as astonishment that any knowledgeable person would think that such a scheme would work, let alone be in the slightest best interests of the Town or acceptable to the vast majority of the voter residents.

Even if anyone wanted to take Cohasset in this high-growth direction of 400 or more, probably a lot more, new housing units becoming available all at the same time, the budget crises is now; yet the overstated real estate taxes, sewer and other fees from such massive growth would not flow to the Town for another 2-3 years when the construction of these housing developments are finished and occupancy begins.

To infer that such housing and population growth would not be costly on our infrastructure, services and, especially, our schools with an abrupt jump in enrollment, is sheer fantasy and a large disservice to our taxpayers. I can envision repeated overrides in the million-dollar range! It would be useful to see the back of the envelope on which the proponents did their calculations, if any.

Its also convenient for the proponents, per usual misstatement, to continue to ignore that there is no capacity at the Central Sewer Treatment Plant to give to all these private developers and a costly expansion to the Treatment Plant would need to be immediately permitted, funded and constructed to be ready when the 400-plus housing units are occupied. Also add in the ~ $3.6 million per year($10,000/day) in fines that the State/DEP probably would levy on the Town for its arrogant, continued non-compliance with the outstanding Superior Court Order to sewer the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue watershed area to cease the fecal coliform pollution of Little Harbor and our coastal waters.

This latest, desperate scheme is Dead on Arrival! The best way for those few Selectmen who are proposing this folly to address the out-of-control-spending and budget crises in the Town would be to personally get out of the real estate development business that currently takes up much of their time and get back to their elected jobs and tasks of managing the Town and controlling the excessive, out-of-budget spending that's become a way of life in Town Government because it appears that no authority is saying "NO"!

Playground program sponsors are thanked

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Recreation Commissioners would like to extend its most sincere gratitude to our 2004 Playground Program sponsors.

Responding to the commissioner's letter of last April, were 17 local business and civic organizations that registered for one of three levels of sponsorship for our summertime, seven-week day camp-type program for children ages 3.5 to 12 years.

Levels of sponsorship were $500, $200 or $100 which resulted in logo and listings of each business/organization on both the children's and staff's program T-shirts, as well as notation in our summer brochure.

In our effort to become 100 percent financially self-supporting, while affording the continuation of top quality services, the commissioners wish to thank and recognize the following local supporters:

Shaw's Supermarket, Kristine A. Grazioso, D.M.D., Coldwell Banker, Anderson Fuel, Bernard's, Sunrise Assisted Living, Cohasset Collision Center, South Shore Music Circus, Pizza Box, Rockland Trust, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Stop & Shop Supermarket, Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars, Hypertone Personal Fitness Training, The Good Sport, Inc., the American Legion Post #118 and the Cohasset Police Association.

Via their sponsorship, each sponsor has demonstrated their concern for and interest in our children and community; hence, having benefited all residents and taxpayers.

During late winter of 2005, the commission will again send letters to local business and civic organizations regarding this unique advertising/sponsorship opportunity. You may also call the Cohasset Recreation Department office anytime at 781-383-4109, should you be interested in sponsorships.

Supports Cook project

TO THE EDITOR:

I am a friend of the "Cook Project" because I think there is a great need for a "senior community" in Cohasset.

Being a longtime resident of Cohasset, I realize the importance and need for "community living," as well as the services this project would allow.

It is time the Selectmen and Sewer Commission resolve the wastewater problems the town is now facing and is affecting so many people.

A town of this affluence should be able to provide a "senior community" of which all can be proud.

On baseball and orchestras: Musicians as team players

H•S• OVATION

NINA WELLFORD

An occasional series on life behind the scenes of a symphony orchestra, written by supporters of the Hingham Symphony Orchestra.

When conductor Jin Kim brings nine musicians into an elementary school to present a fun, interactive musical program in the HSO KidsConcerts, he often makes the comparison between an orchestra and a baseball team. The young students easily grasp the similarities: each player learns to play one position really well, and each position is vital to the performance of the team. In order to play well, the players must practice, alone and together. They are guided by a coach, whose primary role is to elicit the best from each individual, and to bring the team together. The hours of practice lead to games that are played for fans who have more fun when their team plays well.

With the memory of the World Series Champion Red Sox team fresh in our mind, this comparison seems particularly apt as a way to get to know the Hingham Symphony Orchestra. The HSO is a team of individual players, guided by Conductor Jin Kim, who come together after years of practice to form a premier professional orchestra that performs for fans across the South Shore region. Like the Red Sox, this team is composed of individuals – each with a story and character. And like with the Red Sox, anyone who attends more than one HSO concert begins to identify with the orchestra, follow its progress, share the fun with other fans, and care enough to support it.

An HSO concert always thrills audiences with superb performances of great classical music, in intimate venues that pull the audience into the orchestra. Who are the musicians whose efforts result in such spectacular play? Meet four of 70 HSO musicians, for a glimpse into the stories that abound with this team.

• Kai Yun Lu, a native of Taiwan, came to Boston to earn her undergraduate degree in at New England Conservatory and her artist diploma at Boston University. She joined the HSO in 1997, serving as Principal Clarinet and playing beside Muriel Bledsoe, who had been a member of the earlier version of the HSO, the all-volunteer Hingham Civic. When Muriel lost her battle with cancer, HSO named the principal clarinet chair in her honor. Kai-Yun has held that position for the seven years since then. She is an active freelance musician in the Boston area, performing regularly with the Boston Pops and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, among many others.

The next "home games" will be the "Classical Celebrations" featuring music by Beethoven, Bach, Massenet and Bizet on Dec. 4 at 7:30 p.m. in Old Ship Meeting House in Hingham, and Dec. 5 at 4 p.m. in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset.

• Jeb Kulevich joined the HSO eight years ago as a talented high school drummer from Scituate. His involvement in the HSO and various regional youth orchestras led him to decide to major in percussion performance at Boston University's School for the Arts. Last spring, Jeb was accepted into the Masters programs at both Julliard and Boston's New England Conservatory. He chose to attend NEC, to gain more experience as an orchestra musician. This fall, he auditioned and won the position of Principal Percussion with the HSO. We join his proud parents in celebrating the growth of this genuine young man into an accomplished young leader in the orchestra.

• Polina Sedukh came to the Longy School of Music in Cambridge from Russia to study violin with Malcolm Lowe and others. She played with the HSO for three years, serving as assistant concertmaster last season, and performing as a featured soloist in the chamber concert. Early last Spring, she entered the challenging audition process for a coveted seat in the violin section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On the day of the HSO's performance at Jordan Hall, she learned that she had been accepted as the only violinist chosen to fill one of four open positions. Polina now performs full-time with the BSO.

I spoke with Polina recently as she was warming up before the BSO's performance of the new symphony by Elliott Carter. She described the demands of practicing hours each day to learn new repertoire, and the need to manage the physical and emotional stress of performing full-time at such a level. Yet her excitement and appreciation were palpable, and those of us in the audience with connections to Hingham Symphony were thrilled to watch her on stage in Symphony Hall.

• Andrew Price also joined the HSO eight years ago, as Principal Oboe. A native of New England, he first decided he wanted to play oboe when he watched Leonard Bernstein's Young People's Orchestra concerts on TV as a child, and was captivated by oboist Ralph Gomberg. He subsequently studied with Mr. Gomberg, and now teaches music to middle schoolers in Newburyport. During the summer, he teaches at the Tanglewood Institute. Andrew is a highly sought-after freelance oboist, subbing regularly with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

(Andrew Price was the featured solo musician in the HSO's new series, Classical Uncorked, held Saturday, Nov. 20 at 8:30 p.m. in the intimate wine bar at Cohasset's Red Lion Inn).

Jin Kim, "coach" of this exciting team, will be featured in a future column. His vision, expertise and commitment have created a dynamic, unified orchestra out of the 70 players who bring 70 unique life experiences to form this one particular group. His coaching has contributed to developing the careers of the best young musicians; many members of past HSO groups have joined major orchestras world-wide, including five HSO musicians who now perform with the BSO.

The live concert experience has its own sights and sounds, just like a ball game at Fenway Park. The next "home games" will be the "Classical Celebrations" featuring music by Beethoven, Bach, Massenet and Bizet on Dec. 4 at 7:30 p.m. in Old Ship Meeting House in Hingham, and Dec. 5 at 4 p.m. in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Or take in batting practice at Classical Uncorked. Get to know the HSO — we are your team, and hope that you will become a fan.

Nina Wellford is Managing Director of the Hingham Symphony Orchestra.

That first Thanksgiving

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where another city has laid claim to the first Thanksgiving some 56 years before our Pilgrims sat down to slice the turkey and spill cranberry sauce on their tunics.

The culprit is the city of St. Augustine, Fla., although why someone who just landed in St. Augustine would have anything to be thankful for is beyond me unless they were only passing through on the way to Miami and South Beach.

The claim is put forth by Michael Gannon, a retired history professor at the University of Florida, who reported that 800 Spanish settlers celebrated a Mass of Thanksgiving; and even invited the Indians to share their grits and crawdads, back in 1565.

"There aren't any competing claims. It's a matter of fact," he told Ledger reporter Lane Lambert.

Oh, yeah. It seems like every year at this time some imposter shows up claiming the first Thanksgiving. Just the other year, El Paso, Texas, announced that Spanish conquistadors first gave thanks there in 1598. Only they didn't invite the Indians. They whacked them first.

In order to settle this annual dispute once and for all, I called my crack investigative team off the Kennedy assassination --- they're still in the grassy knoll phase --- and put them to work solving the thorniest American mystery since the disappearance of Whitey Bulger.

The answer that they came up with will amaze you.

The first Thanksgiving was celebrated thousands of years ago when Asian people, who eventually became the Indians, gave thanks to the Great Spirit for guiding them from Siberia to Alaska before the land bridge between the two sank under water.

"Let us have a feast to celebrate," said Ogh, son of Fire.

"We shall have roast mammoth and cranberry sauce," said Egh, son of the Wind.

"Good. I am tired of mammoth chow mein," said Ugh, son of a (expletive deleted).

(I am reluctant to use the actual word, which rhymes with "switch," for fear of getting yelled at by Mike Powell and the FCC. Moral values were far less demanding in Ugh's day.)

The description of the real first Thanksgiving, which took place in an igloo near Nome, Alaska, was contained in a letter carved in stone that was to have been sent back to the old folks in Siberia only the rising water shut off contact between the continents.

It eventually wound up as a stepping stone at a bar in Anchorage where it was discovered by a member of my crack investigating team while he was being thrown bodily from the establishment for ordering a less than six-to-one martini.

The team is still working on a translation of the stone, a difficult task after generations of likkered-up Alaskans have been tromping on it. But they're still trying. They're up to the part where Egh says:

"Let's invite the Indians."

"We are the Indians," said Ogh.

"Oh," said Egh.

Stay tuned. Maybe the Indians will invite us after all.

Dune plan will restore beauty of beach

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

I have wonderful news for readers who love our seacoast's natural beauty. Last week the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) and Coastal Zone Management (CZM) conferenced with representatives of Cohasset's Sandy Beach Association (SBA) and the Town of Cohasset. The cause of the meeting was the removal of the dune that formerly separated the parking lot at Sandy Beach from Atlantic Avenue. When the Town removed that dune earlier this year, several environmental regulations were violated. DEP offered the Town two options: restore the dune or face a substantial fine.

DEP stated at the conference they really don't want to fine Cohasset. Instead, DEP supported an agreement whereby no wrongdoing would be mentioned. They offered free technical expertise in the formulation of a beach management plan that will benefit all parties. Here are some of the elements of the plan now in the works:

They offered free technical expertise in the formulation of a beach management plan that will benefit all parties.

• Restore the dune along Atlantic Avenue in a way that does not obstruct sight lines of motorists exiting the parking lot. Plant American dune grass to anchor the sand and help trap sand blowing off the beach. If in the future the dune grows to the point of obstructing sight lines, the agreement will precisely define how much of it may be removed.

• Promote the formation of a primary dune at the upper extremity of the beach, where now a row of huge boulders separates the beach from the parking lot. Build several paths through the dune so you don't need to walk far to get to the beach. Plant the dune with dune grass. Allow other native plant species to thrive, helping anchor the dune and trapping windblown sand. Protect the dune with sand fencing and informational signage.

This environmental restoration work will have numerous benefits:

• The beautiful dune that was removed will be restored, enhancing both Atlantic Avenue and the parking lot.

• The row of huge boulders will gradually disappear, replaced by a beautiful, sinuous, undulating, graceful vegetated sand dune. Sandy Beach will begin to resemble a miniature Cape Cod National Seashore. A gem in Cohasset's crown. I can't believe any beachgoers prefer seeing asphalt, cars, and trashcans to a natural dune.

• Very little beach area will be lost to the dune. More sand will stay on the beach.

• The primary and secondary dunes will trap sand that now blows off the beach and onto the parking lot, onto Atlantic Avenue, and into Little Harbor. The Town will save money on maintenance.

I feel great gratitude toward the folks at DEP, CZM, SBA, and the Town who are being so cooperative in helping Sandy Beach evolve into a place of beauty all can enjoy. Thank you.

Why Cook Estate project is a good one for Cohasset

COMMENTARY

MARGY CHARLES

Some speak about the Cook Estate without the understanding that it came to the town through the efforts of the Senior Housing Committee and the Selectmen. Seven proposals were made according to the guidelines set forth by the town. Northland won the bid. They have spent more than $50,000 to find a solution to the site treatment plant similar to what 100 Pond Street had, but the stumbling block is the clean waste water.

I have read the letters to the editor in last week's Mariner.

Mr. Higginson's letter clarifies capacity and "BOD" but how much "BOD" would come from the Cook?

Gary Vanderweil uses the term, "empty nesters" to define seniors. There are many seniors who do not live in mansions but they are having a hard time managing their ordinary homes (nests). Most seniors did not earn six-figure salaries like so many of the young new residents earn today. They are overwhelmed with taxes and maintenance. They gave to the town and they pay for the schools.

Do you want all these seniors to go elsewhere? Hingham has four developments for people over 55. Many have already gone to Duxbury Village and Doctor's Hill in Scituate. Certainly young couples will move into their homes but they will anyway, no matter where the seniors go!

Some letters refer to Northland as if they were an enemy. "Developer" seems to be a dirty word but most of us already live in homes "developed" by some one in the past. We chose this developer, Northland, over six other bidders.

I understand about the consent decree for Little Harbor. However, the way Gary Vanderweil proposes sewer projects, it seems as if the whole town would have to be taken care of now before this unique opportunity before us could be accepted.

Growth and Development wants managed growth…well this is it. There is manifest need for "affordable" housing and although 30 percent of Cook is designated "affordable," the fact that it will have a total of 37 rental units makes it most attractive to many who might not qualify for "affordable."

The growth of our town must include "affordable." The Department of Housing and Community Development needs towns to step up to the plate. There is a severe shortage of affordable housing. Are we so prestigious that the Planning Board can place that requirement on the backburner? Why can't the Selectmen and the Sewer Commission and the Planning Board make a "Plan"?

Some said in their letters-to-the-editor that the seniors have been manipulated. That is just not so. SERF (Sewering Existing Residences First) is so opposed to the Cook Project but we know there will be capacity for the state-mandated area and it will need an override at some time in the future that will pay for the bond to dig up the streets and put down the pipes.

Those of us who want the Cook property developed seem to be pitted in opposition to Litter Harbor residents. Not so! Because of the time frame in dealing with the Trustees of the Cook Estate, we are asking for clean effluent to go the Central Plant. We know that when the town needs a bond for Little Harbor they will get it, but right now the town has to bring down the school debt. Little Harbor has to wait. Are there many failed systems now? Of course, no one wants to spend money on litigation.

I urge all seniors to support this project including all the seniors who live on Little Harbor.

Clueless over fiscal matters

TO THE EDITOR:

Being a fair-minded person, I went to see the presentation of "Outfoxed" put on by the Democratic Town Committee last Friday. This was a feel good performance to help them recover from Black Tuesday.

As expected I found the film to be extremely one sided in their attempt to trash the Fox News Network whose motto is Fair and Balanced. This network has grown in popularity in the last few years in reaction to the extreme left wing bias displayed on the alphabet stations and CNN.

The room was full of chuckles throughout the evening and it bothered me when they were directed toward the treatment of military matters. I admit that I was also offended by the Michael Moore movie that the Dems presented a few weeks ago. In this time of international terrorism I don't consider it is supporting our troops by promoting distortions meant to be divisive and tear us apart. The maximizing of any negative images of our side, discounting any of the positives we accomplished and minimizing or ignoring the atrocities of the terrorists does not make life easier for our soldiers. Maybe I am more sensitive since my brother while in the Navy during Vietnam was treated as one of the baby killers that their hero John Kerry depicted during his infamous rise to fame.

After the film, one of their rising stars, a former selectman and current columnist in another newspaper talked to me. I was rather surprised when he asked me if I could tell him what made up the $500K deficit in the school budget.

This is a man who was one of our town leaders during the FY'05 budget process. The same man who has written lengthy articles disparaging those of us who for years have been cautioning about fiscal irresponsibility and also offering viable alternatives to runaway spending. He was a member of those infamous strategy sessions about what dollar amount to choose to 'sell' the overrides to the taxpayers. They picked only an additional $400K for the schools at the ATM and we have since discovered they were low by at least $500K in their last sales pitch. This is a man who praised the leadership of the last school committee. And yet he and they are basically clueless about this huge deficit after their numbers had so carefully been crunched.

He has described those that have asked questions, requested transparency and offered solutions as "foaming at the mouth about the budget and town management". In his opinion most of the budget is out of our control like everything else in town.

I wish that I could say that this former selectman wasn't typical of our officials in town of the last few years, but I can't. How can we constantly have cost overruns in legal, and overtime? Who kept track of the last Town Manager's hours and how did he accrue so much owed timed before he left with his big payoff that we could ill afford? Who authorized giving almost $50K of school funds to the top three union school administrators on their leaving when that money was not in the budget? Was some of this money actually for owed accrued time who has those records? Why have work orders for school maintenance taken up to 6 months to reach the DPW? Do any of our officials know how many vehicles each department has, how they are used and their current condition?

There are too many questions, not enough answers and too great a willingness to relinquish matters to highly paid professionals all of whom don't necessarily have the good of the town as their main goal.

Are there solutions to our financial woes? Sure, but it is not in the fairy tale of the pot of money we will get by bringing in three big developments Cook, Avalon and Cedarmere —on the sewer.

Put cap on school budget increases

TO THE EDITOR:

The budget comparison for FY04 versus FY05 that Superintendent Walsh wrote and the Mariner published (on Nov. 12) is misleading.

Supt. Walsh makes it look like the School District only received a 2.67 percent increase for FY05($11.631M to $11.942M).

If you refer to the March 27, 2004, Town Warrant you will see that the FY04 budget was $11.267M and the FY05 Budget was approved at $12.003M or a 6.5 percent increase. The basic difference was overspending of the budget and resultant supplementals with more on the docket for the upcoming Special Town Meeting.

The only way to control the School District budget is to place a cap on it and make the Superintendent, School Committee, Advisory Committee and Selectmen live within that budget. One opportunity for major savings is to do a space utilization survey of the schools and close-off unnecessary space until increased enrollment justifies its usage. I estimate that the schools are operating with about 60 percent excess square footage. "Nature abhors a vacuum," so, the staff and faculty have "spread-out" to fill the vacuum.

I would also like to ask that the Mariner and Superintendent Walsh print a five-year comparison of enrollment growth to full and part-time hiring growth.

About eight years ago, Dick Avery, as Chairman of the Advisory Committee, suggested that in our type of municipality; we cannot avoid some proposition 2-1/2 overrides, but we ought to cap annual budget increases at 4.5 percent. His recommendation remains valid today. If each new student costs $7,000 to 13,000; perhaps that should serve as a yardstick for School District budget increases in excess of 2-1/2 percent.

I would also like to see Selectmen who blindly supported the actions of the Town Manager, Police Chief and School Superintendent/School Committee held accountable for their poor judgement.

Get budget under control

TO THE EDITOR:

As one of Cohasset's senior citizens, I am concerned with the shortsightedness of proposals to connect new real estate development projects to our sewer resources.

Under the pretext of serving Cohasset's senior citizens and low-income families, various interest groups are collaborating with Town officials to divide up the sewer resources among future property owners and renters. This is leaving the homeowners, who have paid taxes to build sewers, out in the cold.

To tell us that developments, which would serve only a small portion of seniors, will benefit all seniors is a myth. The real motivation for the new developments is a means to execute lucrative real estate transactions for developers and their backers.

Think about the future and address the problems we have without adding new unknowns. Think about all the promises made and were unable to be kept.

Although I believe the Cohasset Elder Affairs advocates are in earnest and have our best interests at heart, they are being misled.

Lets put more effort into getting the budget under control, instead of adding to it, so we can stay in our homes.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen
beaconhill@aol.com
Nov. 19, 2004

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Hingham Journal. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives and senators' votes on two roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

MEDICAID NURSING HOME ELIGIBILITY (H 4850)

House 147-8, Senate 37-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a budget provision prohibiting the state from establishing more restrictive clinical criteria for nursing home eligibility under Medicaid without first submitting a detailed, multi-year plan to the Legislature. The provision prohibits the criteria from being any more restrictive than the criteria in effect on January 1, 2004 and prohibits any new criteria from affecting current nursing home residents. Current regulations mandate that a person must need assistance with at least three activities of daily living in order to qualify for nursing home admission under Medicaid. Override supporters argued that it is important to maintain this standard and not allow the Romney administration to unilaterally increase the number of daily activities to four or more without explaining the plan and consequences to the Legislature. They noted that the Legislature would then have the option to allow the plan to go into effect or consider legislation to modify or stop it. They said that changing the criteria would bar many needy seniors and others from nursing home admission under Medicaid. In his veto message, the governor said the prohibition would improperly impose legislative controls on what should be executive branch decisions. (A "Yea" vote is for prohibiting more restrictive standards without submission of a detailed, multi-year plan to the Legislature. A "Nay" vote is against the prohibition).

MEDICAID AND SENIORS' HOMES (H 4850)

House 153-0, 153-0 and 154-0, Senate 37-1, 35-1, 36-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of three budget provisions repealing a 2003 law, approved by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Romney, expanding the state's power to collect the costs of medical and nursing home care from the estates of state-subsidized Medicaid recipients following their death. The repeal would put back into place the prior law allowing the state to only collect from assets that were owned solely in the recipient's name and allowed couples to protect their assets simply by owning the property jointly or with a family member. These assets include homes, bank accounts, insurance and other personal property. The controversial 2003 law allowed the state to expand its collections to assets owned jointly with others including spouses and family members. Under the expanded powers, the state would place a lien on the home or other asset and collect the deceased recipient's share of it when the asset is sold. The expanded recovery powers were actually in effect from July 2003 until March 2004 when the Legislature delayed the effective date until July 1, 2004. The state had already collected money and placed liens on properties but then developed plans to remove the liens and refund the money while the delay was in effect. Override supporters said it was unfair to have changed these rules in the middle of the game and argued that the expanded recovery would effectively destroy the estate planning of many senior citizens and have a devastating effect on the surviving spouses of deceased recipients. They argued that a state lien on a home would make it difficult for the surviving spouse to take out a home equity loan for improvements or living expenses. They also argued that if the surviving spouse sold the home, he or she would forfeit a substantial sum of money to the state. Override opponents said the expanded powers would ensure that all Medicaid recipients are on an equal playing field rather than favoring those who do estate planning to avoid allowing state recovery. They noted that the state must rein in skyrocketing Medicaid costs and has a right and obligation to recover the deceased recipients' share of assets before taxpayer dollars are spent. They argued that the state, under the expanded powers, would not have forced a surviving spouse to sell the home and pointed out that the state had indicated it was willing to waive or subordinate its claim if there is an undue hardship including the need for the spouse to take out a home equity loan. (A "Yea" vote is for repealing the expanded recovery powers. A "Nay" vote is against repealing the expanded recovery powers).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

RESTRICTIONS ON MOTORIZED SCOOTERS (H 5125)- Acting Gov. Kerry Healey signed into law legislation requiring drivers of gas and electric-powered motorized scooters to be at least 16 years old and possess a valid driver's license or learner's permit. Other provisions require drivers to wear a helmet, limit the vehicle's speed to 20 miles per hour, bar their operation after dark and mandate that they be equipped with directional "blinkers" in the back. "This new law treats motor-powered scooters essentially like motor vehicles, with the expectation that riders will be licensed and obey the rules of the road," said Healey. She also noted that restricting these devices "goes a long way in protecting our children from life-threatening injuries." Sponsors of the new law have long argued that these low-riding vehicles are unregulated by the state and are being misused by young people without any driving experience. The bill includes an emergency preamble that makes the law effective immediately instead of in 90 days.

HEALTH NOTES

Buck stops at Selectmen's desk

Some thoughts on Cook wastewater

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As chairman of the Board of Health, I've tried to keep abreast of the sense of the town on general health and also, since so much time is spent on it, wastewater disposal. From what I've heard around town, everybody is generally in favor of the principles of elder housing, both affordable and market rate, both of which are addressed at the Cook property.

The Warrant article at the Town Meeting was intended by its authors to provide another opportunity for the town to express its consensus about the creation of elder housing within the Town. Nothing more. It is an instruction to the Selectmen to work out the details. Within this context, there are, at this time, precious few alternatives known to the Town to make this happen: Almost all off site solutions have become unusable for one reason or another.

The option which made the most sense from a wastewater standpoint was to consider the use of Paul Pratt Library property for treated and sanitized effluent. Unfortunately, the library property is in a Town designated wellfield at Ellms Meadow, created long before the Town became as prosperous in terms of water supply as is now the case.

With 9/11 and other factors which caused a broad consensus about the need to address emergency preparedness, two of the Town's original wellfields were identified and their watersheds designated as Zone II water resource districts. Subsequently, considerable resources were spent in developing these well fields as an emergency water supply. Changing the status of these wellfields would mean that the Town would be throwing away the money spent on them, and they would no longer be available for emergency purposes.

Another option about which there is much controversy is to provide for a connection to the central sewer plant. There are many facets to the adornments which have been hung on the arguments both pro and con about this issue. Probably the most telling seems to be as strongly held, and by roughly as many people as those who want elder housing, is that granting sewer capacity to unbuilt homes before it is given to existing homes which have wastewater problems is about as popular as bringing a skunk to church.

For those of us who don't have direct responsibility for the decisions about these issues (which is almost everyone in Town), the solution is simple. Leave it to the Selectmen. It's their responsibility. But you may want a few observations on the alternatives from a Board of Health standpoint which is essentially technically and economically based rather than based on planning or political considerations.

• The effect of connecting to the central plant is, because of the technology being used, difficult to fully characterize from a capacity standpoint. It was the only system of its type built in this country when it was begun, and although it shows much promise, its long-term performance is not fully known. Permitting for the plant will allow it to grow to a size that would accept effluent from anything now planned for it, including Little Harbor with some surplus. Only time will permit a full understanding of the actual capacity of the system and its full capabilities. At best, there is a finite limit to the capacity of the Central Plant, and it is prudent to guard this limited capacity for those who need it most.

• The Library site is known to both the Town and the DEP. It has the type of soils for effluent disposal not available on the Cook parcel. The DEP has unofficially confirmed that if all requirements were met, a Groundwater Discharge Permit for treated effluent would be approved in 6 months to a year based on a hydrogeological study undertaken by the developer. A favorable outcome for such a study is not certain; nevertheless, it represents one option for wastewater disposal.

But in the last analysis, the Selectmen must carry out the will of the Town. They have to find a way. However, it should be remembered that the Selectmen will be dealing with hard-headed experienced businessmen who plan to build a $40 million project. And so they can't give away the store, and it may take some money to secure a positive outcome.

The truth is that the many acres of Deer Hill have lousy soil. Accordingly, big dreams for many units of housing are not possible on site without off-site wastewater disposal. This represents a loss of value for the Town, the developer, and eventually, the Cook Estate. It means that the estate may not be worth as much as the deal was negotiated for in the first place.

...granting sewer capacity to unbuilt homes before it is given to existing homes which have wastewater problems is about as popular as bringing a skunk to church.

So it's also up to the Selectmen to see that the Town profits from this deal. Some proclaim the fiction that seniors leaving their homes would invite the entrance of many new school children into the system. When these seniors bought their houses they had kids, or soon got them, and paid for the classrooms with their taxes many years ago. And sewers are not necessarily the best solution for much of the Town.

The mantra which many carry when they move to Cohasset is that eventually everyone will need to get on a sewer. For about half the population of Cohasset this will never happen. And it shouldn't. There are many cheaper and equally environmentally sound alternatives to sewers available to many who are not on a sewer now. The Board of Health is seeking an equitable solution for these citizens by a plan which we have been working on for about four years. A little known provision of the Townwide Wastewater Management Plan, approved in 2000 by the Town and subsequently by the State, for septic system upgrades and repairs is Septicredits. Although never used by the Town, the regulation is on the books. It provides for payment to the owner of a piece of property to use that property for onsite wastewater disposal of effluent from another site. The regulation provides a fee structure for such use to be paid to the landowner by the user. This plan represents an attempt to provide equitable treatment for every property owner regardless of whether they use sewers or any other wastewater disposal system.

The good news is that the Boards responsible for providing wastewater treatment to citizens in town are approaching unanimity about what needs to be done about wastewater. Next comes the hard work of finding the least expensive solutions for the various users depending on the circumstances of each.

But much work needs still to be done. We need to obtain a resolution regarding the geological and hydrographic conditions of the Library site to determine if it meets the State's reuse standards, because someday it should be used for wastewater disposal. Unfortunately, this work will not help the current Cook decisions. In addition, perhaps, the question should be asked 'are the well fields 'for emergency purposes' more important than providing for seniors who have, and are still giving the Town so much?'

Health-care tops list of citizen concerns

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

Memos about the construction of the Big Dig started leaking faster than the notorious tunnel itself last week.

The public relations problem grew so bad that the Herald published tongue-in-cheek emergency escape instructions for I-93. Turnpike Chairman Matthew Amorello insisted the tunnel was safe; but the public has endured two decades of surprise revisions in the price tag and completion date and assurances that the project would be a technical marvel. Amorello and his agency have reached the nadir of public communications: it doesn't matter if they're telling the truth.

With nothing they could do directly to make that situation better – and Gov. Mitt Romney just as happy to continue witnessing the fall-guy foibles of his designated chief nemesis – Beacon Hill leaders turned their attention to a matter on which they have some traction.

Presuming the tunnel stays intact, the present brouhaha will meld into the rest of the project's unfortunate history, and the average citizen will be back to worrying about the usual items. Health care always tops that list. Thus it was that even as the media chased a series of revelations and pronouncements about the Big Dig, state government's leading lights quietly made another series of headlines on health policy – a topic that affects people whether they ever get anywhere near I-93:

• Attorney General Thomas Reilly's office said he was investigating whether anyone in the practice of brokering health insurance has broken the law. New York Attorney General Elliot Spitzer has accused the big health broker Marsh & McLennan Cos. of accepting special payments and bonuses from insurers in return for advising clients to use those particular insurers, whether it was in the client's best interest or not. Reilly's office and Insurance Commissioner Julianne Bowler are both investigating whether any Massachusetts brokers did the same thing. Employers use brokers to seek out the best, most affordable health insurance options, and obviously the brokers need to be unconflicted in order to do the job properly. [On the Big Dig last week, Reilly expressed his concerns about fixing the problem but offered little in the way of remedy or specific plans for recourse against the contractors.]

• Senate President Robert Travaglini set a specific, ambitious goal for health insurance: cut the number of uninsured people in Massachusetts to 230,000, which Travaglini said would be a 50 percent reduction. The president said the goal could be accomplished in two years, but offered no price tag. House Speaker Salvatore DiMasi made clear that he won't stand in the way of attempts to insure more residents.

• Human Services Secretary Ronald Preston, not always on the same policy page as legislative Democrats, told reporters, "It was hard to find fault in anything the Senate president said. I think we share the same goals." Thus, both the Senate and the administration put themselves on track to make health access one of the leading issues of 2005 – and to start out unusually well-aligned.

The promising signs on the health front should, of course, be viewed warily. As with the Big Dig, promises of advancement on health care have not jibed with the reality of more and more people going without insurance. And, in another analogue to the Central Artery, every effort to build a fair, effective, affordable health policy always seems to spring leaks.

• Report: Mass. women ok economically, lack political clout: — It's one of the big mysteries of Massachusetts public life: why are our leaders overwhelmingly men? A new report from the Institute for Women's Policy Research found the state in the lower third nationwide for the number of women voters empower with legislative and constitutional offices. On the bright side, "The Status of Women in the States" finds Massachusetts women are near the top of the country in earnings. But as with most other metrics, a racial gap exists and persists in earning power; women earn substantially more if they're white.

• Higher ed eyes 9 percent increase in budget next fiscal year — The Fiscal Aid and Administrative Policy Committee of the Board of Higher Education will send a budget recommendation to the full board Dec. 1. At last Thursday's (Nov. 18) session, the committee envisioned more money for nursing initiatives and student aid, worker contracts, state and community colleges. They're up against slow growth in state revenues, and pressures to increase spending on local aid and health care.

• Scooter, video bills become law— Two bills with broad appeal (the underage-scooter-riding and Peeping-Tom communities excepted) were signed into law. The governor inked legislation putting statutory penalties on the books for videotaping a person without his or her consent. That law also bans the unauthorized recording of a motion picture in a movie theater. And, filling in for Romney, Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey made law out of a bill banning those 16 and under from riding motorized scooters, and subjecting riders of the popular vehicles to new strictures such as ceiling on speed and turn-signal requirements.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 13 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Cohassett Mariner in supporting The South Shore Womens Center in supporting the effort to help local military families this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Please make your tax deductible check or money order payable to:

Seniors going out in style

CHS football veterans aiming for a Super Bowl title

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

They have been here before.

Making the EMass Div. 3 football playoffs three out of the last four years is quite an accomplishment, particularly for a school as small as Cohasset High.

For CHS football seniors Teddie Straughn, Crandon Leahy, Leo Clougherty and Joe Durkin, however, that is not enough. They want to graduate this spring with a championship on their resume.

They and the seven other seniors on the team were freshmen three years ago when the Skippers lost to Tyngsboro in the playoffs. And, of course, they were on the field last year when the team lost again in the first round to Westwood.

Durkin says because of that experience, the boys are better prepared to win that first game and get to the Super Bowl.

"I think that, because of the pressure [after falling behind against Westwood], we kind of put our heads down," said Durkin, the team's leading rusher this season with over 1,500 yards. "Now, we have the strength to come back from that situation."

And your reaction if the team falls in the first round again?

"I don't want to think about that right now," Durkin said before last Friday's practice.

These seniors are part of a group of athletes that have played together for several years; in some cases, as young as eight years old. Knowing that this is

Skippers await Tri-Valley champ

Playoff opponent was to be determined on Thanksgiving

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

As of press time, the Cohasset football team's first round playoff game against the champion of the Tri-Valley League was scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 30, 4 p.m. at Curry College in Milton.

Athletic Director Ron Ford stressed Wednesday morning that the schedule is tentative and subject to change, although he was expecting to hear later that day the official word from the MIAA.

To get the official details, you can call the CHS athletics office at 781-383-6103, which features an automated hotline that has all the latest scheduling details.

For students interested in attending the game, there will be spectator buses leaving from the high school that day. Students can sign up for the buses in school on Monday.

Tickets will be sold at the game, and are $10 for adults, $7 for students.

As for who the Skippers will be playing, that was to be determined on Thanksgiving. If Holliston, who is undefeated in Tri-Valley play, beats Westwood on Turkey Day, they are Cohasset's opponents.

For students interested in attending the game, there will be spectator buses leaving from the high school that day.

Should Westwood win and Dover-Sherborn defeats Medfield, it will be a rematch of last year's Cohasset-Westwood matchup, one which the Skippers lost.

If Westwood beats Holliston and Medfield wins over Dover-Sherborn, things then go into a complicated tie-breaker scheme.

The Tri-Valley tie-breaker, if you can believe it, is determined by points given up in the first half against one another. The bottom line is, Medfield has the advantage in that department, depending on what happens with the Holliston-Westwood game.

But, again, if Holliston wins, the tie-breaker is moot.

In any of the three cases, Tony Rolfe's team will have a tough task on their hands.

Holliston has put up over 30 points per game, led by quarterback Tyler Parrino, recently named the TVL most valuable player. A lanky 6-footer, Parrino can throw and run with equal effectiveness.

Holliston also has a couple talented junior running backs in Dave Menapase and Zach Rodgers, the latter 5-11, 205-pound bulldozer of a fullback. Parrino's two favorite targets are Chris Valiant and Mike Shalalie.

Westwood has seven league all-stars on their roster, led by quarterback Jeff White, who has thrown for over 1,800 pages and 19 touchdowns this year. He has two talented receivers in Joe Fabiano (over 800 yards, 10 touchdowns) and Chris Laham (700+ yards, nine TDs).

Amadeaus Guerrero is Westwood's top running threat, and in his last game before the holiday, ran for 212 yards in a win. Westwood also has a tough defense, led by TVL defensive player of the year George Whetstone, and all-league cornerback Morgan Donahue.

Medfield has a talented signal-caller of its own in Kevin Lynch. A 6-3, 205-pound athlete, Lynch plays linebacker on defense and is a multi-dimensional quarterback.

Medfield has good size in the offensive line, which blocks for running back Bryan Lee, a fast 5-9, 175-pound senior. Leading that line is all-league tackle Ryan Policella, who checks in at 6-2 and 230 pounds.

Exactly who that opponent is will also be available on the CHS athletics line, or by viewing the MIAA website, www.miaa.net.

Soccer seniors set the tone

Lovallo, Holway, Whitney reflect on their CHS careers

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Soccer and baseball have at least one thing in common.

When it comes to those sports' most important positions, they are up the middle.

In baseball, obviously, it's the catcher, middle infielders and center fielder.

In soccer, the center midfielder and central defenders are the backbone of any team. A team's success - or lack thereof - can often be directly tied to those three positions.

Perhaps the biggest reason the Cohasset girls soccer team made the state tournament for the third straight year in 2004 was the play of seniors Christine Lovallo, Mackenzie Holway and Nicole Whitney.

Lovallo, the team's best defender last year, was arguably its best player this season. A two-time South Shore League all-star, Lovallo made the switch this year from fullback to sweeper, the position Cohasset head coach Deb Beal says could be the most important on the field.

"Christine has been studying that position for so long, it was just natural to put her in there when it opened up this year," Beal said. "It's something we're going to have to do again next year, figure out who is going to play that spot."

Whoever does will have some big cleats to fill. One of the top defenders in the league, Lovallo was a constant nuisance to opponents trying to score with her quickness and marking skills.

Playing ahead of Lovallo at the stopper back position was Holway, a solid two-way player who is equally adept at defending and starting counter-attacks for her own team.

Holway said a key to her personal success this year was an improved commitment to physical fitness.

"I honestly thought that if just ran once in a while during the off-season, I'd be alright," she said. "Nicole can do that. She could not run all year and then run at practice like she never stopped. I can't do that."

Beal says she has been impressed by Holway's dedication, both athletically and academically.

"She's made a full-force commitment to herself and to her team," said the coach. "She is just a picture of hard work and determination right now."

And in the midfield there is Whitney, who made the South Shore League all-star team in her senior season. Cohasset lost a very good player in Jenn Buckley from that position last year, but Beal had no second thoughts about who would step in.

"Nicole was the obvious choice there," the coach said. "She probably did not have as much confidence in her foot skills and ball control ability as she should have. But as the season went on, she became more and more capable."

Unfortunately for the Skippers and their ten seniors in particular, their tournament frustrations continued this season. Last year, Cohasset thoroughly outplayed Sacred Heart but lost, 2-1.

This season, Cohasset lost to Fairhaven 3-0 in a game that was closer than the score would indicate.

The lack of postseason success was not due to a lack of effort. Whitney says the fact that this was the last time all the seniors played together in the same uniform was a big motivating factor.

"That made you want to work even harder. You didn't want to screw things up," she said. "It's hard for the seniors. It's over,

Thanksgiving coverage

Cohasset's annual Thanksgiving Day game against the Hull Pirates took place after the Mariner went to press.

Next week's edition will have full coverage of the event, including a game story and photographs to capture the atmosphere of our Thanksgiving football tradition.

We will also have next week, of course, coverage of the football team's playoff game.

Youth lacrosse sign-up open through Jan. 8

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse completed its initial registration day for the Spring 2005 season on Nov. 13, but registration will continue through Jan. 8.

Parents can come to a second sign-up day - scheduled for 9 - 11 a.m. at Cohasset High School on the first Saturday in January - or can request paperwork via e-mail and return it by January 8.

"The one thing that became clear during the initial registration day is that we are not likely to have any roster spots after January 8," says Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "We will take everyone who signs up during the registration period, even if it puts us above our ideal roster sizes, but it's very likely we'll be full once the registration period closes."

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will field boys teams in the 11-and-Under (grades 3 and 4), 13-and-Under (grades 5 and 6) and 15-and-Under age groups. It will field girls teams in the two older age groups and will hold a 90-minute weekly clinic for the youngest girls.

At all levels, practices should not conflict with most other youth sports activities.

Registration for 2005 costs $145 for one player, $270 for two players and $390 for three. The girls clinic for players in grades 3 and 4 costs $100 per player or $90 if another family member is participating on one of the teams.

To receive forms or get more information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, call 781-383-9858 or e-mail CAJaffe@aol.com <mailto:CAJaffe@aol.com>.

Cohasset Alumni Soccer Game

Saturday, November 27, 2004 is the date for the annual Cohasset Alumni Soccer game. Last year's inaugural event ended in a 2-2 tie with over 40 players returning from a span of 30 years of Cohasset Soccer. This year two games will be played. The first game will be the first women's game to be held. The game will be played at 12:00 at Alumni Field (field conditions permitting). The second game, the men's game, will be played at 2:00pm at either Alumni field or Milliken field depending on field availability. All CHS graduates who played on soccer teams from 1973 (our first team) are invited to participate. The format will be a normal 90 minute game with graduates of odd numbered years playing against graduates of even numbered years. Please contact Jeff Donze if you are interested in playing in the men's game jeff.donze@comcast.net or 781-383-9734 or Alyssa McNamara if you are interested in participating in the Women's game Alyssa@McNamaraFinancial.com or 781-962-6049. More details on a social get together after the game will be coming in future announcements. Please check our web site www.cohassetsoccer.com for updates.

Learn to ski, snowboard at Ragged Mt.

The Recreation Commission of Cohasset is sponsoring a "Learn to ski or snowboard" program at Ragged Mountain on five Saturdays throughout the winter: Nov. 27, Dec. 11, Jan. 8, Jan. 29 and Feb. 5. The motor coach will leave at 6:30 a.m. from Cohasset Town Hall parking lot, 41 Highland Ave. and returns there between 6:30 and 7 p.m. There will be an adult chaperone on the bus and available to assist your child at Ragged Mountain.

For cost efficiency, visit Buckles and Boards Ski Shop, Route 3A, Marshfield. A rental at Buckles and Boards allows you to keep the equipment through Saturday, Feb. 5, returning it after the season ends. The price for ski equipment is $129.99 and snowboard equipment is $169.99.

The $259.99 ski package includes: luxury motor coach transportation on all five Saturdays; adult chaperone on the bus; five, one-and-a-half-hour (1.5 hours) skiing or snowboarding lessons; and six full-day lift tickets at Ragged Mountain.

This will be an enjoyable treat for first timers or for those who want to improve their skills. For more information, call 781-383-4109.

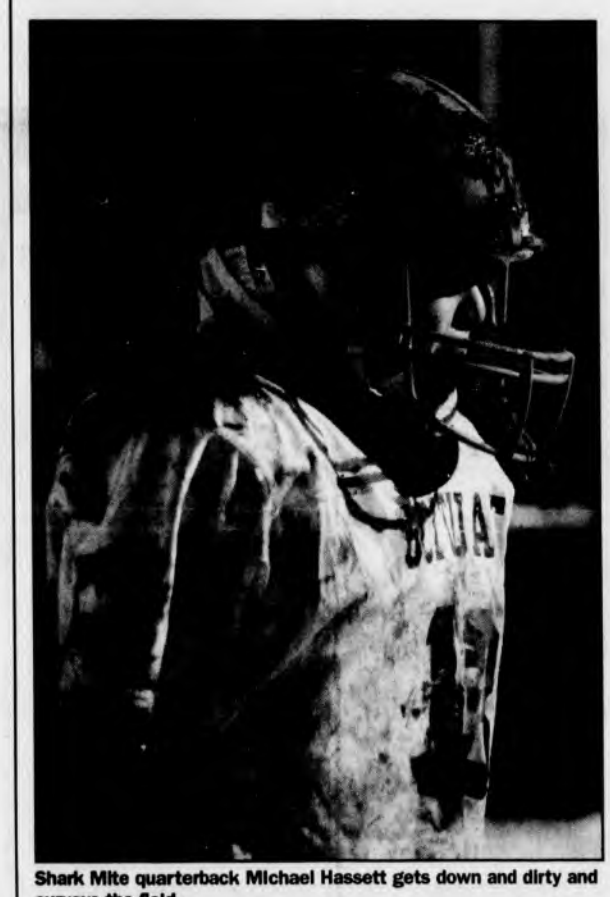
A season of success

The Scituate-Cohasset youth football program recently completed another successful season.

The program, which consists of one team each in grades three through eight, once again demonstrated good sportsmanship and fair play throughout the year.

The Stingrays Midget team (7th grade) and Sharks Mite (4th grade) each made their respective youth football Super Bowls. Unfortunately, they both lost, but both teams still had a great year.

The Stingrays Midget team advance to the Super Bowl on a 14-8 win over Marshfield in the first round of the playoffs, and the Sharks Mite team did so on a 6-0 win over Bridgewater.



The Sharks Midget team (8th grade) and Stingrays Mite team (3rd grade) each also made the playoffs, but lost in the first round.

Congratulations to coach Bob McQuaid and his players, as well as cheerleading coach Lorie Neil, for another good season.

unless you play in college."

One thing those seniors can take from the experience is the chemistry they had with one another.

"This group of seniors probably got along more than any group I've had," said Beal, who just finished her seventh year with the girls soccer program.

One thing the seniors admittedly had to work on throughout the season was getting the team's underclassmen on the same page. The team carried five sophomores and one freshman during the regular season, and called up a few more for the tournament.

"It worked out OK between the seniors, because we've been together for so long a time," Lovallo said. "It was different with the sophomores because we had never played with them."

Whitney, one of the team's four senior co-captains along with Lovallo, Rachel Garber and Casey Anderson, said she took it upon herself to talk to the younger players and get them in gear when needed.

"I think I did that more than everyone. I was a little more aggressive, and I tried to push everyone," she said.

That seemed to work out in the end, although according to Beal, there is always a fine line when getting in a teammate's face, particularly in women's athletics.

"You can scream at a boy all you want, and they'll take it," Beal said. "If you yelled at a girl, 'What are you thinking?', you'd probably hear what they were thinking. Girls are sensitive and very emotional, but that can be a good thing, too."

But it is that kind of leadership from this year's seniors and those of years past that have brought the Cohasset girls soccer programs from the doldrums into respectability, an improvement Lovallo, Holway and Whitney say they are aware of and are proud to be a part of.

COASTAL STARS REPORT

Squirt A

The Coastal Stars Squirt-A Team got back to their winning ways with a 4-3 victory over a very strong Brockton team. The stars jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead on goals by John Meehan and Tyler Martina. Meehan's goal was a rebound of a quick Martina shot from the slot. Ryan Donovan also had an assist on the play as he showed great patience holding onto the puck until Martina found an opening in the slot. Ryan made a perfect pass to Tyler who one timed the puck off the post and the rebound fell on the stick of a perfectly positioned Meehan.

Martina scored the second goal from nearly the same position where he hit the post on the previous goal. This time the release was just as quick and the puck found the back of the net before the Brockton goaltender knew it was on it's way. Donovan and Meehan registered assits on the play after a nice job of cycling down low. As dominant as the Stars were early Brockton was equally dominant in the final five minutes of the first period and evened the score with two well deserved goals.

The Stars regained the lead five minutes into the second period on John Meehan's second goal of the game on a terrific feed from Ryan Donovan. Brian Scott also assisted on the play with a strong pass from the neutral ice area. Meehan displayed great hands on the goal as he accepted the Donovan pass and in one motion let go a wrist shot that beat the Brockton goaltender high over his glove hand.

With the score tied at three heading into the third period the Stars were determined to tighten up in the defensive zone and did a great job of maintaining possession of the puck, thus limiting their opponents chances of scoring. Pat Cull has been exceptional all season on defense and he consistently made smart outlet passes to the forwards enabling them to break out and apply pressure in the Brockton defensive zone. The Stars have been getting better each week working on carrying the puck and not simply throwing it away when they are challenged. This patience lead to the winning goal by Travis Craven who completed a great three on two rush by splitting the Brockton defense and snapping off a hard shot that beat the Brockton goaltender and gave the stars a hard fought 4-3 win. Jeff Durkin and Conor McLean assisted on the play and did a nice job of spreading out the defense on a perfectly executed three on two. The Stars continue to get consistent goaltending from Kevin Kelly and solid defense from Scott, Cull, Entwistle, and Schorle. This team is really working hard at the little things that define a good hockey team and are becoming more complete each week.

Mite A

The Mite A's scored an impressive 7-1 victory against Duxbury at the Rockland Arena last Sunday. Led by Will Golden's hat trick, the Stars played a complete game, limiting Duxbury to three shots on goalie Jonathan "Le Papillon" Spitz and peppering the Duxbury goaltender throughout the game. The Stars applied relentless pressure from the outset. Colin Whelan and the other Stars forwards backchecked and dug in the corners tirelessly. Will DeCoste set up first Connor Maher, and then Andrew Geddes, out front. Chris Cohen rushed and shot from the right side, and was sent in on net by Kenny Parnell for another shot that was saved.

Duxbury drew first blood on a sneakaway with about 1:30 left in the period. Things appeared to worsen for the Stars when they were called for a penalty at the 1:05 mark, but Terrence Doonan grabbed the puck in his own end, skated the length of the rink, and lifted one to the top corner to tie the game. Doonan's goal lit a fire for the Stars. On the first shift of the second period, Connor Maher picked up a loose puck at his blue line and outraced Duxbury's defense to their net. His shot beat the goalie to the left side for the 2-1 lead. Will Golden scored the first of his three from a scramble in front of the net with 7:35 left.

Brian Smith and the Stars' defense not only killed the team's second penalty, but allowed the offense to make several shorthanded attempts. Jared McCrystal displayed textbook defense by playing the body and separating a Duxbury rusher from the puck, which allowed defensive mate Kevin McDougall to scoop up the puck. Chris Cohen's wraparound attempt was saved. Will Golden set up Jake McDonough out front. The shot was saved, but McDonough, Doonan, and Golden followed the shot for the rebound, and Golden banged it home after a flurry to put the Stars up, 4-1. McDonough and Doonan had later attempts saved, and Connor Maher fed Andrew Geddes out front, but the buzzer prevented any further scoring.

The Stars didn't let up in the third. Jeremy Duchini's pass sent Will Golden on a breakaway that was saved, and Andrew Geddes' shot from the slot was also saved. With 8:00 left in the game, Will Golden kept the puck in at the blue line, skated to the net, and fired to the top right corner from 10 feet out for his hat trick and a 5-1 lead. With 2:15 left, Terrence Doonan picked up the puck just outside the Duxbury blue line, split the D, and rushed to the net. T-Dog's shot was saved, but Jake McDonough hustled to the follow-up and netted the rebound. Doonan and McDonough paired again with 1:48 left when Doonan skated the puck down the left side and passed out front to McDonough. Jake found the five-hole for the game's final tally. The Stars' record now stands at 4-1-1.

Mite C2

On Saturday, Mites 2 team shut out Hanover 4-0 at the Pilgrim Arena. The Stars came out shooting in this contest, quickly wearing down the Hanover defense. Patrick Graham was outstanding in net logging the shut out for his squad. He received great defensive support from defenseman Jake Burchill who stopped several Hanover attacks and pushed the puck up the ice for the Stars. Robbie Bertone contributed to the effort with solid puck control and consistent overall play on defense. The Stars scored their first goal with 6:33 left in the first period their last go-around together in the same uniform, it is hard to come up with a better motivator.

"Everyone will leave everything on the field," Straughn said. "I think the underclassmen respect that."

Straughn has played fullback at the varsity level since his sophomore season, and has played a key role in Durkin's success this season. Like Durkin and their coaches, however, Straughn is quick to give credit to the offensive line, a group that has manhandled opponents in the trenches and beyond.

"It's the offensive line; they're hitting cornerbacks after they get through the defensive line," Straughn said.

Leahy is a big kid (6-2, 200 pounds) with a good arm that he doesn't have to use all the often. Not that it's a problem for him.

"It makes my life ten times easier, knowing that on that first play of the drive we're going to get five to ten yards on the ground," he said. "That makes it easier to do your own job."

One of the reasons the players are eager to praise their teammates is the level of chemistry that has developed in the locker room and on the field as the season has progressed.

Durkin says that aspect was lacking at the start of the season.

"At the beginning of the year, there were some cliques. We weren't a whole group," he said. "It came to the point where you have to deal with stuff you don't want to deal with. It's been fun seeing this team grow. Our chemistry is as good or even better than it ever has been."

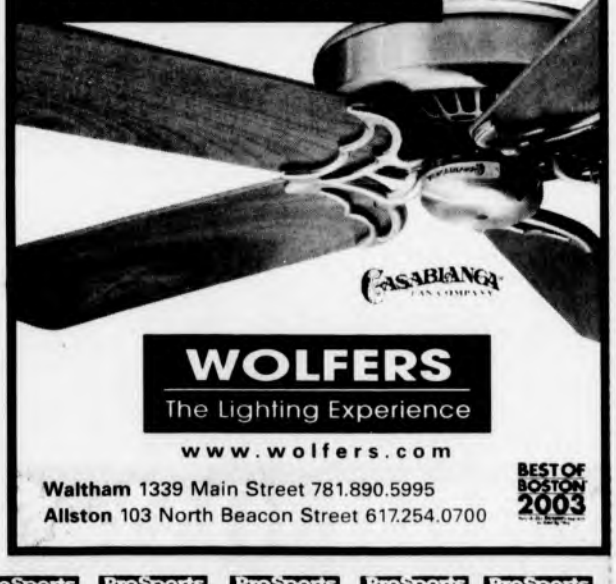
With only 11 seniors on a 41-man roster, Cohasset has had to rely on a lot of juniors, sophomores, and even a few freshmen to contribute to the team.

On some teams, the youngsters may not give the same level of effort as the seniors who are playing their last high school games, causing a rift on the team. In the world of Skippers football, however, that is not the case.

"I think the underclassmen have really committed themselves to the team and have stepped up for us," Clougherty said.

Some of those underclassmen that the seniors mentioned include junior defensive tackle Scott Wakefield, sophomore defensive backs Jeff Brown and Anthony DiPaolo, and sophomore linebacker Colin Conway.

Now is the seniors' time to shine, however, and Straughn summed it up best.



"It's nice to say we've been in the playoffs three out of the last four years," he said. "But it would be a lot nicer to say we won a championship."

on an attempt by Hanover to clear the puck out of the zone. Aidan Beresford intercepted the clear out and promptly beat the Hanover goaltender on a wrist shot from the slot.

The Stars were ahead 1-0 after one period of play. The second period was all Stars as the front-line of Tristan Wiggin, Matt Doyle and Brendan Evitts attacked the Hanover defense with a barrage of shots. Playing right wing, Jeremy Archibald cut through the middle and scored with 9:38 in the period off a rebound by a Joey Redfearn scoring bid. Jack Evitts assisted the team effort with yeoman work in the corners. Also during the period, Patrick Graham made an outstanding save on a rush by Hanover, challenging the shooter and taking away the angle. The Stars went into the third period with a comfortable 2-0 lead.

This last period proved to be a continuation of the second with more offensive pressure by the Stars. Matt Boudreau broke in all alone on the Hanover goalie only to be stifled by a pad save. Joseph Proctor won two key face-offs in the third period and Thomas Coyne chipped in with great blue line play that allowed the Stars to maintain possession in the offensive zone. With 10:02 left, Michael McPartlin made a truly creative play. McPartlin curled around from behind the Hanover net, stopped and pulled the trigger, scoring on a tough angle. Kal Maier joined the offensive party with a nice rush in on the Hanover goal-tender but could not convert.

Mites C3

The undefeated Mite C3 team notched their 5th victory with an action packed 6-0 win over Whitman/Hanson/Kingston at Bridgewater Arena. In the 1st period, the Stars fired many quality shots on the W/H/K net minder who was able to keep the puck from entering the net. Stars goaltender, Jeffery Powers, was equally up to the task, stopping several W/H/K quality shots including a brilliant save on a two on none breakaway.

Garrett Leahy opened the Stars scoring late in the first period with a great individual effort, going "coast to coast" up the left wing and beating the goalie to make the score 1-0, which held through the end of the first period. Bryan Bowman and Declan Leahy provided some inspirational defensive play early in the second period breaking up several opponents' rushes up the ice. Jeremy "Remy" Archibald scored the second Stars goal with some nifty stickhandling up the right wing then beating the goalie with a wrist shot. Jeremy and linemates Ryan Davis and Garrett Leahy kept constant offensive zone pressure on the W/H/K goalie.

James Daley scored the third goal for the Stars of the contest after splitting the W/H/K defensemen upon receiving a slick pass in the neutral zone from winger Andrew Tautkus. Several fine "end to end" rushes by defenseman Sam Topham finally paid off late in the second period as right winger Mark McGoldrick followed Sam's shot and scored on the rebound. The third period opened with some excellent offensive zone play by center Ryan Melia and wingers Curtis Golden and Hugh Healy.

The line generated several good scoring opportunities only to be stopped by the opposing goaltender. As the third period continued Stars defenseman, Max Hemingway, who constantly stood his ground at the blue line hustled back and broke-up a W/H/K clean breakaway with a nice stick check. Mark McGoldrick, parked in front of the crease, scored his second goal of the game midway through the third period off a nice feed from center James Daley to make the score 5-0. The goal came as the result of defensemen Jake Denton and Sam Topham step-ping up into the play and keeping the opponents trapped in their defensive zone.

Garrett Leahy closed out the scoring with his second goal of the game on a great move around the goalie then tucking the puck behind the tender and into the empty net. Stars defensemen, Max Hemingway, Bryan Bowman, Jake Denton and Declan Leahy thwarted oppo-nents third period center ice play making attempts and along with net minder Jeffery Powers pre-served the teams fourth shut out of the young season. Stars play-er, Matthew Tautkus, with arm cast now removed, should see ice action soon. Keep up the good play Stars!

Squirt B1

The Coastal Stars Squirt B1 team had a successful weekend, as they overpowered the South Shore Seahawks 8-0 on Saturday, and followed up with a 2-2 tie against a tough Taunton Brewins team on Sunday. Against the Seahawks, the Stars carried the play from the opening face-off and had several early scoring chances turned away by the Seahawks goalie. They final-ly broke through, scoring twice in the last four minutes of the period. Carter Denton scored the first of his two goals, putting the puck just inside the right post after picking up the rebound of a DJ Evans shot from the slot. Ryan Talanian also picked up an assist on the play. With just over a minute to play in the first, the always hustling John Kenney came up with the puck at center ice and broke in on a two-on-one with Jared Coletta. The Seahawks goalie made a great stop on Kenney, but Coletta was perfectly positioned and flipped the puck over the goalie to make it 2-0.

In the second period, Jared Coletta battled for the puck and got it to Ryan Talanian, who broke in alone, put the puck on his backhand and slid it through the goalies pads for a 3-0 lead. Two minutes later, it became 4-0, as Bobby Harrington, a force in both games, stole the puck and broke in on a two-on-none, with Mike Carbone streaking down the right wing. Harrington looked to Carbone, freezing the goalie, and then beat him with a low wrist shot.

The third period was all Stars, as they controlled the tempo and scored four times. Mike Carbone made it 5-0, skating in from the point to pick up the rebound of a John Kenney shot and firing the puck into the top corner. Ryan Talanian then scored his second of the game, with assists from Neil Conway and Jared Coletta. Coletta followed that with a goal off a Carter Denton rebound to make it 7-0 and Denton closed out the scoring with his second goal and third point of the game, putting in a rebound after Brian Ford beat his man and broke in alone.

On Sunday, the Stars came out flying against the Brewins, and top to bottom, played their best game of the year. Goalie Danny Durkin had a strong game, con-trolling rebounds and making several saves on point blank shots. He had a lot of help from his defensemen and his forwards, particularly Ross Horan and Bobby Parelli, as they hustled to get back and battled for the puck along the boards. The Stars went up 1-0 in the first when Neil Conway battled for the rebound of a Bobby Harrington shot and tucked it in the net. The play went back and forth for a while with both goalies being tested. Then Brian Ford made a nice play to keep the puck inside the Brewins zone.

The Brewins gained possesion but Mike Carbone stole the puck and whistled a wrist shot by the goalie's glove for a 2-0 lead. The Brewins battled back, tying it on a tip-in from in front and a low wrist shot from the slot. Both teams had scoring chances down the stretch, but strong team defense and goaltending kept it deadlocked.

or scared, and its OK to feel the same way as the turtle sometimes. "It's about social awareness," said Griffiths, and seeing they have the ability to control themselves, just as the turtle does, and listen to their inner voices, "It's empowering for them," she said.

When every child is able to sit very still and very quiet, they are given a small, smooth stone to remind them of their ability to sit as still as stone, just like the turtle. Although Griffiths said the stones all look the same to her, "They do remember which ones are theirs." She said every student also sewed together his or her own special pouch made out of felt to hold their special stones.

The children have also learned about Sacajawea, and the importance of her role in the country's history. Griffiths said they also spoke about the important role children played in the Native American culture. "The children were just fascinated," she said with the stories of the country's history. Realizing there was a time not long ago when parents had no choice but to make things from scratch is sometimes hard for them to grasp, she said.

Griffiths, along with Enrichment Director Liz Alpert, and teachers Janet Gordon and Jessica Malone, teach using themes, and with the passing of Thanksgiving and the transition into other holidays, Griffiths said the theme of the room will gradually change as well. She said there has been much success with the wetu in the classroom, which has been enjoyed not only by the afternoon Enrichment Program students, but those who use the enrichment room during the breakfast club before-school program, and the KEDS extended-day kindergarten program, "After Christmas, we're building a space station," she said, which is just as sure to spark the imagination.

Questions and answers about Cohasset's PAC

What is PAC? Under the Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 71B each school district is currently required to have a Parent Advisory Council.

Cohasset, has an active parent's council, a system-wide organization of parents working in partnership with teachers, special education service providers and administrators to promote a successful educational environment for our children. They are dedicated to ensuring that children with disabilities have equal access to educational opportunities and schools that are safe, nurturing, challenging learning environments. Cohasset PAC provides access to current resources, regulations, laws and activities that impact special education.

Who should be involved? All parents and guardians of students who receive special education services, including families whose children have an Individualized Education Plan (IEP), 504 Accommodation, or Out-of-District placement, etc. The involvement of educators or interested parties are welcome. All parents who think their child may have some learning, behavioral, social or attention issues.

When are PAC meetings? Cohasset PAC meets the first Tuesday of almost every month at the Osgood Elementary School in the Music Room or Osgood Library at 7:30 p.m. Meetings are free and open to the public. Notices of meetings are posted in Town Hall, the Paul Pratt Public Library, the school newsletters and the local paper. Watch for notices of special events, workshops, activities, etc.

Unable To Attend? If you would like to be added to the e-mail network for updates on workshops and presentations throughout the South Shore. Forward your contact information to southshorepac@comcast.net

'We are thankful for them'

By Ben Buckley and Valarie Farren
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Our class in Second Grade is sending the soldiers care packages.

First, before Halloween we gave cards with riddles and cookies that we made at school. We sent them to Mrs. Topor's husband in Egypt. This month we are sending a soldiers' care package to the soldiers in Iraq.

We brought items in to our classroom for the soldiers' care package. The things in the soldiers' care package include: Pringles, gum, deodorant, shampoo, toothpaste, toothbrushes, and batteries.

We want the soldiers to know that we are thankful for them.

Goodbye Mrs. Schleiff

Marie Schleiff walked down a corridor in the middle school Nov. 12 to the cheers of faculty and students, celebrating her 35 years of service to Cohasset schools. Students and faculty lined up to applaud her on her last day. Also on hand was Mrs. Schlieff's husband Bill, who is also a retired teacher (from the Weymouth schools)

School board provides budget tutorial

Edward Malvey and former Business Manager Ivan Klimko presented a budget to the committee which allowed the schools to keep all services at the same level. The proposed budget was essentially a "wish list" of items the school would like to have, if money was no consideration, which was pared down as the board established funding priorities. However, she pointed out keeping the same level of service is a lofty task even when the budget is not level-funded.

The first red flag to present itself in the budget was an unexpected rise in utility costs.

Tebbetts said in order to have maintained services, the schools would have needed a budget increase of 13 percent from what had been appropriated the year before. However, with dramatic decreases in state aid, it was only feasible for the schools to receive an increase of 6 percent, she said.

"We cut administrative positions, support positions, teaching positions and middle school sports," said Tebbetts, adding at the end of the day, even with the cuts, the School Committee felt it needed to ask the town to support a Prop. 2-1/2 override of $400,000.

"We really felt we were unwilling to cut any more staff," she said, and the only way to avoid more cuts was to pass an override.

"We gave everyone sufficient data," said Tebbetts, which included the Advisory Committee, former Town Manager Mark Haddad, and the Board of Selectmen. Flynn added, "I spent a lot of hours with the Advisory Committee, and they dug very deep," into the budget, which was a very informative process. "We realized we didn't have the money and we needed it or we would be in bigger trouble," he said.

"I would say the entire process was very transparent throughout," said Tebbetts.

A good deal of the costs added to last year's budget were fixed costs "which hadn't been there before," said Flynn, adding along with the unforeseen utilities costs, the line item for substitute teachers had been under-budgeted, as $46,500 had been budgeted the previous year and roughly $120,000 was spent. In addition, the cost of covering contractual obligations alone was roughly $490,000.

"We had a significant amount of special education money we had to come up with," said Flynn, which required even more re-working of the budget. "We certainly gave it out best shot last year, and I think it was vetted very well around town," he said.

Flynn added because last year was one of the more active election seasons the town has seen in a while, more people became involved with and concerned with the budgeting process. He added while it was no one's first choice to go for the override, "It's expenses versus what you're not willing to give up. People have gotten used to services and they like the services," he said, but when the town is dealing with budgets which do not have a lot of fat, tough decisions need to be made.

"At the end of the day, (the boards) supported the override, and the town agreed," said Tebbetts.

Rusty Skippers guest conductor Mark Bodner at last year's holiday concert. The Rusty Skippers will be back this year performing at the First Parish Meetinghouse at noon Dec. 4.

First Parish at the heart of Village Fair

First Parish Unitarian Universalist is bustling with the preparation for its part in this year's Christmas Fair on the Common on Dec. 4. Its Estate(ish) Sale and Swedish Bake Shop are found in the Parish House across from the Common where you'll also find the Coming of Age Group's "Nine Bean and Barley Soup Mix" and an ornament sale. The Rusty Skippers Band conducts a Holiday Concert at noon, and tickets will be on sale for the Dec. 12 Unicorn Singers concert.

The Estate(ish) sale (formerly the Jumble Sale) is back by popular demand in the Parish House. Don't miss this great selection of pre-owned treasures of all kinds for adults and children. Accompanying this sale is the Swedish Bake Shop's cardamom bread and fabulous cinnamon buns with coffee, tea and hot chocolate.

The Rusty Skippers will performing its annual Holiday Pops Concert at First Parish Meeting House at noon the day of the Village Fair. Selections include swinging jazz arrangements of familiar carols: Sleigh Ride (made famous by the Boston Pops), Jingle Bell Rock and many other familiar tunes and carols in all styles.

The concert is free and appropriate for all ages and will last about one hour. A free-will offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

Combined choirs perform in Cohasset

The Choral Art Society of Scituate and the adult and youth choirs of St. Theresa of Avila Parish of West Roxbury, will join voices to present a holiday concert titled "Noel, Nowell: A French and English Christmas." on two Sundays in December. The program includes Britten's "A Ceremony of Carols", Gounod's "Missa Brevis" and an assortment of carols.

Dr. Richard R. Bunbury, musical director, will conduct the combined chorus with musical guests harpist Xiao Yin Zhang and organist Frederick Guzasky. On Dec. 5, at 4 p.m. the group will perform at St. Stephen's Church, on Cohasset common. The performance will be repeated on Sunday, Dec. 12, at 4 p.m. in West Roxbury at St. Theresa of Avila Church, 2078 Centre Street.

Tickets are $12/$10 (students and seniors) for the Cohasset concert and are available in advance by phone or at the door on performance day.

A freewill donation at the door is suggested for the West Roxbury concert. Both churches are handicapped accessible. A reception will follow each concert with free refreshments.

For information call 781-545-8295 or visit www.choralartsociety.org. The program is funded in part by grants from local cultural councils through Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Shipbuilding legacy is subject of talk

On Thursday, Dec. 2 at 7 p.m., as the Hull Lifesaving Museum welcomes Harold Burnham.

In Essex, shipbuilding is a tradition handed down over time. As each generation learns from the past, the standards are both faithfully preserved and continuously refined. Harold Burnham bears a family name that is virtually synonymous with Essex — the birthplace of approximately 4,000 schooners.

The Burnhams arrived in Essex in 1635, spawning a shipbuilding legacy. As the 28th Burnham to operate a shipyard in Essex since 1819, Harold has carved out a place in history as a master boat designer and shipwright.

Like his ancestors before him, Harold has a holistic approach to vessel design, construction and operation which makes him uniquely efficient today. In addition to holding a bachelor's degree in maritime transportation and fisheries from the Massachusetts Maritime Academy, he draws upon extensive experience at sea, and of course, techniques learned in the famous shipyards of Essex.

Hear Harold discuss building the schooner Thomas E. Lannon, the Chebacco boat, the Story, and his current projects. Admission: $3 members, $ 5 non-members

For information and directions about the Hull Lifesaving Museum, 1117 Nantasket Ave., call Corinne Leung at 781-925-5433. Visit the museum on the Web at: www.lifesavingmuseum.org

The Maritime Artisans Speakers Series is a project of the Mass Bay Maritime Artisans, and is hosted by the Jones River Landing and the Hull Lifesaving Museum. The Mass Bay Maritime Artisans is the boatbuilding department of the Jones River Marine Ecology Center. MBMA is a loose association of boat builders, designers, suppliers, curators, and sailors. Its purpose is to foster a sense of community and collaboration among people working in the tradition of small wooden boats in the waters of Massachusetts Bay.

NE Artisans Showcase Dec. 4 at Sons of Italy

Saturday, Dec. 4, will mark the debut of a new event, the first annual New England Artisans Showcase, to be held at the Sons of Italy Hall on Route 3A in Hingham.

Twelve craftsmen, most of whom are former exhibitors from the Hingham Winterfest Folk Art and Craft Show, will offer their work for sale at this one day show. Winterfest will not be held this year, but you will still have a change to buy from some of your favorite artisans.

Featured will be woodcarvings by local artists Tim Jumper and Bill Sarni, as well as tinware, yellowware, scherenschnitte, floorcloths, bandboxes and other folk art and historical crafts.

Many of the exhibitors have been listed in the directory of Early American Life Magazine's 200 best craftsmen issue and have had their work featured in other national publications. Hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and admission is free. For more information, call 781-749-6764.

Holiday trunk sale

The James Library & Center for the Arts in historic Norwell Center is hosting a holiday trunk sale featuring 12 South Shore artisans on Saturday, Dec. 4 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The three-floor Victorian library building will be transformed into a holiday fair featuring hand-made items including painted floor cloths, sculpted dolls, monoprints, ponchos and boiled wool hand bags, jewelry and more.

Sue Page Thompson of Scituate will be doing "while you wait" pencil portraits. All the artisans are from the South Shore and items are priced for holiday gift giving. Proceeds benefit the center's Art Gallery Fund. For information, call 781-659-7100.

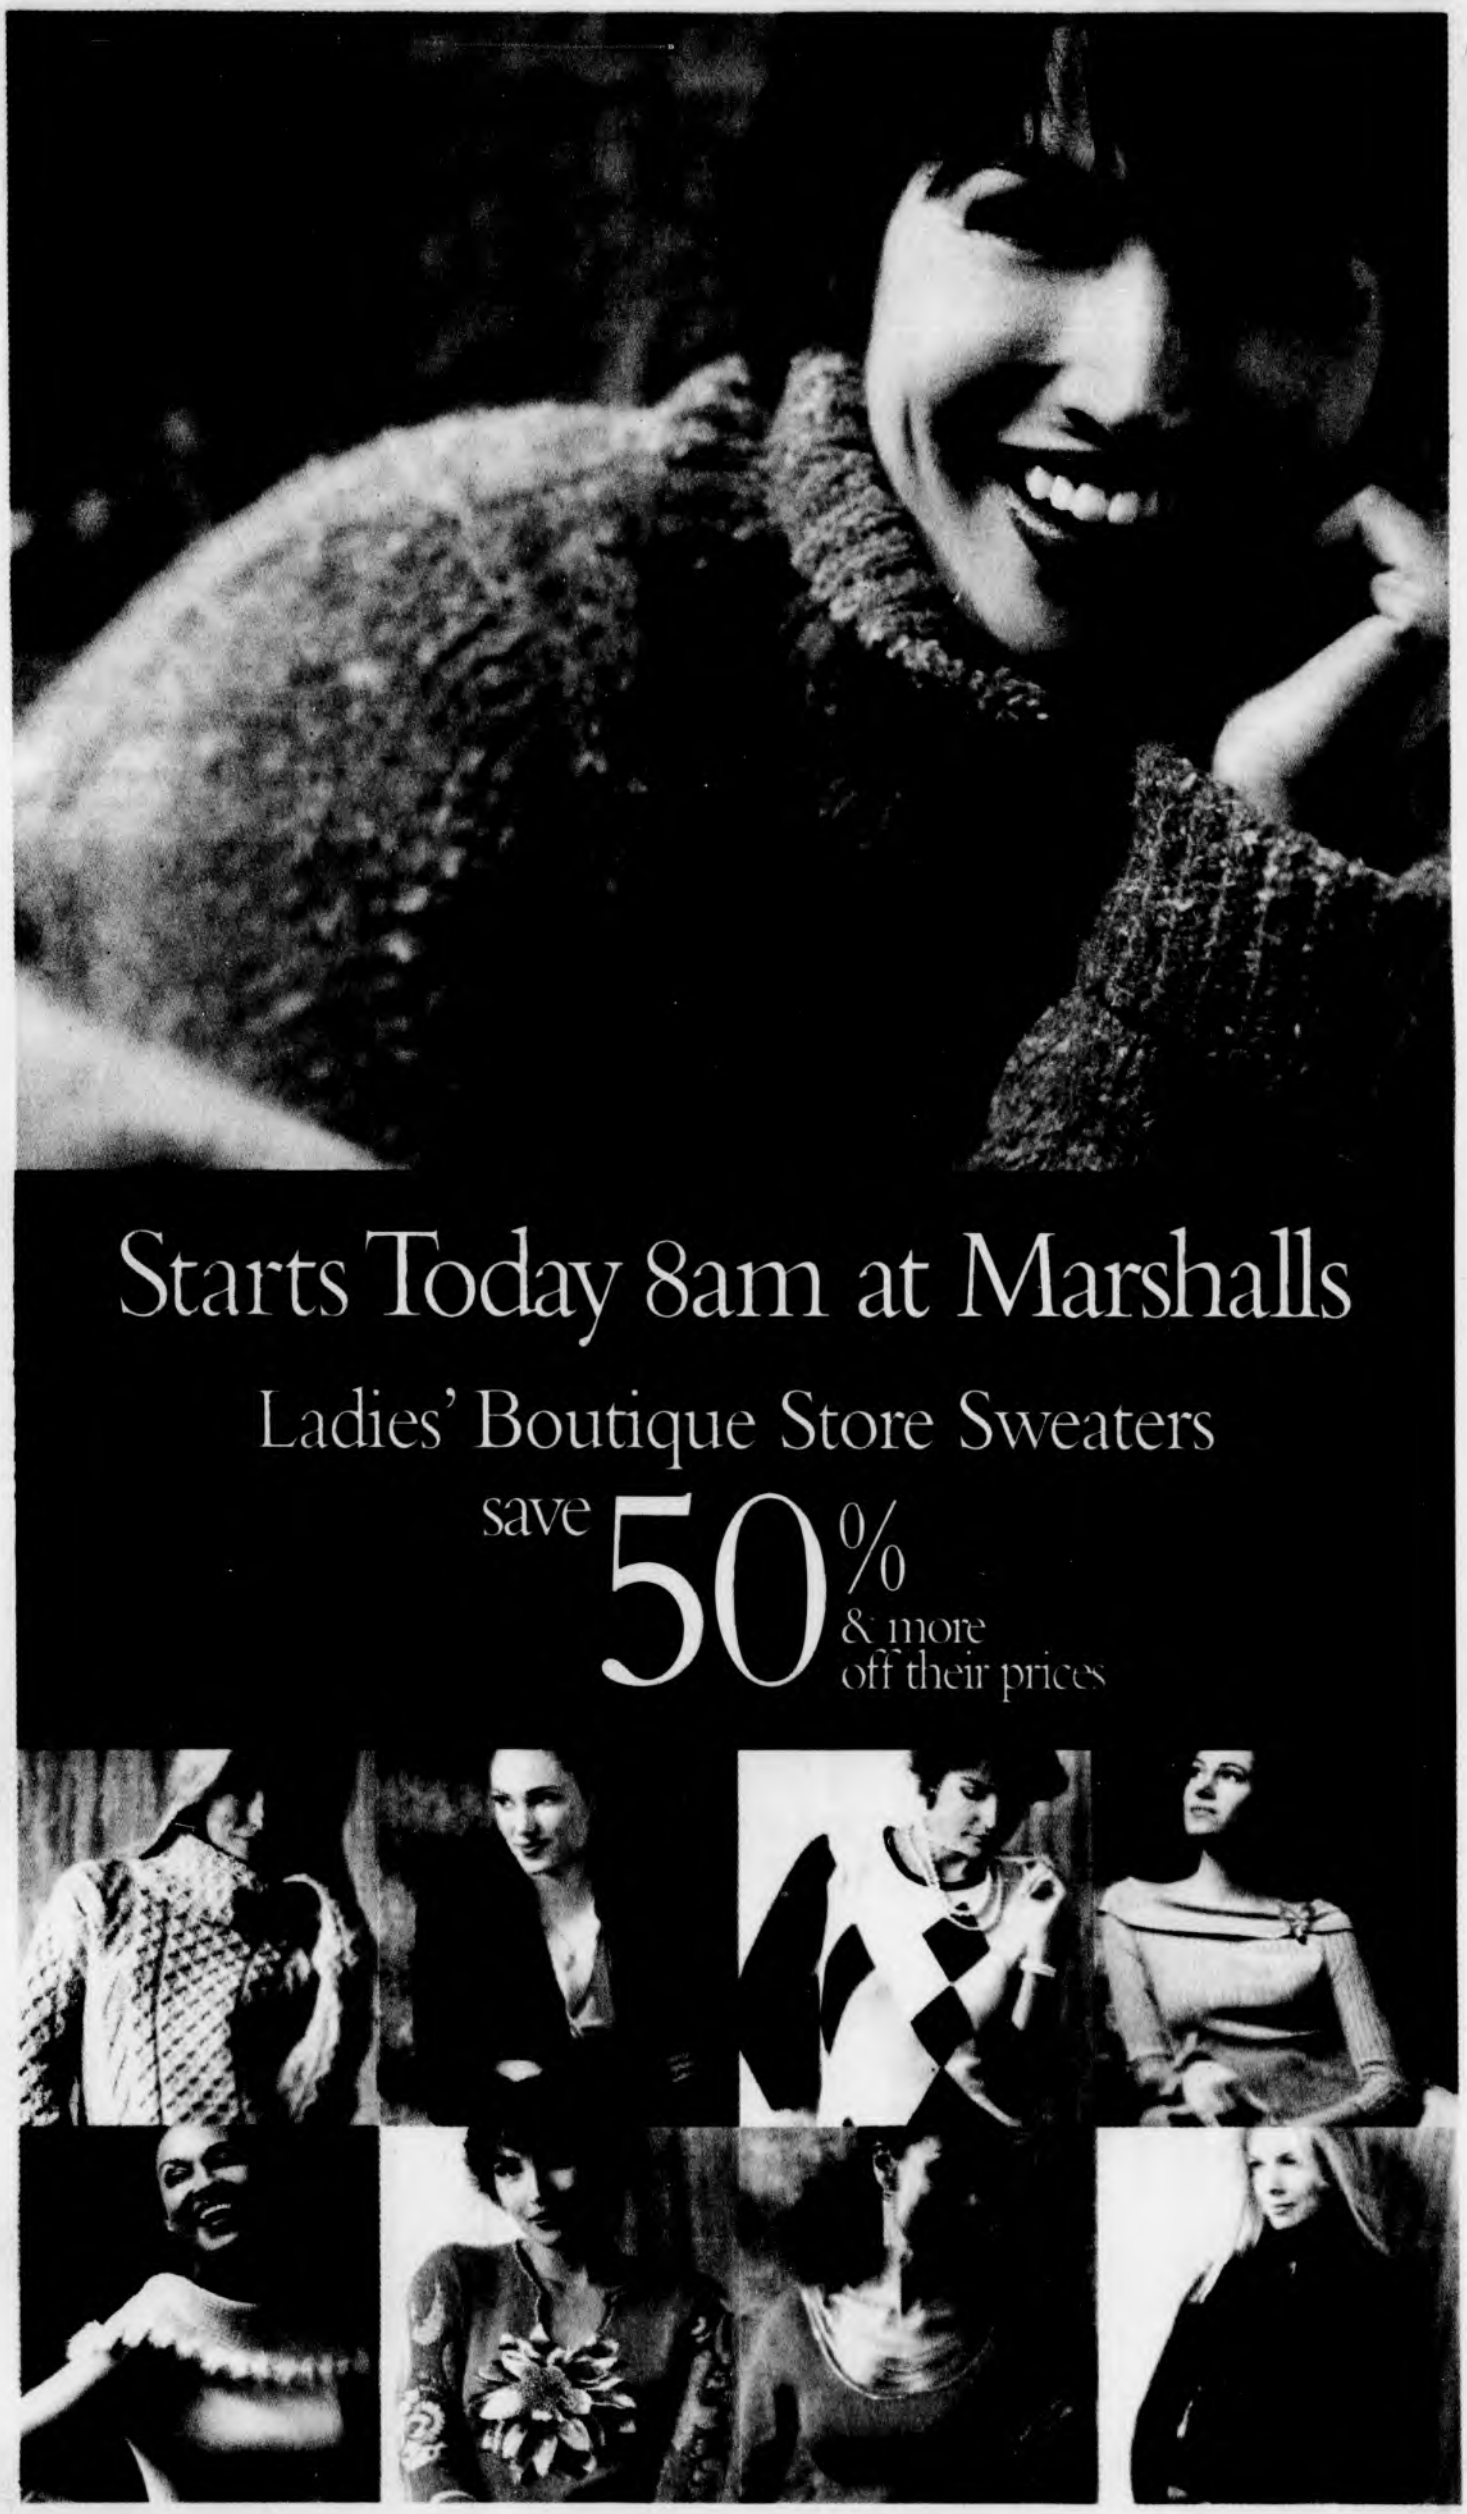
Merrie Market, a shopper's delight

Old Ship Church, 107 Main St. , Hingham will hold its annual holiday Merrie Market Saturday, Dec. 4, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. This festive bazaar has been held for more than 50 years and is eagerly anticipated by shoppers all over the South Shore. New features this year include a special area where children may purchase gifts for their friends and families and a spectacular gingerbread house raffle. Festive holiday wreaths, gift baskets with themes, unusual gifts, a silent auction featuring a handmade quilt and special art items, an opportunity to win a reserved pew or parking space for Old Ship's popular Christmas Eve service, tempting food products and a new lunch menu are among the other offerings.

• Festive Holiday Wreaths: Old Ship wreath makers will gather soon to make festive holiday wreaths. Each one is hand-crafted from beautiful materials and designs to achieve the one-of-a-kind look. The materials used are natural products such as pine cones, berries, nuts, boxwood, rose hips, winterberry, juniper and white pine boughs.

• Seekers of Unusual Items: The annual Treasures Table will again feature jewelry, small furniture, glassware, ceramics, and many other items donated from homes in the community.

• A Delightful Gift for Someone Special: A special room for children will have the usual array of toys, plus a new area where children can purchase gifts for their families and friends. To help keep kids happily occupied while their mothers shop, volunteers will help them work on crafts. Santa will pose with children and families for photos, which will then be mounted in a holiday folder designed by artist Marty Saunders.



• Tempting Homemade Products: The Kitchen Treats table will again feature a wide variety of food items, such as preserves, homemade candy, pies and honey, all produced in the kitchens of Old Ship members and friends.

• New Lunch Menu: Lunch will feature a creative new menu: home made corn chowder, chicken vegetable soup, macaroni and cheese, hot dogs, apple pie, brownies, coffee, tea and cold drinks. Stop for lunch before or after shopping.

• Raffle Item: A spectacular Gingerbread House will be the featured raffle item this year. This too, was created and donated by one of our parishioners.

• Find the Perfect Gift: Unique, one-of-a-kind gift baskets are an added feature to this year's Merrie Market. Gift baskets will be prepared around specific themes, such as items for gardeners, teenage girls, wine with glasses, your favorite doggy and kitty. These are just a few examples; there are many more.

• Silent Art Auction: Creative people in the Old Ship community have donated special art items for this event, including a hand-made quilt.

When winter barks up the wrong tree

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

Time to prune flowering shrubs

Mild days followed by evenings below freezing can adversely affect young, thin-barked trees, especially those planted in open areas or in southwesterly facing exposures. During the warmth of the day, the trunk of the tree, both its bark and inner core, expand in response to the heat of the sun. When the temperature drops dramatically at night, the thin outer bark rapidly shrinks, while the dense inner core cools down more slowly causing the bark to split and peel.

The bark of a tree is analogous to our own skin. If the outer layer is damaged, the vital inner trunk becomes susceptible to damage by insects and diseases. The use of tree wraps, which breathe and expand as temperatures fluctuate during the winter months, can greatly reduce this damage. Local nurseries usually stock these protective wraps that breathe and expand as temperatures fluctuate in addition to protecting the trunks from destructive rodents near their bases. Keep grass short around tree trunks and remove leaves and debris until the ground freezes; be sure to remove this protection each spring.

It should be noted that split or peeling bark is not always a sign of a tree in distress. Sycamore, birch, paperbark maple, Kousa dogwood, and stewartia are only a few of the woody plants that routinely exhibit appealing exfoliating bark. These lovely specimens add beauty to our winter landscapes.

The recent storm took its toll on many woody plants with the heavy, wet accumulation of snow bending and distorting evergreen branches and splitting tree limbs, particularly those of trees and shrubs whose leaves had not yet fallen. Although major pruning should usually wait until late winter or early spring, storm-damaged branches should be trimmed as soon as they are noticed. Jagged cuts may pose a serious hazard to healthy tissue during the winter, as they tend to collect water potentially leading to disease; partially broken tree limbs, if left dangling may eventually cause the bark of the trunk to be stripped beneath the tear. Take a few minutes to inspect your trees and shrubs and prune injured branches before more winter weather arrives.

Light pruning of other flowering shrubs may help to reduce winter damage. If shrub rose canes are especially long, it is advisable to trim these back to approximately 3 feet in height to lessen the possibility of damage caused by wind or snow. Remove dead or diseased shoots. Be sure to rake up and dispose of rose foliage to minimize diseases overwintering in the ground surrounding your plants. Tall, vigorous butterfly bushes should also be pruned to 3 or 4 feet as they may be uprooted during winter storms.

Do not prune the woody stems of the showy pink or blue mophead hydrangeas in autumn or early spring as the buds for next season's blooms have already formed near the tips of these twigs.

Roses need special attention in order to survive our typically open winters. Last winter was particularly hazardous for these popular plants. Protection of the bud unions, especially the fist-shaped grafts of hybrid teas, is critical for their survival during the coming months. This knob should have been planted about 2 inches below the surface but nursery pots are rarely deep enough to cover the graft and most of us are inclined to plant the rose bushes at the same level as they were grown in their container. To protect this critical growth point, a mound of fresh soil, bark mulch, or well-draining compost should be applied to the base of the plant. This cone-shaped mound should be 6 to 12 inches high and completely cover the crown. Use soil from a vegetable garden or other source rather than pulling soil together from around the base of your roses as you risk exposing their shallow roots making them more susceptible to the cold. Apply a layer of mulch to the mound once the ground freezes.

A good spiced nut can be hard to come by

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Like Punxsutawney Phil, spiced nuts appear once per year and then quickly disappear. In most cases, they go away for good reason since they are either too sticky, too sweet, or just too weird (such as an odd, garlicky mix of flavors). As we quickly learned when testing a variety of recipes, a good spiced nut is hard to come by.

We started out testing with cashews that are coated in an egg white mixture, coated with sugar and spices, and then baked. Raw, unsalted nuts were best. Our original recipe called for egg whites plus one tablespoon water but we quickly dumped the water from the recipe. Now we simply tossed the nuts with the whisked egg whites and placed them in a colander to drain before we added the spices. A third cup of sugar added both flavor and a nice sparkle once baked. Two teaspoons of coarse salt added crunch; cumin and coriander added depth, and cayenne was reduced to a mere 3/4 teaspoon although this is a matter of personal taste. (More cayenne will stop your kids from eating them all before the party.) They were baked at 300 degrees for about 40 minutes with a quick toss halfway through.

SPICED CASHEWS

For best flavor use the freshest and best quality nuts you can find. A couple of good sources are Whole Foods and Trader Joe's. Once completely cooled the nuts may be stored in an airtight container for up to a week.

1 egg white
1 pound raw unsalted cashews
1/3 cup sugar
2 teaspoons Kosher or coarse salt
1-1/2 teaspoons ground cumin
1/2 teaspoon ground coriander
3/4 teaspoon cayenne or to taste

Heat the oven to 300 degrees. In a medium bowl whisk the egg white until foamy. Add the cashews and toss to coat. Transfer to a colander to drain. Meanwhile, wipe out bowl and add the remaining ingredients and whisk to combine well. Add the nuts and toss to coat evenly with the spice mixture. Place nuts on a parchment or aluminum foil (dull side facing up) lined baking sheet (or jelly roll pan) and spread out in one layer. Bake for 20 minutes. Using a spatula stir the nuts and once again spread into a single layer. Bake until the nuts are dry and mahogany colored, about 20 minutes more. Cool completely before serving.

PECANS

Many spiced pecan recipes start by toasting the nuts in the oven and then coating them with a glaze. After much testing, we decided to stick with our basic egg white method above (this method produces crunchier nuts) but change the mix of spices. Butter and vanilla, two common ingredients, were nixed in flavor of a simpler, cleaner flavor. So, we ended up with a mixture of 1/3 cup sugar, 1-1/2 teaspoons coarse salt, 1/2 teaspoon chili powder, a pinch of cayenne, and 1/4 teaspoon each cinnamon and cocoa.

SPICED PECANS

This recipe uses warmer spices such as chili powder and cinnamon, given the stronger flavor of the nuts.

1 egg white
1 pound raw pecans
1/3 cup sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons Kosher or coarse salt
1/2 teaspoon chili powder
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon cocoa
Pinch cayenne (optional)

Follow the above recipe for Spiced Cashews, replacing the nuts and spice mixture accordingly.

ALMONDS

Almonds, just like cashews, are sweet and mild. Trader Joe's sells honey sesame almonds and cashews that are quite good and we tried to do some sort of variation on that idea. When we tried this in our kitchen, we ran into problems with the glaze melting off the nuts (the nuts were roasted and then the glaze was applied). In the end these nuts also benefited from the method used above, roasting them once the wet and dry ingredients had been applied. This proved to be simpler than toasting the nuts and sesame seeds separately and allowed the glaze to dry and the sesame seeds to adhere to the nuts. We prefer using blanched almonds for this recipe.

SESAME HONEY ALMONDS

With such simple flavor, a mixture of sesame seeds and honey worked out the best. Blanched almonds work best.

2/3 cup light brown sugar
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons butter
1/2 teaspoon soy sauce
1 pound almonds, blanched preferred
1 cup sesame seeds

1. Heat the oven to 300 degrees and adjust a rack to the center position. Line a rimmed cookie sheet or jellyroll pan with parchment or aluminum foil (dull side facing up). Bring the sugar, honey, butter, soy sauce and one tablespoon water to a boil in a medium saucepan. Cook until smooth and thick, about 2 minutes. Add the nuts and cook, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon, until they are shiny and almost no liquid is pooling in the bottom of the pan, about 1 1/2 minutes.

2. Transfer the glazed almonds to a medium-sized mixing bowl, add the sesame seeds and toss until the seeds have evenly coated the almonds. Dump nuts onto cookie sheet and spread into a single layer. Bake until the nuts are dry and fragrant and the sesame seeds have very slightly colored, about 40 minutes. Cool completely before serving. The nuts will keep in an airtight container for up to a week.

Whole Foods helps shelter go natural

This Thanksgiving, the animals of Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will be feasting on some of the finest pet foods available thanks to customers of Whole Foods Market. Whole Foods has offered a home for the animal shelter's Food Donation Bin. Right now, the bin is brimming over with all kinds of healthful kitty kibble.

"Having a bin at Whole Foods Market is really wonderful. The food donations save us a lot of money, and the food itself is such high quality. We feel really lucky and grateful for their support and the support of all the customers who anonymously drop a can or bag of food in there—it makes such a difference," said Pam Loring, HSAR president. For information on HSAR, call 1-877-378-1195.

OBITUARIES

Pauline C. Gilman

Pauline C. (Mullaney) Gilman, 74, of Hingham, died Nov. 19, 2004 at North East Specialty Hospital in Braintree.

Born in Boston, she graduated from St. Joseph's School in Boston. She lived in Hingham for 12 years and formerly in Cohasset. She was a homemaker.

Wife of the late Francis P. Gilman, she leaves her son, Francis P. Gilman of Marshfield; her three daughters, Cheryl Gilman-Newton of Hingham, Ann Faria of Scituate and Patricia Crouch of Taunton; her nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Monday at St. Christine's Church, Marshfield. Interment was in Couch Cemetery, Marshfield.

Funeral arrangements were made by the MacDonald Funeral Home of Marshfield.

Donations may be made in Mrs. Gilman's memory to the Autism Center of the South Shore, 210 Winter St., Suite 101, Weymouth 02188.

World-famous real estate investor and author reveals secrets of buying homes with no money down

Robert Allen's legendary workshop reveals how to change your financial future in 90 days or less

Years ago, when I invented the now world-famous "No Money Down" real estate system, people thought it simply couldn't be done... Buying real estate without investing a dime of your own money! But, I have proven it can be done, year after year, in all kinds of housing markets. Perhaps you've seen me on TV — or perhaps you've read one of my bestselling books.

I've shown millions that just about anyone can make a fortune in real estate. But I have to tell you, in all my years of showing people how to create wealth through real estate, I believe it's never been as easy as it is today. Plus, I believe you can make more money now in real estate than ever before. And you can do it quicker.

Before the end of the year, you could be my next real estate millionaire — perhaps even a multimillionaire. Even if you're stone cold broke right now, you can still become richer than most Americans will ever be. The profit floodgates have truly opened for so many of my students. I believe you too can take advantage of all the lasting wealth that real estate can provide. And I'd like to tell you how in my updated workshop, Creating Wealth with Real Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO

Challenge #1: Find fast wealth in any city, town, or neighborhood

When I first developed my revolutionary system for buying real estate, I very publicly challenged the media to... "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money." Keep in mind, I would have no cash to invest. No connections. No firsthand knowledge of the real estate market where I was going. But I would have my new system for buying real estate. And that meant none of the above mattered.

DONE

I didn't buy one property. I bought seven!

The Los Angeles Times took me up on my gutsy challenge. In just 57 hours, I had taken title to not one, but seven properties — adding $722,000 in assets to my real estate portfolio. That's the equivalent of more than $10,000 an hour.

ST. LOUIS

Challenge #2: Take someone from unemployed to over $100,000 in equity

No better example of "ANYBODY CAN DO THIS" exists than when I made another major public challenge. As you might be able to guess, I'm not shy about proving my system works. So I declared..."Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, that person will be back on his/her feet with $5,000 in the bank."

DONE

It was in St. Louis, Missouri, where I pulled a couple out of the unemployment line and placed them on the path to wealth. Within 90 days, these first-timers earned more than $5,000 in cash. But that was just getting started. For within the following 12 months, they garnered more than $100,000. It changed their lives forever. Think of how an extra $100,000 or more could change your life and improve your family's future. What dreams have you put aside that $100,000 could reawaken?

NEW YORK

Challenge #3: Prove anyone can do it

I've become famous as America's leading expert on purchasing real estate with no money down. I've been interviewed in newspaper, and on radio and TV. In fact, Regis Philbin challenged me on the spot to prove my system worked for anyone. I selected a young woman right out of Regis' studio audience and guided this first-timer to earning more than $20,000 in 90 days. And now, I'd like to pull you out of your chair and invite you to discover why my powerful and internationally acclaimed Creating Wealth with Real Estate program has been so hugely rewarding for people across the country — and why it can also be your path to substantial wealth.

DONE

Your turn to succeed

Can you become a millionaire? Dozens of my students have. At the FREE preview of my workshop, you'll see real-life examples of how my powerful wealth creation strategies have helped people jump into making money right away.

Challenge #4: Make you my next millionaire! STARTS NOW!

I've proved time and again that my system can work just about anywhere, anytime, and for just about anyone — even people who are flat broke. Now, I'd like to prove it can work for you.

In fact, my big mouth could make you a millionaire. That's because I've challenged myself to create millionaires all across America. Yup, I went right for the "M" word: millionaire. Raised a few eyebrows with that one. But remember, you don't need money in the bank to buy real estate. You don't even need good credit. All you need is my Creating Wealth with Real Estate system and the personal gumption to go out and apply it.

Now it's your turn to take a step toward real wealth

The wealth is out there. I will show you how it's possible to find it and grab it. Take a life-changing step toward financial independence for yourself and your family today. The road (it's more of a superhighway actually) to millionaire status begins right here. Right now. I'm hoping to create at least 1,000 millionaires. And I'd like to count you among them. There's no telling when the free preview of my workshop will be back in your area because it's simply impossible for me to bring my famous workshop to every city. Grab this unique opportunity to discover hidden wealth opportunities in real estate.

Bring someone you care about

If you have a friend or family member who wants to increase their wealth, bring them to this FREE empowering event. I believe there's never been a better time to invest in real estate. Forecasts call for soaring demand for homes and rising prices. At this free event, you'll see how it's possible to ride this historic trend to personal riches.

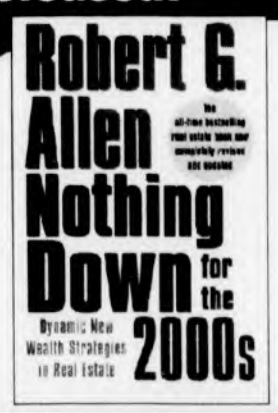
True Stories. True Success.

"Right now, I have a positive cash flow of $2,800 on one property."
— Richard Douglas, New Jersey

"We didn't take anything out of our pocket, and we bought a $250,000 property that gives us a $900 monthly cash flow."
— Guy Burns, Nevada

"I bought two pieces of property and made $25,000 in 90 days. It's so easy to do this stuff, it's amazing."
— Gary Harris, Missouri

"These are proven methods — they work. You can make $25,000 to $35,000 in a matter of 60 days or less."
— Preston Fleming, Illinois



"I just sold my first project; my net profit after all costs was $65,000. I received the check on my 40th birthday."
— Henning Van Deusen-Jensen, California

"Today has been the best day of our real estate careers. We sold our fourth house. This will put our net worth to around $1,000,000."
— John (Chuck) Neuschafer, Georgia

You will discover it's possible to:

- Buy prime real estate without a penny of your own money
- Acquire properties at below market value and put the difference in your pocket
- Profit in unexpected ways from some of the lowest mortgage rates in decades
- Generate immediate cash flow
- Turn your retirement account back into the comfy nest egg it's supposed to be
- Locate hugely lucrative properties nobody else knows about
- Find fantastic foreclosure properties before they ever hit the courthouse steps
- Build substantial monthly income

On December 15th of last year, we began to fill up our New Bedford warehouse with Christmas Decorations. That's the time of year that stores, both big and small, realize that they've sold all the Christmas decorations they're going to...and begin to worry about things like cash flow and warehouse space and quarterly reports. And that's when Sharon (our Seasonal Merchant) swoops in and solves their problems with cash. All throughout the year she collects more from bankruptcies, insurance losses, and manufacturers overruns.

For the past week or so, she's been sending those accumulated Christmas treasures to our stores: everything from 9-foot lighted trees to tiny ornament hangers ...EVERYTHING in the way of Christmas decorations you've seen from exclusive catalogs to the local five-and-dime, EXCEPT they're carrying prices from 50% to 71% off what they usually sell for. If you decorate for Christmas, start at Building #19.

DIABETIC'S INCREASED RISK OF HEARING LOSS

Those with Type II diabetes can add hearing loss to the long list of complications that can potentially stem from their condition. This finding comes from an ongoing Department of Veteran Affairs study of nearly seven hundred members of the armed forces. When researchers examined these study participants, they found that those with Type II diabetes experienced age-related declines in hearing earlier than did non-diabetics. It is thought that the high blood sugar levels in diabetics could cause tiny blood vessels in the inner ear to narrow. This would, in turn, bring about a disruption of the normal reception of sound. This provides diabetics added incentive to bring their blood sugar under control and get regular hearing tests.

If you have questions about hearing deficits, hearing instruments, or evaluations, or if you just need to talk with a professional about your hearing concerns, we want you to know you are always welcome here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. Perhaps you have a hearing aid that sits in the back of a drawer somewhere instead of in your ear because it did not live up to its reputation. If so, bring it to us at 534 Main St. (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and let us see what we can do for you. PH: 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. If you have Type II diabetes, be sure to wear hearing protection in noisy environments at home and at work.

STM article could provide town with recall capabilities

Issue is expected to be a hot topic

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A citizens' petition which would allow the recall of elected officials by a majority vote could be one of the more highly discussed articles at Monday's Town Meeting, and residents are already divided on the issue.

On one side are those who say stripping an official of his or her post could cause undue embarrassment, and is not necessary. Still others say without the option of taking someone out of office, who could potentially be a detriment to the community, the town is in a dangerous position.

Article 16 is one of the last items of business on the Warrant, and would allow voters to adopt a recall provision similar to those used in 170 other cities and towns in Massachusetts, including Pembroke, Plymouth, Nantucket, and Hull. The article would need to be voted in at Town Meeting and then adopted by the Legislature, a process which can take several months or even years.

"I don't think it is in the best interest of the town."
— Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan

The Special Town Meeting gets underway at 7 p.m., Monday in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School.

Proponents for the article believe with the way town government is currently structured, a great deal of power is put in the hands of a few officials, for terms of up to five years. Without any way to intervene, the town can be left without means of correcting a bad situation, should an official not perform their duties as expected.

Louis Harvey, 465 King St., is one of the proponents of the article. At a meeting held with members of the Advisory Committee Wednesday, he explained a recall would be able to remedy certain situations, such as an elected official who participates in criminal activities, political misdeeds, or other inappropriate behavior, rather than allow that person to stay in public office. (The Advisory Committee was expected to take a position on the article last night (Thursday) after the Mariner went to press.)

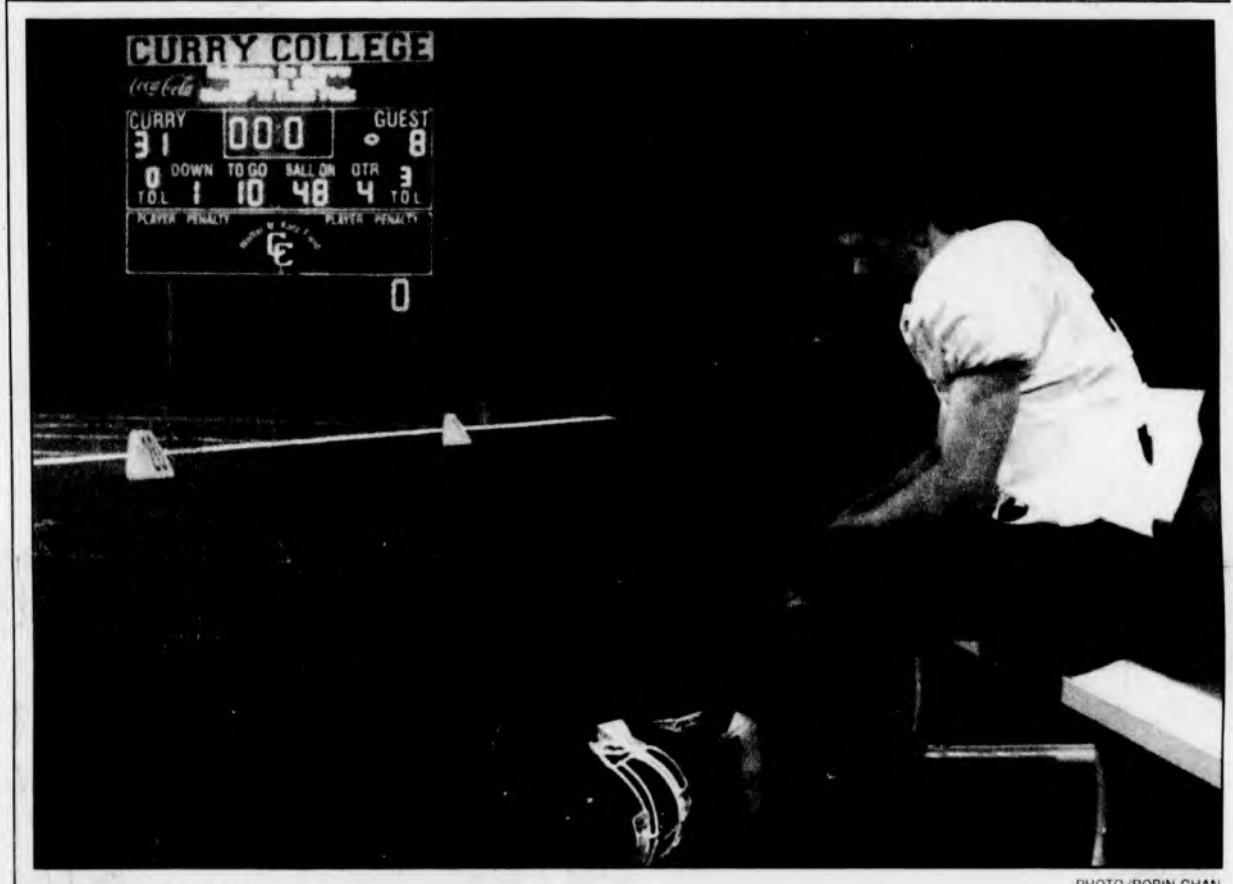
'Money, Monday' may be STM tune

Lots of figures before the voters

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With the Special Town Meeting only days away, copies of the warrants have been mailed, and voters are getting prepared to make their voices heard.

On Monday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium, votes will be cast on 16 articles, or items of business, covering everything from a recall petition to sewering Little Harbor, to renovating the Beechwood Ball Park.



Article one will ask the town to appropriate funds for unpaid bills from fiscal year '04, including a $93,000 Keyspan gas bill for the schools, an $11,600 bill for Tutela Engineering Associates, the Sewer Commission's engineering consultants, as well as a fiscal year '03 Tutela bill for $6,400.

Articles two and three will both deal with balancing the FY05 town budget. FY05 began July 1. Article two will ask the town to appropriate $210,000, which Town Manager Michael Buckley said the town needs to make up for a roughly $47,000 snow and ice deficit, $19,000 for town unemployment costs, $65,000 for school unemployment costs, and $80,000 for revenue estimates which came in lower than were estimated.

Through article three, voters will also be asked to appropriate $409,469. Individual items to be paid include:

- Increasing the general expenses for the Director of Finance by $5,000 for technology upgrades. Computers had been wracked with worms and viruses, which needed to be taken care of, and a backup device for the server was purchased.
- Increasing the Board of Assessors general expenses by $5,000 to pay for a re-evaluation and certification from the state.
- Increasing the Reserve Fund by $67,000 to cover FY05 unemployment costs for the

Caring touches soldiers

Patrick Hurney was on the front lines when the war in Iraq began in March 2003. He was there for the first six months of the war and received a package one day from an address that surprised him. It was from an old high school teacher.

"It didn't matter who it was or where it came from, it showed people cared, that you have love ones waiting for you back home," he said.

Standing near the wall of a basement level room of Pembroke Town Hall, Hurney told members of Pembroke Cares, a military support group, what their efforts really mean to the troops serving their country.

Sexual harassment suit settled

Insurance pays $60K to former employee

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town's liability insurance carrier has settled with former Administrative Assistant to the Town Manager Nicole N. Bartlett, who claims she was sexually harassed by a public official.

A document obtained by the Mariner through a public records request shows the town's insurance provider, MIAA (a self-insured pool of the Massachusetts Municipal Association), settled the case with Bartlett Sept. 28, and in total, $77,176 has been paid relating to Bartlett's claim. It is estimated roughly $60,000 will be paid to Bartlett directly.

The document does not say who the public official was nor does it detail Bartlett's allegations.

Attorney Leonard Kesten of Brody, Hardoon, Perkins and Kesten, is retained by the town's insurance company to defend claims. Kesten said fees in the $77,000 figure include not only the settlement money given to Bartlett, but his fees, fees for claims adjusters, and any other money the company spent on the case. Town Manager Michael Buckley said because the town receives figures for amounts paid out by the company on a quarterly basis, as well as totals paid to date but not a breakdown for the category of payments, he is not sure how the funds have been paid out. However, he said it is likely Bartlett received around $60,000.

Selectman Rob Spofford — who is president of the Spofford Group, an insurance brokerage firm — said it is important to note the town has no authority to negotiate settlements. Once a claim comes in, the town submits it to its insurance provider, and all duties to defend are put in the hands of the company. He added, when the insurance company is in the process of negotiating a settlement on behalf of the town, town officials are not allowed to comment on the settlement specifics, as it could "prejudice the company's right to settle." He said if the town affects the negotiation process, "The insurance company can take the coverage away."

Although Bartlett has received the money from the town's insurance provider, it won't be nearly enough to pay back money she allegedly stole from a former employer. Charges recently surfaced alleging Bartlett stole more than $200,000 from the Boston Children's Museum, and her resignation in Cohasset soon followed. The museum has accused Bartlett of forging and cashing more than 400 checks against the museum's payroll account between October 1998 and March 2003.

As a result of the charges against Barlett, the town requested a reserve fund transfer of $12,500 to hire Melanson Heath & Company, PC to conduct a forensic audit. To date, nothing suspicious has been reported by the company. Selectmen said if all goes well, they anticipate the audit to be completed by the first of the year.

Bartlett was hired by former Town Manager Mark Haddad to serve as his confidential Administrative Assistant. In that role, she was responsible for overseeing both the town and school payrolls, all employee benefits, and the town and school retirement systems. Bartlett's resignation was accepted by Buckley Sept. 27. Buckley was appointed Acting Town Manager after Haddad's abrupt resignation May 5.

Shortly after Bartlett's resignation, information surfaced that Haddad may have hired Bartlett,

ZBA vacancy

Jane Goedecke has resigned from the Zoning Board of Appeals, leaving one vacant seat on the board. Residents who would like to be considered for the position are asked to send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

CEA requests

At the Special Town Meeting, the Council on Elder Affairs will ask the town for $10,000 worth of new computers. Director of the CEA Kathy Bryanton said the computers her staff currently use are experiencing severe technical difficulties almost every day, and it has gotten to the point where it is easier for her staff to write by hand, rather than use the technology. She said, however, having clients' records on the computer is a must, and that information needs to be password protected, which will require the computers to work properly via a network.

In addition, she said the current computers are operating on different interfaces which are not compatible, and the CEA needs upgrades to get its computers back on track. The package for the new computers will also include the formation of a new Web site as well as a service contract.

Egan trained by FEMA

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security's Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has just completed training for Robert Egan, Building Commissioner of Cohasset, at its National Emergency Training Center. Homeland Security trains thousands of Americans at this facility each year to enhance the ability of communities to manage significant emergencies and disasters, both manmade an natural.

"Homeland Security trains thousands of firefighters, emergency service personnel, government officials and private citizens every year. This training helps better secure the homeland - saving lives, protecting property and enhancing disaster planning, response and recovery across the country," said Michael D. Brown, Under Secretary of Homeland Security for Emergency Preparedness and Response. "Graduates of these training programs make a major contribution back at home, in communities such as Cohasset."

Egan completed the Managing Floodplain Development through the National Flood Insurance Program course in Emmitsburg, Maryland, on Nov. 19. This course is designed to provide an organized training opportunity for local officials responsible for administering their local floodplain management ordinance. The course focuses on the National Flood Insurance Program and concepts of floodplain management, maps and studies, ordinance administration, and the relationship between floodplain management and flood insurance.

On March 1, 2003, FEMA became part of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. FEMA's continuing mission within the new department is to lead the effort to prepare the nation for all hazards an effectively manage federal response and recovery efforts following any national incident. FEMA also initiates proactive mitigation activities, trains first responders, and manages Citizen Corps, the National Flood Insurance Program and the U.S. Fire Administration.

SEWER EXISTING RESIDENTS FIRST!

ATTEND TOWN MEETING DECEMBER 6TH AND VOTE "YES" ON ARTICLE 8 TO END EXISTING POLLUTION PROBLEMS AND NEIGHBORHOOD HEALTH RISKS

WHAT WARRANT ARTICLE 8 MEANS: REQUIRES TOWN COMPLIANCE WITH THE REQUEST OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL AND DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION (D.E.P.) TO COMMIT TO, AND AGREE TO INCORPORATE INTO THE SECOND AMENDED FINAL JUDGMENT, THE PLAN AND SCHEDULE FOR THE SEWERING OF EXISTING RESIDENCES IN THE LITTLE HARBOR/ATLANTIC AVENUE WATERSHED. COHASSET UPDATED AND SUBMITTED THIS PLAN AND SCHEDULE, AS REQUIRED, TO THE D.E.P. IN FEBRUARY, 2004. THE TOWN'S PLAN AND SCHEDULE CALL FOR CONSTRUCTION OF THIS SEWER SYSTEM TO START BY SPRING, 2007, AND BE COMPLETED BY SUMMER, 2009, INCLUDING THE FINAL EXPANSION OF THE CENTRAL TREATMENT PLANT.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

HISTORY AND BACKGROUND

Q. WHAT WAS THE COURT ORDER COHASSET CONSENTED TO, WHEN AND STATUS?

A. In 1979, the State/D.E.P. determined Cohasset was polluting some ponds and the coastal waters, especially Little Harbor, with high levels of fecal coliform. Cohasset consented to a Court Order to end the pollution, which comes from old/underperforming septic systems. Over recent years, parts of Town have been sewered, but Little Harbor (LH) watershed, a major source of coastal pollution, has not been addressed. The State/D.E.P. have exhausted their patience. All parties agree sewering LH is the most efficient, cost effective approach to end the pollution. The State/D.E.P. have approved Cohasset's Plan & Schedule for sewering LH and insist it be implemented. The prevalence of ledge/poor soil in the LH area are "hostile" to septic systems—sewering is the long-term solution.

Q. WHAT'S THE PRINCIPAL POLLUTION SOURCE?

A. All parties have determined the main sources of the fecal coliform pollution, in addition to rainwater runoff, are obsolete and failed septic systems within the LH watershed which drain to LH and coastal waters, causing violations of the Clean Water Act. There are 420 homes in the LH watershed, about 1,500 residents, including 400 seniors.

Q. DO ALL PARTIES AGREE THAT SEWERING IS THE OPTIMUM SOLUTION, AND AGREE ON A SCHEDULE TO IMPLEMENT?

A. Yes. In February, 2004, the Town submitted an updated Plan & Schedule for the sewering which the State/D.E.P. approved and requested the Town to commit to by including the Plan & Schedule into the Amended Final Court Judgment. The Town has not made that commitment—to the dismay of the Attorney General/D.E.P. They are distressed by Town proposals to use the future sewer capacity to benefit new housing developers rather than correcting the existing pollution problems in the LH watershed.

Q. IS IT FEASIBLE TO END POLLUTION IN THE LH WATERSHED BY REPLACING THE EXISTING 400+ SEPTIC SYSTEMS?

A. No. The ledge/terrain in the LH watershed adversely impact performance of septic systems and costs involved would be at least double the sewer cost, with no assurance that very low fecal coliform levels now allowed in coastal waters would ever be met.

Q. WHERE ARE WE ON SEWERING LH WATERSHED?

A. At three recent Town meetings, voters appropriated about $500,000 for preliminary planning/engineering work on this sewer expansion, which has been completed. In February, 2004, the Town submitted an updated Plan & Schedule for sewer implementation, with completion date set at summer, 2009. This past June, Town officials refused a request by the State/D.E.P. to comply with the Second Amended Final Judgment by incorporating the Town's Schedule into that judgment.

Q. DOES OUR EXISTING TREATMENT PLANT HAVE CAPACITY FOR THE LH WATERSHED SEWAGE FLOW?

A. No. The plant is currently operating at its design B.O.D. removal capacity. Expanding the plant to maximum capacity, which is just enough to handle the LH watershed sewage flow, is part of the Town's Plan & Schedule for sewering LH watershed.

CURRENT ISSUES AND CONCERNS

Q. THE STATE/D.E.P. APPROVED COHASSET'S PLAN & SCHEDULE TO SEWER LH WATERSHED TO COMPLY WITH THE FINAL JUDGMENT. WHY ARE THEY DISTRESSED AND CONSIDERING FINES AND OTHER SANCTIONS FOR COHASSET AND RESIDENTS?

A. Cohasset officials recently declined the State/D.E.P. request to incorporate the Town's schedule for sewering LH watershed into the Court's Final Judgment. This refusal is viewed as reneging to end the pollution and lack of intent to ever comply with the Court Consent Order. The State/D.E.P. officials are aware of these same Cohasset officials' plans to divert limited sewer capacity to private developers of new housing.

Q. HOW DO WE END THIS IMPASSE THAT EXPOSES COHASSET AND RESIDENTS TO PUNITIVE SANCTIONS THAT THE STATE/D.E.P. ARE CONSIDERING?

A. Citizens' Petition Article 8 on the Town Meeting Warrant is the answer. This Article was signed by over 400 Town residents vs. the 100 voter signatures required. Signatures of well over 1,000 voters could easily have been obtained if required. This Article mandates that Town officials comply with the State's/D.E.P.'s request and incorporate the Town's Schedule into the Court Final Judgment. In reality, passage of this Article 8 mandates an end to the fecal coliform pollution and its human health risks, and precludes diverting any of the limited future sewer capacity to new housing developers. Sewer existing residents first, the residents whose taxes helped pay for the treatment plant and the sewer system, which has always been the policy!

Q. WHAT IS THE IMPACT IF ARTICLE 8 FAILS?

A. Possible fines against our Town of $10,000 per day for non-compliance and, among other possible sanctions, State mandated immediate septic system Title V inspections for the LH watershed and perhaps other nearby neighborhoods. Most existing systems would fail Title V and the documented repair/replace cost ranges $30,000+ up to $80,000 per septic system. These costs would exceed $20 million in the LH watershed alone, with no assurance of meeting the now stringent fecal coliform levels in force.

Q. WHAT'S WRONG WITH SEWERING TREATED WASTEWATER FROM A LARGE HOUSING PROJECT?

A. Several things. The State/D.E.P. are against such misuse of an expensive treatment plant and its primary function to treat sewage. Secondly, allow one developer to do this and other developers will have legal rights to follow. The plant's volume capacity would be quickly reached and lead to under-use of the B.O.D. removal capacity. Finally, harbor eco-imbalance from increased flow of clean water discharge is adverse to the fish/shellfish population.

Q. WHAT IS THE SIGNIFICANT "AMNESTY" BENEFIT GRANTED BY THE D.E.P. ONCE A FIRM DATE IS ESTABLISHED FOR SEWER AVAILABILITY?

A. The D.E.P. customarily grants an amnesty from Title V septic system inspections, even in change of ownership situations, to homes in an area, such as the LH watershed, once a future firm date is set for sewering the area within a reasonable time period. The exception is failed septic systems that become a local public health hazard.

FAIRNESS – SEWER EXISTING RESIDENTS FIRST!

COMMON SENSE – END EXISTING POLLUTION FIRST!

Pump engine tank cradle rusted out

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With 10 years under its belt, engine one, the fire department's pump engine, is already in need of some TLC. Refurbishing the engine, which will cost $50,000, will be a decision presented to voters, as it is included in article four as a capital expense on the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting Warrant.

"They just don't make them like they used to."
— Fire Chief Roger Lincoln

The fire department has a fleet of seven vehicles, including a ladder truck, ambulance, three pump engines, the chief's car, and a heavy-duty pickup truck. The pump engines are on a 21-year rotating replacement schedule, meaning one is slated for replacement every seven years.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln explained while the department does not need a brand-new engine, the cradle which holds the 500-gallon water tank has an enormous amount of rust, and needs to be replaced. "They just don't make them like they used to," he said.

According to the replacement schedule, Lincoln was slated to gain a replacement for the chief's car this year. However, in light of the situation with the troubled pump engine, he offered to swap replacement schedules. "It's well taken care of. I don't drive fast," he said of his car, a 1994 Ford Explorer, adding it will be absolutely fine to drive another year.

New state motorized scooter law welcomed

Helmet rules also change

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

You need to think again if a motorized scooter is on your child's Christmas list.

A new state law makes it illegal for anyone without a valid driver's license or learner's permit to drive motorized scooters or a motorized bicycle.

"It's critical that parents model good safety behavior."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Violators can be subject to fines.

A good item, however, to add to a child's list is a bicycle helmet. Helmets are now required for anyone on a motorized scooter or bicycle, and anyone 16 or under on a regular bicycle, in-line skates, scooter or skateboard. The bicycle helmet law used to include anyone 12 or under.

Police welcome the new laws because they'll help with what is a public safety issue.

Officers note that serious injury is far more likely if a child falls while biking or "Roller-blading" and does not have a helmet.

"It's critical that parents model good safety behavior," Police Chief James Hussey said. "When many of us were young, helmets we not a part of the mix. But the facts are that use of a helmet reduces the potential of a life-threatening or life-long injury from a fall or accident."

Police are also happy to have some enforcement powers over motorized scooters, which have become a magnet for a lot of youngsters, who are too young to drive. Motorized scooters are the source of many complaints.

Scooters have handlebars and are usually propelled by one-foot. The motorized variety are either electric or gas powered and don't need human propulsion.

Hussey said Cohasset police will work with the parents of those found in violation of the helmet and motorized scooter/bike laws. The scooter law also includes not operating a motorized bike or scooter after dark and observing a 25 mph speed limit.

He said when police find children riding bicycles, in-line skates or skateboard without helmets, they talk to the child's parents to make sure they are knowledgeable about the law.

"We want to make sure parents know that helmets are mandatory," Hussey said.

Safety Officer Christy Tarantino said the police department has roughly 50 helmets in various sizes for those who may not to be able to afford to purchase one. They are available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Rosalie Berquist, Prevention Program Director for the Massachusetts Brain Injury Association, welcomes the extension of the helmet law to age 17. However, adults are also vulnerable to brain injury from a fall without a helmet.

"So many people think that helmets are just for kids," Berquist says. "However, I always point out the majority of people killed in bicycle crashes are adults.

"This has to do with the laws of science. Adults are higher from the ground and therefore have a greater distance to fall. They weigh more than kids and are probably riding faster."

Berquist says few people understand the devastating consequences of traumatic brain injury to the survivor.

"But, it must be remembered that the whole family is impacted when one of their members is injured," she said.

Why wear a bicycle helmet:

- Helmets can prevent 75 percent of bicycle fatalities among children
- Up to 88 percent of critical head and brain injuries can be prevented through use of a bicycle helmet
- Universal bicycle helmet use by children 4-15 can prevent up to 45,000 head injuries and 55,000 scalp and face injuries annually.
- Up to $142 million could be saved each year in direct and indirect health-care costs of 85 percent of all child bicyclists wore helmets for one year

Respondents concerned about teen drinking, house parties

Survey: police doing a good job

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The results are in.

And overall, Cohasset citizens feel safe and think their police department is doing a good job.

Concerns that reach the top of the list should come as no surprise: unsupervised house parties and underage drinking, and speeding motor vehicles in town.

Answers to a recent Cohasset Police Department survey, launched by Chief James Hussey, have been tabulated. The chief hopes to use the results as a stepping off point for the Police Advisory Council that will include a cross section of the community and provide a "think-tank," so to speak, to offer some positive changes.

Hussey said the survey validated the concerns expressed to him when he took over the reins in the police department last spring. At that time, he gleaned from community receptions and talking to residents that under-age alcohol use and traffic were issues that needed to be addressed.

He is pleased that most who answered the survey described the department as professional and friendly.

"But they'd like to see more officers out of their cars and would like to get to know the officers more," he said.

The anonymous survey — containing myriad questions ranging from whether domestic violence is a problem to whether police respond to calls in a timely manner — and the new advisory council will hopefully help create more "transparency" in the police department, Hussey said. "We're going to try and do a better job of getting information out there," he said.

Hussey said the department received 128 completed questionnaires. The survey was printed in the Mariner, at no cost, and copies were made available around town.

"We gave people ample opportunity to respond," said Hussey, although he initially expected an onslaught of responses because of recent controversy in town involving the department.

"Things have quieted down," he said. "When they do, people often think 'things were never that bad anyway.'"

Hussey said one of the jobs of the new Police Advisory Council, which will start meeting after the holidays, is to see if opinion and perception reflect reality in terms of the police. In other words, some residents think there may be a big drug problem at school – when there may not be.

He said the survey contains a wealth of information. Hussey was also pleased to see that respondents feel Cohasset is a safe place. "People feel safe in the business district, beach and walking in the woods," he said.

Highlights of the survey are as follows:

	N=122
Highly likely	0.8%
Moderately likely	13.9%
Slightly likely	68.9%
Not at all	16.4%

Moderately likely	4.9%
Slightly likely	30.9%
Not at all	64.2%

A sample of the survey results:

7. In your opinion, how likely is it that you will be the victim of a property crime in Cohasset over the next five years?

8. In your opinion, how likely is it that you will be the victim of a violent crime in Cohasset over the next five years?

Crime, safety and quality of life issues

• More than 85 percent felt unsupervised house parties and underage drinking are somewhat or a serious problem in town;

• More than 77 percent believe speeding motor vehicles are somewhat or a serious problem;

• Between 80 and 90 percent feel that drug-alcohol abuse, poor parenting and lack of respect have had a moderate to large influence with crime in the past five years;

• More than 85 percent feel safe from property crime while more than 95 percent feel safe from violent crime;

• Over 80 percent feel safe in their neighborhoods, the parks, beaches and shopping districts;

• Over 80 percent believe that illegal drugs are somewhat or a serious problem in the high school and middle school.

Feelings about the police department

• More than 78 percent believe that police presence in their neighborhood is appropriate for the need;

• More than 75 percent find information in the newspaper useful, but more than 70 percent have no opinion or disagree that the department publicizes its services or programs adequately;

• More than 74 percent feel that police officers respond to emergencies in a timely manner;

• More than 76 percent believe officers look professional in appearance;

• More than 80 percent feel phone calls to the station are handled professionally and courteously.

Demographics of respondents

• More than 75 percent are over 45 years old;

• Almost 60 percent have lived in town more than 21 years;

• Almost 60 percent have no children under the age of 21 in the household

Comments

• What do you like best about the Cohasset Police Department? A majority of comments related to professionalism, friendliness and quick responses by most of the officers.

• What would you most like to see improved at the CPD? There were three areas that a majority of the comments could be categorized: officers' attitude and training; communication and outreach with citizens; and dealing with traffic control issues.

• What are the most significant values or characteristics that a Cohasset Police Officer should possess:? The majority of these comments related to officers being professional, courteous, honest and fair.

• How can the CPD improve its communication with citizens about crime and police services? There were two areas where most comments relate: use of a newsletter, a column in the Cohasset Mariner and more information in the police log, as well as having officers come out on the street and meet with citizens.

"I'm looking forward to working with the men and women of our police department and the people of Cohasset in using this information to improve the services we provide," Hussey said.

schools. By including the money in the reserve fund, money can be released as it is spent.

- Increasing the legal budget general expenses by $60,000.
- Increasing the police department general expenses by $4,000 to cover the cost of printing new sets of rules and regulations as well as purchasing new handcuffs for officers.
- Increasing the school department general expenses by $93,500 to cover the energy shortfall for FY05.
- Increasing the South Shore Vocational Technical High School regional assessment fee by $27,750 due to increased enrollment.
- Increasing the DPW general expenses by $12,000 for field maintenance.
- Increasing the DPW building maintenance budget by $30,000 to repair the roof of the police station (only the fire department roof was redone with the construction project), replace gutters at the town library, and install HVAC equipment at the police and fire station.
- Increasing the benefits and insurance pension assessment line item by $70,219 due to the face that the town's assessment went up over what was estimated 12 months ago.
- Increasing the benefits and insurance property and liability line item by $35,000 to pay the deductibles from insurance claims (see related story).

Article four will ask the town to appropriate $194,000 for capital requests which includes purchasing two police department cruisers for $56,000, as well as $5,000 for new holsters. There has also been a change in firearms at the station, and officers need new safety holsters for.40 caliber firearms as well as safety belts.

The fire department will ask for $40,000 to cover the cost of refurbishing a rusting pump engine and the schools will ask for a $15,000 appropriation for a school utility vehicle. The DPW will ask for $62,000 for two new public works vehicles. The Council on Elder Affairs will ask for $6,000 for a new shuttle van as well as $10,000 for new computers.

Voters will also be asked to approve $18,900 through article five, to be paid to fire department employees as part of a collective bargaining agreement.

Article six will ask the town to take action on Community Preservation Committee recommendations. At the time the Mariner went to press, Buckley said final motions had not yet been received, but items thought to be up for consideration on the Warrant include renovating the two entrances at Town Hall, funding the cost of a consultant which will help the town draft a new maintenance plan for Sandy Beach, and providing funds to reconstruct and improve the Beechwood Ball Park.

If the CPC takes on the ball park project, article 11 which would have asked the town to provide the funding will be indefinitely postponed. Article seven, which would have asked voters to authorize the expansion of the Central sewer district to include the Cook Estate property, has also been indefinitely postponed (see related story).

Voters will however, still have a say in the future sewer connections for the town, as article eight will allow them to decide whether to implement a schedule for sewering Little Harbor into the Second Amended Final Judgment. The Second Amended Final Judgment was handed down by the state as a result of the town's violating the Federal Clean Waters Act in 1979, and in turn, the state gave the town a judgment, followed by a second amended judgment, which the town needed to comply with, or face fines of up to $10,000 per day (see related story).

Improvements to the seawall on Border Street between Atlantica and the Mill River Boatyard will be made if the town approves article nine, allowing $600,000 to be allocated for engineering, permitting, rebuilding, reconstructing, and making repairs. Fifty percent of the money will be reimbursed by the state.

To help bring non-union employees up to the same level of longevity pay as union employees, the town will be asked to approve article 10, and allocate $3,000 to the appropriate town departments.

The Water Commission has two items of business on the Warrant with articles 12 and 13. Article 12 asks the town to authorize a change in use for a parcel of land located in the Woodside Cemetery. Acting in its role as Cemetery Commissioners, the Board of Selectmen has found the land will not be needed for cemetery purposes, and the town will need to ratify that decision. The plot of land would be used to house a pump station.

Article 13 will ask the town to appropriate $2,000,000 for improvements to the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, including cleaning and lining water pipes, replacing water pipes, capital maintenance, and other improvements to wells, storage tanks, and water distribution systems, acquiring property, and other measures to ensure the safety of the public drinking water supply.

The town will also be asked to add $1,000 to the Town Clerk's salary through article 14, as a result of her completing the necessary coursework and training to become certified by the Massachusetts Town Clerk's Association.

Article 15 will ask residents to allow the town to enter into a second 25-year agreement with neighboring towns, to share the cost of purchasing, equipping, and maintaining an unmanned ambulance.

Residents will also be asked to weigh in on article 16, a somewhat controversial citizens' petition, which would allow the town to recall an elected official (see related story).

The last item of Town Meeting business will ask the town to allocate $5,000 to allow Cohasset to participate in the South Shore Greenscape Program, by promoting environmentally friendly law care practices.

The Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Copies of the Warrant have been mailed out to residents' homes, but are also available at Town Hall and the Town Library. Extra Warrants will also be available at the High School during the meeting.

For example, Harvey said if a public official was found guilty of a crime unrelated to his or her position in office, such as wife beating, with the laws as they currently stand, that person could remain in office. If an official campaigning for the School Committee wins an election based on the platform that he will improve education then votes to cut 20 teachers from the schools, currently that person would be allowed to continue cutting teachers for the next three years. If an official uses the power of office to enhance the value of his property, he could continue to "feather his own nest" for years before his term is up.

Harvey point outs Cohasset is fortunate to be in a position right now where situations such as those proposed have not yet occurred. He and the proponents of the article believe the town would be well served to adopt the petition before a problem arises.

However, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said he does not think the recall petition is a good idea.

"I don't think it is in the best interest of the town," he said, adding the act of collecting signatures to initiate the process is all that needs to be done in order to start a controversy. "It's humiliating to the individual and humiliating to their family," when a recall is set in motion, he said. He added because the recall provision has no criteria for recalling a public official, "If you didn't like someone's vote," on an issue, it could potentially lead to a recall of that person. If there was a set criteria which had to be met in order to begin the recall process, Sullivan said the article might make more sense, but as it stands, he believes, "It's not healthy," for the town.

However, Harvey said it was a deliberate decision to not include a set of criteria because as issues come up, they would constantly have to update the provision.

Recalling an official is a very involved six-step process which Harvey said provides all the checks and balances to ensure only those officials the majority of people in town feel have significantly violated their duties are recalled. He said the process begins with an application for recall forms, which requires 100 signatures. From there, the 100 signatures are handed in to the Town Clerk, who then has 20 days to provide blank recall forms. Once the forms are provided, those looking to recall an official have an additional 20 days to collect signatures from 10 percent of the registered voting population in town, which is more than 500 signatures.

Once the 500-plus signatures are handed in to the Town Clerk, she has five days to certify the signatures. Once certified, it takes 25 more signatures to nominate candidates for the position to be filled, and there is a window of 64 days until nominations must be received. The final step for a recall is holding a special election, scheduled between 60 and 90 days from the date all nominations were received, unless another election is already scheduled within 100 days. Passing a recall requires a majority vote.

Sullivan said he believes recalling a public official doesn't make sense because "No one person in town has that much power." Because all boards have at least three people, no single person can "make decisions independently," he said.

However, Harvey said the recall petition can be used to oust an entire board if the community chooses, and it has happened in other towns.

Harvey acknowledged there are some concerns about the petition in town, including the possibility it could target officials currently in office. However, he said it is very unlikely any current officials will become targets of a recall, first because it will take some time before it is passed by the Legislature, and second because all proponents of the recall provision support amnesty for all officials in their current term of office. In fact, an amendment to the article as included on the Warrant has been drafted which will include a stipulation to prohibit a recall petition "to be filed against any officer during a term in office that commenced at any time before Dec. 6, 2004 until after Dec. 6, 2007."

For those who believe the recall provision doesn't do anything to solve current problems in town, such as budget shortfalls, sewer connections, lawsuits, pollution or senior housing, Harvey argues the petition is important because it will solve the problems of the future. Because the town does not know what is to come in the years ahead, he believes it makes sense to protect the town from what might be.

Another argument against the recall provision is the estimated cost of a special election. However, Harvey said that cost, which is roughly $3,500, is a small price to pay when compared to the millions of dollars that can be lost from "unscrupulous officials" being allowed to stay in office.

Town Meeting will be held Monday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Copies of the Warrant are available at Town Hall and the library, and will also be available at the meeting.

Cook Estate won't take center stage

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Rallying had already begun and sewering the Cook Estate was expected to be a hot topic at Monday's Special Town Meeting, but now, those wishing to formally voice their opinion on the matter will have to wait, as the article has been put on hold

In light of the controversy sewering the project has spawned, members of the Council on Elder Affairs and Senior Housing Committee have asked the Board of Selectmen to indefinitely postpone article seven, which would have authorized the expansion of the existing Central Sewer district to encompass the Cook property. By including the property in the Central District, it would have become eligible for a sewer connection, providing adequate capacity to accommodate the project could be found at the town's wastewater treatment plant.

"The town was becoming polarized for no reason," said Senior Housing Committee member Joe Nedrow, as a result of the project's looking to tie-in to municipal sewer. As a result of preliminary soil tests conducted on the Cook property, located off Sohier Street, the land was expected to be able to accommodate an on-site wastewater system for the proposed 95 units of housing. However, more extensive soil tests concluded the soils would not be suitable, and alternate means of disposal were explored. Recently, developers from Northland Residential, the company the town is working with to develop the site, said municipal sewer is the only means of wastewater disposal suitable for the site.

Nedrow said neither his committee nor the Council on Elder Affairs had thought sewering the Cook project would be seen as an "either/or" deal, where moving the project ahead would mean others could not progress. Some residents have been concerned sewering the Cook Estate would usurp Little Harbor's place in line for a sewer connection, which has been waiting for a connection for years.

In addition, the question still remains as to whether hooking up the Cook Estate would legally require the town to consider both the Cedarmere and Avalon developments for connections as well.

Avalon — a 200-unit non age-restricted development slated for Route 3A across from Good Sport— began pursuing a connection and was told it would be denied due to a lack of capacity, and went ahead with alternatives in good faith.

Cedarmere — a 105-unit senior housing development slated for Beechwood Street — applied for a connection and was denied, based on the fact that the Sewer Commission said adequate capacity does not exist and it would need time to further study those homes which have hooked up, to determine whether the current flows will increase as homeowners get used to the system. Cedarmere developers have appealed the Sewer Commission's decision.

Director of the Council on Elder Affairs Kathy Bryanton said developing senior housing in town has been a goal the CEA has been trying to accomplish for the past 15 years. She said years ago, a survey was sent to seniors in town, and data collected showed building senior housing was among one of the highest concerns, as many who are looking to downsize from the family home don't have the option of staying in town because they are "house rich and cash poor." In addition, "Not all people will be making a lot of money on their homes when they sell," she said.

Jane Bancroft Cook's heirs have been handling her estate since she passed away in July 2002. Funds from the sale of the property have already been earmarked for a number of charities.

When the opportunity to develop on the Cook Estate came along, "It really made sense," said Bryanton, because of the parcel's location, which is in close proximity to Stop and Shop, the South Shore Music Circus, the town library, the CEA headquarters, and the downtown area. In addition, she said the parcel allows for housing to be built which is spread out enough to make it comfortable for those who live there. "We wanted it to be a project the whole town could embark upon together," she said, adding "We never intended to pit one group against another."

Bryanton said making the decision to move out of the family home is a big one, and most people who do move intend to stay put at their new destination. "People are very mobile at 55 or 60, but once they decide to leave their home, they don't want to be moved around a lot. They're looking for a permanent place where they will want to stay," she said.

Nedrow said one of the caveats of postponing the article will be for the Board of Selectmen to continue working with other town boards in an effort to find a way to somehow solve the project's wastewater problems. "The trustees (of the Cook Estate) need to make a decision, and we thought if the article passed, it would give them tangible evidence we're still working on the project," he said. He added he hopes with the board's intent to continue its diligent efforts, the trustees will hold off a little while longer, and perhaps take the issue up again at the Annual Town Meeting this spring.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said within the next couple of weeks, he is going to meet with the trustees of the Cook Estate to try to extend the dates of the contract, with the intent of coming up with a wastewater plan for the site. "The Cook project has the unanimous vote of Town Meeting, it's just a matter of trying to find a wastewater solution," he said.

He said although he is not certain whether the heirs would charge the town for an additional extension, he said he "would hope not," but it will all depend on what is negotiated.

Depending on the solution that is found for the project, Sullivan said the issue may or may not have to go before Town Meeting in the future. He said if the solution is one that would require two parties to negotiate among themselves, Town Meeting would not need to be involved. Should the project tie-in to Hull's municipal sewer, there is the possibility the town's inter-municipal agreement would have to be modified, which may be a Town Meeting issue, but at this point, any solutions are only speculation.

"I think it's fine," the article is being postponed, he said, as the way it was written, it didn't have any teeth. Town Meeting cannot tell the Sewer Commission what to do, and Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said at a meeting held last week, in his view the article didn't accomplish what the town wants.

Insurance pays $60K to employee

salaried at $46,000 a year, knowing she had been fired from the Boston Children's Museum for alleged employee misconduct. Police Chief James Hussey said prior to Bartlett's being hired, Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon — at Haddad's request — completed a background check on Bartlett and as a result, "information was discovered that the employee had been terminated from their prior employment," although the specifics were unknown. Hussey said the information was then provided to Haddad, who advised the police department he would look into her background further.

Bartlett's sexual harassment claim, filed May 3, is one of seven currently being dealt with by the town's insurance carrier. Five of those claims have not yet been paid in full, therefore total awards are not available. Of the seven, six were filed by current or former employees of the town, and four of those claim sexual harassment.

Other claims

Another employee filed a complaint alleging sexual harassment by a public official on May 3, which was settled Sept. 24. The total amount paid including all fees associated with the claim is $74,798. The name of that employee has not been released.

The town's insurance carrier is also paying settlements for two complaints dispatchers filed with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, claiming they were sexually harassed on the job, although their circumstances were very different.

Barbara DeWolfe claims she was unfairly fired by Haddad, after requesting a stress leave due to harassment allegedly inflicted by a sergeant who regularly shared her shift. DeWolfe said she was uncomfortable when the sergeant would touch her in an inappropriate and unwelcome manner, and she did not feel comfortable being alone on shifts with him. She said she was also uncomfortable when he showed fellow officers vacation photos of himself naked. In addition, she said some officers watched adult-oriented cable channels, which also made her uncomfortable. However, the town says DeWolfe was fired because she had missed work due to child-care problems, had been reprimanded for attendance problems, and had already exhausted her sick time. [The sergeant has subsequently retired.]

Adrienne Davenport quit after she said she was falsely charged with having "too intimate" a relationship with a police officer while both were on duty. Davenport claims she left as a result of "outrageous and false accusations" and the intimidation she felt during a meeting with three other police officers.

Sgt. William Quigley, Det. Sgt. Greg Lennon and Officer Lisa Matos are all named in Davenport's complaint for sexually harassing her as a result of their accusing her of having an affair with a co-worker and for using their supervisory capacity to allegedly harass and intimidate her. She also charges Haddad with sexual harassment and intimidation by sending the officers to question her. Davenport charges former Chief Robert Jackson with aiding and abetting the harassment and for failing to stop it.

Sgt. William Quigley filed a civil suit against the town, claiming invasion of privacy, which the insurance company is settling. Haddad had placed Quigley and another officer, James McLean, on paid administrative leave Oct. 20, 2003. The officers claim the town's disciplinary action was in retaliation for their actions relative to Jackson's family, although Haddad denied that had anything to do with the disciplinary action. Quigley filed a civil suit against Haddad and Jackson personally and the town for interfering with his employment as a police officer and invading his privacy. The town hired a private detective to look into Quigley's background.

Former Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy has also filed a complaint against the town, claiming wrongful termination by Haddad, which is also being settled. Murphy, who was presented with a terse one-paragraph termination letter that did not include a reason for his firing, said he was escorted off town property in a police car without the ability to collect his personal belongings.

In addition to the complaints filed by current or former town employees, another complaint was filed Feb. 24, 2004 by an unnamed party, citing First Amendment violations.

The claims involving DeWolfe, Davenport, Quigley, Murphy and the unnamed party, who was not employed by the town, are still listed as open, therefore, it is not clear how much money they will receive in settlements. However, the town's insurance carrier has paid out $196,300 so far, including roughly $150,000 for the two closed sexual harassment claims, involving Bartlett and an unnamed town employee.

The town will be responsible for paying the deductibles for all seven claims, which together total $35,000. Paying that bill is included in Article 3 of the Town Meeting Warrant, which voters will be asked to approve at Monday's Special Town Meeting. Buckley said as a result of the claims, the town's liability portion of its property and liability insurance could increase by between 20 percent and 30 percent.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

FAMILY TIME TREASURED

I hope that everyone had a happy and safe Thanksgiving. We went to the Cape for the weekend and for us, to hear my son say that he was so happy being together with no phone calls, meetings or myself or my husband going to work and he wished that we never had to come home said it all to me. We need to somehow all look at our daily lives and realize that together time is so important and that we need to find the time and the ability to enjoy each moment that we have as families. The constant fast-paced schedule of all of our lives is not worth anything if we miss all of the little moments and greatness of our children and friends. The hard part is trying to figure it all out and how to get that time.....

BC HIGH HONORS

BC High recently announced that the following Cohasset residents achieved honors at the school. Christopher P. Barber '05; Andrew J. Flynn '05; Alexander G. Hunt '07; and Thomas J. Chase '08 achieved High Honors for the first quarter at Boston College High School. For High Honors a student must have at least a 3.80 quality point average.

Patrick B. Flynn '07 achieved Honors, receiving a Q.P.A. of at least 3.2.

Congratulations to all on these great recognitions.

THE SCIENCE OF PAINTING

The Cohasset Diversity Committee will sponsor a holiday event at the South Shore Arts Center, 3 N. Main St.,on Thursday, Dec. 9 from 7:30 - 9 p.m. Harvard Professor and Cohasset resident, Ubaldo DiBenedetto, will present Renaissance painting as a staircase having six steps, each a technical contribution to the conquest of reality - the chief objective of Renaissance painting.

Art critic Bernard Berenson once said that art is what we feel; the rest is science. Since it would be pretentious to teach what one should or should not feel, the lecture will deal with the "science" of painting. Special digital images and photographs will show the characteristics of each progressive step.

Questions and discussion will be welcomed. Light refreshments will be served, and harpist, Genevieve Poole will provide background music before and after the lecture and discussion.

Gen, a freshman at South Shore Vocational Technical High School, has been playing harp for five years and was featured at the March 2004 spring musical at First Parish Church. She plays a new Lyon & Healy pedal harp, studies with Stephanie Curcio of Straham, N.H., and enjoys a variety of musical styles, especially contemporary.

The Cohasset Diversity Committee runs programs in collaboration with other community groups, human services, and town services to promote respect for and to encourage understanding of each other's differences. The series is designed to bring together people with international backgrounds and/or interests in a variety of interesting forums. Topics for the 2004-2005 Speaker Series were drawn from suggestions by participants in earlier Cohasset Diversity Committee events. The Cohasset Diversity Committee 2004-2005 Speaker Series is made possible by individual donations and a matching grant from South Shore No Place For Hate. There is no admission charge.

OH BOY!

Nathaniel Mathias Palmer was born Nov. 17, 2004 to proud parents Heather and Nathaniel G. Palmer of Little Harbor Road. His entrance into the world has given very special meaning to Thanksgiving for his joyful grandparents: Pamela Palmer of Cohasset, Gregory and Ginny Palmer of Los Osos, Calif., and Michael and Janice Mathias of Mansfield. Welcome little Nathaniel!

Nathaniel Mathias Palmer was born Nov. 17, just in time for Thanksgiving.

XAVERIAN HONOR ROLL

Brother Daniel Skala, C.F.X., the Headmaster of Xaverian Brothers High School, is pleased to announce the honor roll for the First Marking Period of the 2004-2005 school year. The honor roll has different degrees: Ryken Honors - all grades of 90 or above; First Honors - all grades of 85 or above; and Second Honors - all grades of 80 or above. Cohasset Senior Mark Lewis, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin F. Lewis earned Second Honors. Keep up the good work, Mark!

WASSAIL!

The Unicorn Singers, under the direction of Hingham's Margo Euler, will present WASSAIL!, A concernt of Christmas Carols through the ages, on Friday Dec. 10 at 8 p.m. at St John's Church in Hingham, and on Sunday Dec. 12 at 4 p.m. at First Parish's Meeting House on Cohasset Common. The program will feature costumed members of the chorus performing in trios and quartets, and processing up and down aisles as the singers take audience members on a musical journey from the ancient carols of the Renaissance to the warm familiar Christmas songs of our own time. The audience will also join in the singing of many favorite carols. Tickets are available at the door for $15 or $12 in advance by calling 781-383-1100.

DECK THE HALLS!

Get your Fa-La-La's in tune and get ready to ring in the Holidays. The Deer Hill Holiday Concert will be held on Thursday, Dec. 9 at 7 p.m. in the Deer Hill gym. Grades 3-5 chorus and grade 5 band will perform.

SUPER LAWYER

Burns & Levinson LLP announced recently that Brian D. Bixby of Cohasset, along with 28 of its other Massachusetts-based lawyers were selected by an independent blue ribbon committee of their peers as Massachusetts "SuperLawyers." These lawyers are featured in the November issue of Boston Magazine and in the 2004 issue of the magazine, Massachusetts SuperLawyers, a publication of Law and Politics. Bixby was also listed as one of the Top 100 Massachusetts Super Lawyers in this nomination. At the time of selection, Burns & Levinson LLP had a total of 85 Massachusetts-based lawyers, 29 of whom were nominated as Massachusetts "SuperLawyers."

Brian D. Bixby

Brian Bixby practices in the areas of probate litigation, trusts and estates, and divorce and family law.

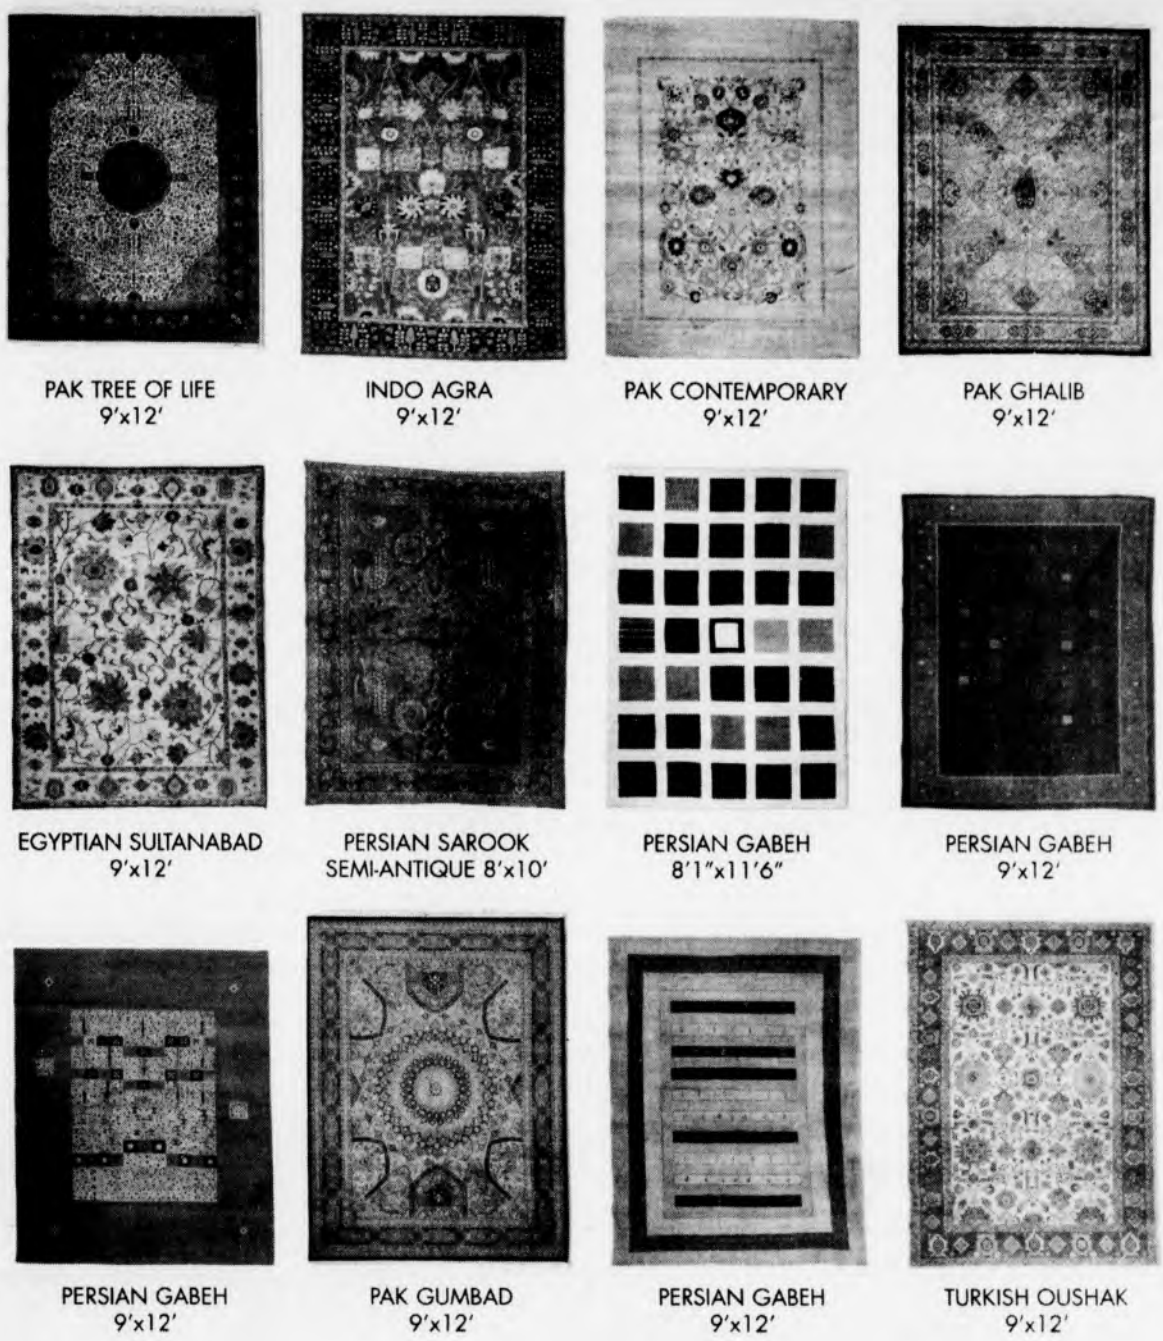
CAROLING ON THE COMMON

First Parish, Cohasset's Unitarian Universalist church, is reviving an old and well-loved Cohasset tradition — Caroling on the Common —Saturday, Dec. 18. All are welcome.

This is a community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; caroling books will be available, but you may bring your own.

Participants will assemble at the First Parish's Parish House (23 North Main St.) between 4 and 4:30 p.m. Carolers will circuit the Common, serenading all homes as weather permits. At approximately 5:30, everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies (cookie donations are appreciated).

Come join your friends for an old-fashioned holiday get-together, and pass the word. For further information call Sandy Bailey at First Parish (781-383-1100) or Woody Chittick (781-383-3215).



Ready or not, the holidays have come and shopping, singing and celebrations are happening all over. Make sure to send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by noon.

Who's the top citizen?

See form page 8

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In keeping with an 11-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Marjorie "Marjie" Murphy as Citizen of the Year. The mother of three and grandmother of two touched countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset.

The deadline for nominations for the 2004 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 7. Please see the nomination form on page 8. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Nominations may also be sent by email to mford@cnc.com.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2004 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2005.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the11th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

The late Gerard T. Keating, Joseph D. Buckley, Dr. Robert T. Sceery, The Rev. Gary Ritts, Anna Abbruzzese, Katherine Stanton, the late Clark Chatterton, former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Glenn Pratt, Arthur Lehr, and Marjorie Murphy.

Marc Brown book signing is Dec. 4

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Rt. 3A, Cohasset, will host Marc Brown on Sat., Dec. 4 at 10 a.m.. Brown will read and sign from "Wild About Books" by Judy Sierra, Pictures by Marc Brown (Knopf Books, $16.95) a delightful rhyming story about a librarian named Molly McGrew who introduces the animals in the zoo to the joy of reading when she drives her bookmobile to the zoo by mistake. Brown of Hingham is best known as the author and illustrator who created the beloved aardvark Arthur. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 to order your signed copy if unable to attend.

Blessing of the animals in Cohasset

In this season of Advent, how can one forget the tradition of a creche with animals watching over it all, bearing witness to the babe in a manger?

It's time to share the excitement with your four-legged friends, or your feathered friends, or even your friends who slither. Yes, they are talking cats and dogs, hamsters and gerbils, birds and even lizards and snakes. It's First Parish's First Blessing of the Animals — Sunday, Dec. 5, at 3 p.m. in the Meeting House on Cohasset Common.

In this season of Advent, how can one forget the tradition of a creche with animals watching over it all, bearing witness to the babe in a manger? The service will feature animal-friendly music by the Church Family Choir, readings, prayers, and a short homily by the minister, Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull. Everyone will be invited to come to the chancel for individual blessings of your companion animals (live, stuffed, or a photo).

Bring your pets into the Meeting House on a leash or in a carrier. To prevent "accidents," make sure that your pets are house-trained and under your control at all times. This is an event open to the community. Come and share the blessings.

For more information, call Rev. Carlsson-Bull at 781-383-1100.

Historical Society hosts open house

Light refreshments will be served and there is no cost.

The Cohasset Historical Society will present "The Alphabet of Toys" in conjunction with its annual Wassail Party and Open House on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 5 from 2 to 4 p.m.

Members are encouraged to attend and the event is open to the public. With the toy exhibit in place, it promises to be a delightful afternoon for the entire family. Light refreshments will be served and there is no cost.

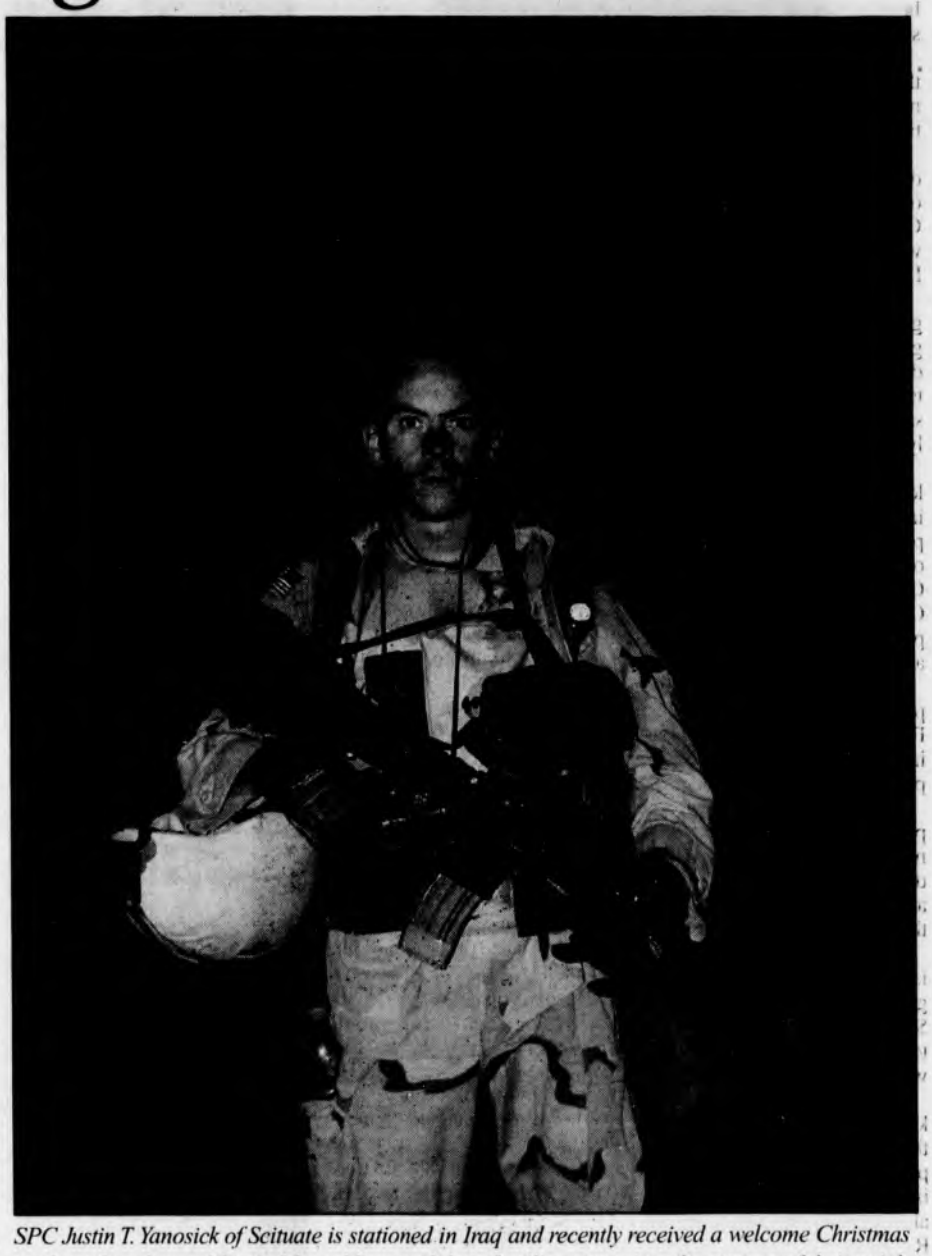
what they do," he said. "You're backing them up, showing them there's still pride in the military."

Pembroke Cares was started in October 2001 by a group of residents who felt they had to do whatever they could to support the troops going overseas. Most of those involved are directly affected by the war, with a family member serving in the Middle East right now.

"After Sept. 11, it was pretty evident we were going to war again," Chairman Julie Caruso said. "I started calling people and we met right here with a pot of coffee and a box of Munchkins."

Caruso and the band of volunteers collected goods in order to send Christmas boxes to the troops in the Middle East.

"We were panicked, we didn't think we had enough stuff," she said. "But at the last minute, stuff came pouring in. It was unbelievable."



They sent out 20 boxes that year. Three years later, they're sending out 51, 25 of which will go to troops overseas and the rest to those serving somewhere in the United States. The soldiers all have a tie to Pembroke, whether they grew up in Pembroke, like Hurney, or they have a friend or family member here.

"We call them our kids," said Caruso, who's one of the few to not have a family member serving in the war. "It's not his or her son or daughter that's over there."

The name says Pembroke Cares and from the way the town and its residents have supported the group, it seems to these members that the entire town does care about its military.

"When you look at this town, it's not just his kid, it's everybody's kid," Patrick Hurney said. "Everybody knows them. This town has always been behind this town. I've been to many areas of this country and you don't see a lot of hometown pride anymore."

Members of the group said support has come in from all areas of the town, from local schools and business making donations to residents simply putting a yellow ribbon magnet on the back of their cars.

SPC Justin T. Yanosick of Scituate is stationed in Iraq and recently received a welcome Christmas package from home. Many of the soldiers and their families appreciate the support of their neighbors and communities. The efforts of numerous military support groups are part of CNC/South's annual Gifts of Hope campaign.

"It's nice to see a lot of the ribbon magnets around because just because you pay for it you don't have to put it on," Bob Morgan of Pembroke said.

Morgan and his wife, Marcia, were especially thankful last week for the phone call they had with their son Brian, a member of the Air Force serving in Iraq right now.

Gail Linehan was able to spend a few days last week with her husband, on a short break from National Guard training in New Jersey, before his deployment overseas sometime this month. But, the Revere resident already knows all too well what it's like to have a loved one serving in this war.

Her husband has been in the military for 12 years, one of her sons joined the Army at age 18 and has been serving in the war since August while her other has been stationed in Afghanistan since April.

"After Sept. 11, I knew the three men who mean the most to me were all going to war sometime soon," she said.

This will be the first tour of duty in the Middle East for most of their nearly 150 National Guard soldiers being deployed with her husband this month, Linehan said.

"I'm very confident in the group, they have a very good group and I know the commanders will do the best they can to take care of all of them," she said. "But I know I will be lonely. And I'm afraid, I'm scared."

While her husband and his fellow soldiers serve their country in one way, Linehan is doing her part back home. As co-chairman of the Quincy-based National Guard's Family Readiness Group, Linehan has helped to provide support for local soldiers and their families.

While similar groups are shipping packages to the troops, the Family Readiness Group is raising money to purchase new eye protection for their soldiers.

"They need wrap-around eye protection and if the new shipments get in before the soldiers do, then the new ones are gone and our guys have to use the ones that are quite old," Linehan said.

At $40 a piece, the eyewear isn't cheap. Linehan said the group has set a goal of raising $8,000, which will also be used to fund the shipping of the eyewear to the soldiers.

Maura Yanosick of Scituate knows first hand just how much the soldiers appreciate any supplies from home. Her son Justin is serving over in Iraq and she also heads up the 182nd Family Readiness Group, the National Guard unit based out of Braintree.

"We are so excited today because we sent each soldier a Christmas package, the mailing alone cost $500, but we just learned their packages arrived safely," she said Monday. "I can't tell you how much it means to them."

In addition to packages to specific soldiers serving the Braintree unit, community packages are sent on a regular basis for all to share. The group also hosts a number of family events o nthe South Shore to keep everyone connected.

"They've been gone since May so it gets harder and harder when you are missing them, especially this time of year." Yanosick said. "Having things for the families, especially the children, is so important."

Weymouth resident Neal Skorka discovered that many troops serving in the war aren't getting everything they need. He learned this through a conversation two months ago with a neighbor whose daughter's fiancé was facing a possible third tour of duty in Iraq.

"They were missing things we take for granted – T-shirts, toothbrushes, hard candy, sunscreen," he said. "I thought it was time to do something."

Thanks to an effort of a core group of about 12 people, Care Packs' first shipment of 24 boxes for the troops was addressed and ready to go the day before Thanksgiving. Skorka said the group has assembled a total of 65 boxes and the rest will be shipped shortly.

The packages are filled with personal care products such as shampoo, soap, disposable razors, mouthwash, and baby wipes, which Skorka said are in high demand. The group is also adding food items higher in calories like high-energy bars and beef jerky to the boxes.

"The soldiers are losing weight over there," Skorka said. "They're getting the nutrition they need, but not as many calories."

Through the generosity of neighbors, local business and churches within the town, Care Packs has collected more than a thousand pounds of products for the troops and raised hundreds of dollars as well.

"Every penny that comes in goes to fundraising, it goes to purchasing goods or it goes to postage," Skorka said.

As people start their holiday gift shopping, Skorka hopes the spirit of giving will spill over to Care Packs and other groups like it.

"People don't always see what's going on in the world, their lives are harried," he said. "A little bit from a lot of people will turn into a lot for us."

While a package from home is designed to show a soldier that someone cares, Skorka said Care Packs has turned to the Weymouth schools to add a special touch to the boxes. Each package is shipped with at least one letter from local children, who are writing to the soldiers through school or their Boy or Girl Scout troops.

"We want to give the soldiers a personal connection with people back home," Skorka said. "It also teaches the children that there are people 4,000 miles away in danger, who are working hard for our safety. We hope that it'll help them develop an appreciation for the world around them."

Editor's note: CNC/South's Gifts of Hope campaign this year focuses on raising awareness and funds for several groups helping the military and their families at the holidays.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Village Fair really rocks

Here at the Cohasset Mariner office (which we share with the Hingham Journal in downtown Hingham), we're shaking, rattling and rolling more than when the old letterpress printed the Journal in our 105-year-old building.

In those days when the Journal went to press, the building visibly shook from the 2-1/2 ton, 1892-model Hoe and hand-fed drum cylindrical press that was housed upstairs where our office and Monograms for You are now located.

However, despite advancements in technology (the 177-year-old Hingham Journal and your 26-year-old Cohasset Mariner are produced almost entirely through the use of computers) some things never change.

As our small staff strikes their keyboards everyday drafting our stories, we've come to realize there is just no fancy, high-tech way to dig in the ground. It still takes shovels, backhoes, cranes and the like, and a whole lot of pounding – as it no doubt has for hundreds, perhaps thousands of years.

Thanks to the Greenbush tunnel work going on just feet from our office at 73 South St. in Hingham Square, we now know the Japanese feel. Japan is prone to earthquakes. We're not sure how Hingham's "Little Dig" would measure on the Richter scale but it's getting up there.

But through it all, we're keeping a sense of humor and know that in the downtown Hingham area we're all in the same boat. Sometimes a little adversity can help people come together for a common goal.

As 2004 winds down in Cohasset, the year could perhaps be described as annus horribilis in this seaside community.

Using downtown Hingham's "Little Dig" as a metaphor – at times, there hasn't seemed to be a light at the end of the tunnel.

Yet the sun comes up most everyday, Cohasset is still beautiful – and in keeping with tradition, the Village Fair is Saturday which provides all of us with an opportunity to get together and appreciate what we have. The Rusty Skippers will play, the Town Crier will ring in the season, and there'll be lots of shopping. There's also the opportunity to see old friends.

Isn't that after all, what is best about Cohasset? There is a sense of community here that is almost unparalleled. Those who haven't been fortunate enough to have been born in town – have chosen to settle here and raise their families.

If there is controversy and division, it is only because Cohasset citizens care so much.

So let's put all opinions aside Saturday, and enjoy and Village Fair where you can spend your money for a host of worthy causes. Also, please don't forget the Village merchants, visit them too and start your holiday shopping. They deserve your support.

Add to your list

If you're making a list and checking it twice, like Santa, then make sure bicycle helmets are included. Some parents buy helmets when their children first start bike riding and then don't upgrade them as the child grows. Mom, Dad, uncles, aunts, cousins, friends and so on should all have helmets too if they ride bikes, use in-line skates, skateboards or scooters. Bike helmets can play a critical role in preventing brain injuries and fatalities. Make it a family priority that everyone has one!

If a child wants a motorized scooter – better cross that off the list – unless the youngster is at least 16 and has a valid learner's permit or driver's license. A new state law has changed the rules making it illegal for children to operate motorized scooters and bicycles unless they are licensed or have a learner's permit. If police find a youthful violator, they'll talk to Mom and Dad about the new law. They'll also make sure the youngster turns off the motor and pushes the vehicle home through "human propulsion."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Found letter offensive; disappointed with Mariner

TO THE EDITOR:

I am deeply offended by a letter you recently published.

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is pleased to sponsor its Friday Night Movies program to screen topical, interesting and thought-provoking films. It has been our policy to show these movies as a public service, for free, and to invite all interested moviegoers. We cherish divergent opinions, and encourage free thought and discussion. We know that intelligent, informed people can agree to disagree.

What a surprise it was to be trashed by one of our guests. And what a disappointment that the Mariner would choose to publish Lee Jenkins' bitter rant. "Black Tuesday" and "recovery" may be her notions, they are not ours. Ironically, they are also just the kind of non-journalistic sloganeering the films she came to see exposed.

Speaking out against a war does not diminish one's support for the men and women fighting it, it is one way of supporting them. That was true in the Vietnam era, it is true now, and it always has been. Perspective is not necessarily "distortion", and airing dissent is not necessarily "meant to divide and tear us apart." In fact, allegations like that show enormous disregard for exactly the freedoms our troops are fighting for. Personally, I think it is despicable to challenge someone else's patriotism because they have chosen to examine a point of view or a set of facts contrary to what has been disseminated by a government or a commercial television news network .

In addition to attacking the Democratic Town Committee and an innocent movie-going audience, Mrs. Jenkins took aim at a former selectman who apparently took the risk of conversing with her. Mrs. Jenkins' entire letter consists of vituperative expressions of her feelings about her own mis-perceptions and mis-characterizations of what others think or say or do. Her gratuitous insults are unworthy of publication, and I am perplexed at your finding it useful to print them. These ill-conceived criticisms of a group's core moral values and personal attack on a volunteer citizen trying to do the right thing for Cohasset are offensive, inappropriate, and do nothing to forward intelligent discourse in the Town.

Agnes McCann, Chair
Cohasset Democratic Town Committee

Urges vote against recall Monday night

TO THE EDITOR:

As a former State Senator, former Town Moderator and sometime member of various town boards, I strongly object to Article 16 relative to Recall Elections in the Warrant for the Dec. 6 Town Meeting. Article 16 is misguided, divisive and totally unnecessary for the following reasons:

First, if the Article were to pass, only 100 voters would be needed to file a recall petition, and approximately 10 per cent or roughly 500 voters to order a special election for recalling an elected official. Our town elections are frequently closely contested, and it would be relatively easy to round up the voters necessary to force a recall election in six months' time.

Second, our town has been fortunate throughout its long history to be served by citizens who have stepped forward willingly to assume responsibility for the town's governance on elective boards. This Article proposing Recall Elections would make it even more difficult for public-spirited citizens to commit the time and energy essential to run for and serve in elective office.

Third, Article 8 of the Massachusetts Constitution, long in force in what is the oldest ,continuously-existing constitution in the western world, provides a framework for recalling officers. It provides in part that "to prevent those, who are vested with authority, from becoming oppressors, the people have a right,....in such manner as they shall establish,... to cause their public officers to return to private life..."

Short of malfeasance or criminal wrongdoing, I maintain that public officials should serve out the terms for which they were elected, at the end of which time, voters can turn such officials out of office if they so desire. Let us leave well enough alone and urge voters to resoundingly defeat Article 16 at next Monday's Town Meeting.

William D. Weeks

Elected officials for recall

TO THE EDITOR

As elected officials in Cohasset, we will be directly affected by the proposed change that will permit the residents of the Town to remove us from office if we fail to perform to their satisfaction.

We strongly support this improvement to the structure of our Town's government and encourage every resident to join us to ensure that this enhancement is passed at the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting.

We have no fear of this change. Frankly, if we are not doing our jobs, we should be subject to recall! We offer the following reasons for our support of the Recall article.

There is no reason that the performance of elected officials should only be reviewed every three or five years. In a fast changing world, Cohasset could be painfully hurt if it took several years to remove a non-performing servant of the people.

Candidates for office that are discouraged or threatened by the prospects of a recall should not run for public office. We need confident and capable officials at the helm of government, not people who cannot face the responsibility of good job performance.

Recall elections cannot be held trivially. The requirements are such that frivolous attempts will not proceed beyond signature collections (500) and a majority of voters is required to actually replace an official.

We have great confidence in the residents of Cohasset. They are not going to succumb to a frivolous attempt to displace an official. Those who suggest that Cohasset residents will remove officials for any but the most severe of reasons are failing to recognize the intelligence of residents.

We offer these thoughts to fellow residents who are considering the decision of whether to support the Recall article.

Recall is one of the checks and balances

TO THE EDITOR:

Recall is a routine feature of town government in Massachusetts; 170 of the state's 351 cities and towns, just under 50 percent, have recall through adoption of charters or special legislation such as what is proposed in Article 16 of the Warrant for the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting.

Recall, according to Article 16, is actually hard to do – it takes 100 voters to get a petition to call for recall (which applies to all elected town officers) and then 10 percent of the registered voters, or 520 voters, to call for the recall election. Considering that the intention is to call for a special election to throw one or more elected officials out of office one would think that it would be hard to get the required number of signatures unless there was a significant issue to get people to take this extreme measure.

I have seen recall work in Abington, where the Board of Health was so out of step with the townspeople that there were thousands more signatures gathered to support recall than was needed – and then all five Board of Health members were recalled by more than 2-1 margins. That allowed the new Board of Health to take actions supported by the entire town and which reversed the old Board's mistake in approving the 1,800 tons per Abington Transfer Station.

Even if recall is never used it is a useful mechanism to have in place as an added protection for the voters at large to ensure that their elected officials are truly representing them. Massachusetts is one of the few places in the world with true democracy, the Open Town Meeting, which gives each voter the right to vote and speak on any matter before the town, and recall is one more mechanism to protect direct democracy.

Studies of recall have shown that, nationally, it is actually rarely used, and that in Massachusetts the trend is for towns that adopt a Town Manager form of government, like Cohasset, to increasingly include recall as one of the checks and balances. I support Article 16 and urge other voters to support it as well.

John K. McNabb, Jr.

Sandy Beach – an endangered resource

COMMENTARY

ROBIN LAWRENCE

The Sandy Beach Association hopes the following explanation will clarify some rumors concerning meetings of the Sandy Beach Association, Cohasset Board of Selectmen, Cohasset Conservation Commission, and state Department of Environmental Protection with regard to Sandy Beach.

Sandy Beach is a private, developed barrier beach, owned and managed by the Sandy Beach Association as set forth in a trust established in 1917 for the recreational use by Cohasset residents. Under the Association's sound management, overseen by the Cohasset Conservation Commission, decades of families have enjoyed the splendor of the wonderful white sand at Sandy Beach.

For several decades, the seasonal cycle of beach management has included an annual spring cleaning and re-nourishment:

- Gather sand (blown off the beach during the winter months) from paved surfaces of the parking lot/roadway and replacement on the beach;
- Screen and redistribute the sand on the beach;
- Collect and dispose all non-natural materials (flotsam, jetsam, debris trash);
- Bury seaweed.

This annual activity, contained in a current management plan approved by the state DEP, is executed under the oversight of the Conservation Commission. In fact, the Conservation Commission has provided beach management guidance to the Association dating back to 1986.

Should DEP requests to establish a frontal dune (located seaward of the wall separating the Beach from the parking lot) and restrict use of "cleaning" equipment, Sandy Beach, as fondly remembered, most likely will be drastically transformed within several years. As the frontal dune grows in height and width, most of the sand will be trapped with an insufficient amount remaining to re-nourish the beach. The likely result will be a beautiful dune, but a year-round "winter" beach, especially at high tide, with exposed rocks, pebbles and cobble in place of the white sand we have appreciated over the years. A precious resource will be lost for recreational use and future generations of families will not have the pleasure of enjoying this magnificent beach.

The Association continues to work with the DEP towards resolution of the issue with the goal of saving our valuable natural resource while retaining its recreational use.

Robin Lawrence is president of the Sandy Beach Association.

A year-round "winter" beach, especially at high tide, with exposed rocks, pebbles and cobble in place of the white sand could result from DEP plans to establish a frontal dune and to restrict use of cleaning equipment.

Not convinced about benefits of Cook Estate

COMMENTARY

TERRY MCCARTHY

I am 65, retired, on a fixed income and have lived in Cohasset more than 30 years. Thus I am very interested in any plans for elderly housing in town. However, I am also a taxpayer and hopefully sensible about the prospects for the Cook Estate Project. To date most of the arguments in favor of the project seem based mainly on emotional appeals rather than any logic.

• Is there a Need? The Elderly Housing Committee's work for the past several years has been to provide housing for seniors on town-owned land. Prior to the Cook estate being added to the agenda I attended several committee meetings. I was impressed with the commitment and dedication of its members. Everyone on the committee believed there was a real need for senior housing.

The major evidence stated for the need was a survey by the McCormack Institute at UMass Boston. At the time the only document available from the survey was the General Summary. A request for the other parts of the survey were made to the Town Manager and Elder Affairs officials. These parts would have been: [a] the questionnaire, [b] the verbatim comments, [c] the list of respondents and [d] tabulations of questionnaire responses. Town Manager and Elder Affairs responded that they could not find any of these documents. Therefore, based on only the 2-1/2 page General Summary it was impossible to determine how great the need was and how many seniors would be impacted. In addition the study was arguably too old to provide meaningful demographic data at the time the inquiry was made. In short, the need for senior housing was mostly anecdotal and had no data base upon which to build.

Let's face it, the biggest issue for seniors [or the 800 pound gorilla] is economic market forces. I doubt very much that the Cook Estate Project will impact this force significantly if at all.

• Emotional Appeals vs. Factual Base — While the Senior Housing Committee members were genuinely attempting to meet a need, they had never really defined the need in a way that was useful for planning a project. Nevertheless, the committee pursued their mandate by procuring town funds for engineering and design studies. This was prior to inclusion of the Cook Estate and these studies were made only on one town-owned parcel.

However, once the Cook Estate Trustees agreed to the deal now before the town, the project took on a new and bigger-than -ever life. I had hoped that once a developer was chosen they would do the "needs" analysis by sponsoring a market research survey. To my knowledge that was not done. Such a survey would have quantified the potential senior housing market in the town of Cohasset. Such a survey would have elicited some sense of whether Cohasset seniors would be willing to move in, how much they would be willing to pay, and so forth. In other words, such a survey would have put a factual base under the emotional appeal thereby making the entire project more attractive to town meeting. Of course, now we have some substantial hurdles (wastewater, legal suits) to overcome beyond the "needs" issue.

• Changes: demographic, etc. — All these events have happened at a time of great change in Cohasset. When I moved onto this street my neighbors were school teachers, secretaries, business entrepreneurs, engineers, salesmen, retired folk, and real estate executives. The most expensive house sold for $59,000. Today there are bank executives, an intellectual property attorney, consultants, hi-tech executives, and retirees like myself. The highest sale price for a house was around $1 million in the last year or so. My neighbors, who have or are planning retirement and a move feel Cohasset is too expensive even though some can afford to continue living here. Let's face it, the biggest issue for seniors [or the 800 pound gorilla] is economic market forces. I doubt very much that the Cook Estate Project will impact this force significantly if at all.

My personal attitude toward the Cook Estate Project is that its advocates mean well and are motivated by good thoughts. However, I remain unconvinced that it is essential or good public policy as it is proposed. Sewer issues and potential litigation cloud the project even more. I've come to look at the Cook Project through the practical logic of the Scottish legal system. Like our legal system, the Scots have outcomes called innocent and guilty. But they have a third that best describes the Cook project for me: Not Proven.

Some commonsense about harbor health

COMMENTARY

PAUL PATTISON

A reality check is in order. Commonsense must prevail over mystic visions.

A comprehensive plan to sewer the entire Town now makes sense. New developers would bear a considerable share of the cost.

New developments are taking center stage in our Town and seem to be gaining the favor of Town officials over people that have been waiting for sewerage to their homes for years while paying 50 percent toward the sewering of others. Emphasis is being placed on sewering at all cost to the most political and vocal, without consideration of financial implications or feasibility for decisions being made.

The expansion of the present sewer plant to accommodate the proposed plan is a costly stopgap measure at best. After evaluation, the manufacturer of the plant's system is apprehensive of the system's ability to handle further flow. More problems regarding flow have risen recently that tell a story. Still, some of our leaders insist that a few more gallons to accommodate must be available.

The questionable decision to pump additional hundreds of thousands of gallons of sewer effluent into Cohasset Harbor, with the outflow pipe approximately 25 feet from Laurence Wharf on Border Street, needs to be investigated. Potential danger exists to the public health and safety, as well as the adverse affects on our marine environment.

One of our greatest natural assets has been compromised. Our once vibrant harbor is now polluted. Boating, fishing, swimming, etc., can no longer be enjoyed in this area. Rockweed, once abundant on all rocks and walls surrounding the harbor, is depleted. The clams are dead, and the mackerel, smelt, flounder, and eels are nonexistent.

These observations were brought to the attention of many Town and state officials by me in 2002. The last time I checked, these officials were still studying environmental and health hazard assessments. But the adverse impact on marine life doesn't seem to be a major concern when vocal politicos and selected advisors for the Town entertain irrational judgements predicated on personal agendas, then as advisors become benefactors of the plans and decisions they present.

Rockweed, once abundant on all rocks and walls surrounding the harbor, is depleted. The clams are dead, and the mackerel, smelt, flounder, and eels are nonexistent.

If a plan isn't good for every body, it isn't good for anybody. We all pay and a select few benefit.

If is much less expensive to address pollution, contamination, and/or related health issues than to rectify the consequences, especially when you know about it and do nothing. Additional capacity should not be considered. An educated, rational judgement is in order. This is the time to formulate a comprehensive plan to sewer the entire Town. Developers with acceptable plans will lighten the burden on the taxpayers and it will be more cost-effective for them as well.

It's been a long time. Let's do it!

JFK RIP — Puleeze!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

When are they going to let Jack Kennedy finally rest in peace?

The latest intrusion on his eternal rest is a "game" devised by a Scottish company called "Traffic," in which players can have the pleasure via the Internet of assassinating the late President while winning a prize for the accuracy of their shooting.

No, Lefty, the National Rifle Association has nothing to do with it.

"Pay just $9.99 (marked down from $10, I suppose) to unlock control of Lee Harvey Oswald, perform the assassination," promises promoters of the ghoulish game called "JFK Reloaded" on their Web site.

"We don't really call it a game." Kirk Ewing, managing director of Traffic told Matt Lauer during an appearance on the Today Show on NBC. "We think of it more as a documentary that happens to use video-game technology to deliver its message."

Ewing said the "documentary" would help debunk conspiracy theories of JFK's death and "stimulate a younger generation of players to take an interest in this fascinating episode of American history. If, in the unlikely event it would help debunk conspiracy theories, I'd be all for it.

Conspiracy theorists were in print and on TV almost before Lee Harvey Oswald could drop his trusty Mannlicher Carcano rifle and make it down from the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository.

Remember Mark Lane? He was the first of them. He was the one who testified before the Warren Commission that he found a woman who gave him the straight poop on the assassination. "Who was the woman?" he was asked. "I found her, certainly you can, too," he said.

Thus was born a cottage industry.

Was it Fidel, the capo di tutti capi of Cuba, who was still upset at the Bay of Pigs and the loss of his Soviet missiles? Or was it the anti-Castro Cubans, who were teed off that Kennedy had not gotten rid of Castro for them?

Or was it Lyndon, who would inherit the presidency if Kennedy were to leave it? Or the CIA, suspicious that JFK wanted to bring an end to the war in Vietnam? Or the NRA because they feared he would not let them play with guns anymore?

Or was it Sam, the godfather of the Chicago chapter of Good Fellas, whose girl friend, Judy, was dating Jack and Sam was afraid Jack might ask her to dance and, if you have any moral values, you know what that can lead to?

Personally, if we have to choose up sides, I pick as the culprit Osama bin Laden, who was known to be on a work release program from the first grade at the Saddam Hussein School of Terror and Organic Gardening at the time.

My own experience with conspiracy theorists came at the Boston Herald (the old one) about 1970 when I put together a piece on Lee Harvey Oswald's life in New Orleans. A reader called me and said he had some confidential information to share with me. "Come on down," I said in my best Ernie Boch imitation.

He turned out to be a mousy little man with shifty eyes who sidled over to my desk, leaned toward me and told me confidentially, "Kennedy is still alive, you know."

I don't know about you but people like that scare me. I told him that was interesting but I'd have to talk to my editor first. "I thought you could do something," he said, "but I find you are little more than a janitor." And he was gone.

Frankly, under the circumstances, I didn't mind being mistaken for a janitor. I think they made more money than we did at the old Herald anyway.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Need for senior housing still exists

TO THE EDITOR:

Like everything else in Cohasset, for sewers, there is sometimes a determination to have the 'biggest and best'. We should be practical when we set limits.

The Board of Health has worked long and unstintingly to develop the appropriate wastewater treatment for every dwelling in Cohasset. We work cooperatively with the Sewer Department, the Water Department and other agencies and groups in Town hopefully with a common purpose to provide needed services economically.

If an idea makes sense, we will do what we can to implement it. In many circumstances, sewers are best for a parcel. Such a decision is connected with abstruse science and experienced gut feel. Sometimes we're right, and sometimes wrong.

But I know of almost no volunteer or elected official in Town who has a private agenda or an axe to grind. Perhaps I'm naïve, but most seem to be doing what they think is best for the Town. Further, Wastewater disposal is a complicated issue, and the Town is lucky to have a number of proven dedicated people making good decisions about it. And by and large, they have done a wonderful job, keeping Cohasset the way we said we wanted it when we answered (didn't we?) Rick Swanborg's master plan survey.

However, a recent widespread mailing has just appeared which claims Cohasset is delinquent in addressing wastewater issues. To my mind almost every assertion in this document is open to question. For example, it claims that the State is just before invoking penalties on the Town for failure to clean up its pollution. Such a disingenuous statement flies in the face of the evidence of all the hard work the Town has done to solve its pollution problems; perhaps as much as any small town in the commonwealth. To malign other beneficial projects and with them, the Board of Health, for neglecting "hundreds of failed, obsolete or under-performing septic systems" with the hope of securing advantage for one's own agenda, harms many who have worked diligently for the Town's health and welfare and further creates unnecessary rancor and polarity within our community.

Unfortunately, a by-product of the either-or debate about sewers vs. growth has been to derail a necessary and important element of the town's attempt to maintain a unique character: the care of those who have lived in Town for a long time and have no desire to leave. For those who have reached that period in life, moving is almost unthinkable, but nevertheless, must be done because we have not provided for them. We have a wealthy community. It's been so for a hundred years. However, it was once fisherman and farmers, many of whom have descendants who still live here. We're wrong if we believe it'll be a better place without those from whom much of the strong fiber of the community comes.

Perhaps, derailing the Cook Estate agreement was the right course to take, given its apparent flaws. But the need still exists, and it remains for those who created an atmosphere of 'we vs. them' to explain how they can repair the harm done to the community. It further remains for those responsible who posit alternative solutions to come forward and give the Town a desperately needed resource for its elder citizens. After all we all get old, more or less.

Selectmen's empty promises

TO THE EDITOR:

It is abundantly clear that the Board of Selectmen (Board) is unable to forecast the cost of running the Town. The unending series of fiscal surprises are proof that our expenses are out of control. Promises that there are no more surprises are greeted, within weeks, with news of hundreds of thousands of unfunded expenditures. Promises of no more overrides are broken annually with compelling justification for the forecasting failures.

It is equally clear that the Board is unable to forecast the revenue the Town can expect to receive. The explanations that blame external factors such as lack of state funding or unexpected shortfalls are simply excuses for forecasting failures. The $900,000 windfall estimate from the Cook purchase and resale has eroded to under $600,000 and is likely to disappear altogether.

It is obvious to every reasonable person that the Board is unable to provide credible forecasts of either revenues or expenses. This explains why our taxes of $3,520 per person are the highest of any comparable sized town.

With this record of forecasting failures, we are expected to believe that this Board is able to execute real estate deals that will miraculously bring in millions of dollars of revenue and cost the Town nothing.

Who are they kidding? Does the Board expect that Cohasset residents are naive enough to believe that developers are willing to pay millions of dollars for sewer connections and get nothing in return? Are we so blind not to recognize that adding hundreds of new residents will only make the current budget crisis even worse? Are we expected to ignore the environmental risk of diverting attention from the regulatory requirements of Little Harbor and Atlantic Avenue?

I believed it when they said:

- There would be no overrides, but there were, for seven years in a row.
- The budget was balanced but there was always "supplemental spending."
- Police officers were "bad", but then they were reinstated.
- The Town staff was beyond reproach but there was an alleged embezzler.
- School buildings were completed but there was no funding for their higher cost.
- The police department was stable but the Chief retired abruptly.
- There were contracts but no one could find them.
- The Town Manager left voluntarily but was paid a large severance.

I don't believe them anymore.

I urge the board to quit these wild and risky experiments and get down to the business of balancing our $30 million budget the old fashioned way, by spending no more than we bring in.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Cohasset Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: BHRC records local representatives and senators' votes on two roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$504,671 FOR SOCIAL LAW LIBRARY (H 5850)

House 136-21, Senate 33-5, overrode Gov. Romney's $504,671 veto reduction (from $1,704,671 to $1.2 million) in funding for the Social Law Library in Boston. Override supporters said that this unique public-private partnership is an invaluable, world class research facility that is used on a daily basis by the state's courts, all branches of state government, academic institutions, private attorneys and the public. They noted that without the library, the courts and state government would not have adequate research resources or would have to pay a lot of money to purchase these resources from various companies. In his veto message, the governor said that he reduced the funding to an amount consistent with his original fiscal 2005 budget recommendation. (A "Yea" vote is for the $504,671. A "Nay" vote is against the $504,671).

MIDDLE SCHOOL STUDY (H 4850)

House 140-17, Senate 34-4, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a budget provision creating a special commission to investigate and study middle school education in Massachusetts. The study would include a look at progress on the implementation of the recommendations that were included in the Department of Education's 1993 "Magic in the Middle" report on middle schools. Override supporters said that ten years have elapsed since that original report and argued that it is time to take another hard look at middle school education. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed the study because it is duplicative of the Board of Education's outreach process to review and revise licensure and curriculum standards in public schools. (A "Yea" vote is for the study. A "Nay" vote is against the study).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

MANDATORY HELMETS (H 1920)- The new law requiring children under 16 to wear a helmet while riding a bicycle or using inline skates, skateboards or scooters on public ways took effect on Thursday, November 26. The law also applies to passengers under 16 and requires any store that rents or sells the equipment to display a sign informing customers of the new law. Prior law required only bicyclists under 12 to wear a helmet and did not require helmets to be worn by any users of inline skates, skateboards or scooters. The Legislature approved the legislation and the governor signed it into law in August. The law became effective last week because most laws take effect 90 days after being signed by the governor.

HEALTH INSURANCE FOR LANCASTER FIREFIGHTER- Gov. Romney filed a bill, requested by Lancaster town officials, providing that the town of Lancaster hold a special election for the purpose of a ballot question asking Lancaster voters whether they approve providing health benefits to the family of Martin McNamara, a call firefighter who was killed last year while battling a house fire in Lancaster. The measure, if approved by voters, would enroll the McNamara family in the town's health insurance program for retirees and require the family to pay 50 percent of the premiums— the same percentage paid by retirees. On November 2, Lancaster voters defeated by 16 votes a ballot question providing for both the health insurance and a one-time, one-year override of Proposition 2 1/2 to fund an estimated $600,000 annuity that would provide the family with a pension estimated at $18,000 in fiscal year 2004, plus $2,600 per child annually until the child turns 18 or until age 21 if the child is a full-time student. The state currently provides death benefits only to families of full-time firefighters. The Lancaster Online website estimated that the override would have raised property taxes by an estimated 6.93 percent for one year— a one-time increase of between $292.50 and $585.00 depending on the value of the property. The website also notes that the family has already received $397,494 in federal and state benefits, $30,000 from Lancaster in death benefits and an assurance of free tuition at state colleges for McNamara's three daughters. The family has also received an undisclosed amount of money in private donations. Some local observers say that the fact that this amount has not been disclosed contributed to the defeat of the override. Lancaster officials asked the governor to file this new bill providing only the health insurance benefits so that Lancaster voters would have a new opportunity to vote on these health benefits separately from the pension question. The Romney proposal comes on the heels of legislation filed last week would provide a $30,000 annual state-funded pension for the family. Another piece of legislation pending at the Statehouse would provide state-funded death benefits to all call and volunteer firefighters.

STATE COLORS (H 2694)- Gov. Romney signed into law legislation designating blue, green and cranberry as the state's official colors and a group of students learned that getting a bill signed into law can take a long time. The measure was filed four years ago as part of a social studies project by a group of third-graders in Gardner. The students, now seventh-graders, were on hand to watch the governor sign the measure. Cranberry was chosen as one of the colors because the state is a large producer of cranberries. The blue represents the color of Revolutionary War uniforms and the waters of Massachusetts Bay and the green symbolizes the forests of the Berkshire Hills.

Little Harbor area residents hope voters will provide sewer guarantee

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With S.E.R.F. signs popping up all over town, its clear to see there are many residents who support the notion that existing residences should be sewered first. Among those homes waiting in the wings are those located in Little Harbor, which have been hoping for years to obtain a municipal sewer connection.

Through a citizens' petition, residents have banded together in the hopes Town Meeting will incorporate a sewering schedule into a judgement sent down by the state, which proponents say will formalize the town's commitment to the Little Harbor and Atlantic Avenue sewer expansion project.

Although Town Counsel Paul DeRensis has said article eight, which would ask the town to formalize its commitment to the sewering of Little Harbor by incorporating a sewer schedule to the Second Amended Final Judgment, is not appropriate for the town to vote on, proponents of the article say they have received numerous opinions that the article will provide the assurance homeowners need that sewer is on its way. They also say amnesty from mandatory upgrades of systems is also possible. DeRensis said Town Meeting usually votes on issues such as appropriating money or purchasing property, and this article does not fall into either category.

The plan to clean up the Little Harbor area of town dates back to 1979, when the town violated the Federal Clean Waters Act. In turn, the state gave the town a judgment, followed by a second amended judgment, which the town needed to comply with, or face fines of up to $10,000 per day.

To help settle the judgement with the state, the town embarked on two sewer projects, including an expansion of the Central Sewer District and the North Cohasset sewer project, which allowed residents to tie-in to capacity at the Hull treatment facility. Both the Central Sewer District expansion and North Cohasset sewer project were subsidized 50 percent by taxpayers.

In addition, the town created two "priority districts" that included some streets around Little Harbor. Those priority homes, however, were not given sewer connections, and were told their systems would be subjected to immediate mandatory on-site Title 5 inspections whether the owners planned to sell their homes or not. Homeowners were told they would be required to have their systems inspected for Title 5 compliance every two years. If the system did not pass, the homeowner would be required to upgrade their system within two years or replace it to meet Title 5 requirements. CEES members say it has been estimated that the average cost of replacing a septic system in the Little Harbor area of town is between $40,000 and $70,000 per system, and that cost would be at the homeowner's expense.

The Department of Environmental Protection has been following Cohasset's progress of cleaning up its waters, and over the years, the town has spent roughly $500,000 in the pursuit of sewering the Little Harbor area.

It was then that CEES, pronounced "ceaze" was formed, and participating households in the Little Harbor area contributed $500 each, which went toward expenses incurred to fight their battle for equal wastewater options.

Over the years, CEES members have paid to have environmental studies completed on Little Harbor, and its members say many of the studies have identified sewering as the most cost-effective and environmentally friendly wastewater option for that area of town. In light of the resident's work to comply with the judgment, the mandate for septic inspections by the state has been lifted.

However, CEES members say the state's priority designation is not permanent, and the town is still responsible for satisfying the state's judgment. Without a plan set firmly in place, the town could face a renewal of state mandates ordering regular Title 5 systems inspections, which could be very costly for homeowners.

The Department of Environmental Protection has been following Cohasset's progress of cleaning up its waters, and over the years, the town has spent roughly $500,000 in the pursuit of sewering the Little Harbor area. There is currently a plan in place for sewering, which was submitted by Sewer Commission engineer Daniel Coughlin of Tutela Engineering Associates to the DEP in February, 2004. The schedule would include awarding the construction contracts for the project in Spring 2007 and project completion in Summer 2009.

However, some proponents of the article say the town is not fully committed to sewering the Little Harbor area of town, and worry the DEP could reinstate mandatory inspections for homeowners once again if plans to sewer fall through. Residents would like to see sewer promised to those homeowners by including the schedule for sewering into the Second Amended Final Judgment, which they believe, based on the experience DEP has had with other towns, would provide amnesty from inspections and upgrades, even if the homeowner intends to sell.

However, some in town feel incorporating a plan for sewering in a state judgment without a monetary value will force the town to pursue sewering that area, but without a price tag. In other words, the town could embark on a project, which is currently estimated to cost between $13,000 and $18,000, and if estimates are low, the town could be forced to pay a higher price for the sewering project, or risk being sued by the state.

The town has supported many of the efforts to keep the

Septic systems and Little Harbor

TO THE EDITOR:

In the blizzard of facts and emotions surrounding the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue sewer project, I believe there's one important factor that has been overlooked. That is the chance for owners of the 430-plus homes in the district to save up to $100,000 (per home) of unnecessary expense.

The Selectmen have voiced their commitment to the project, both to clean up our waterways and to settle the judgment with the State. The Sewer Commission and Town Meeting voters have created the district and the plan to install the sewer. The DEP has indicated that if the Town will formally incorporate the plan into the judgment, it may not require people who sell their homes to upgrade their septic systems to meet Title 5 requirements, as long as they are not a public health risk. The reason is that the sewer installation date will be definite, and there will be no need to put in an expensive system to cover the gap of a few years.

The DEP gave similar amnesty to the towns of Nantucket, Newbury and Newburyport, so there is no reason to assume they wouldn't do the same for Cohasset. If the Town wavers in its commitment, the State has said that they may require the same immediate inspections and replacement that were threatened in 1997, before the sewer plan was developed. This would apply whether or not the owners plan to sell their homes.

The average replacement cost of a septic system in our area is higher than the cost of a sewer, and for properties with significant ledge, the price is as high as $100,000. Not only money is involved. The blasting of that ledge causes major noise pollution and disruption of the natural landscape.

Among the 1,500 people who live in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue districts are 400 seniors, many of whom would like to stay in their homes. They, and everyone else, should not be made to suffer financially for no reason.

Plain truth about Little Harbor

TO THE EDITOR:

I read the assertion in your paper that Cohasset was 99percent complete with respect to its obligations to the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). Nothing could be further from the truth.

Cohasset has met two of three environmental obligations, making the completion 66percent not 99percent. In fact, the major work to achieve compliance still lies ahead. By no stretch of the imagination, could the 99percent number be true.

Furthermore, the assertion that there is little risk of sanctions and penalties is an outright misrepresentation of the DEP's expressed views. Nantucket, Newbury and Newburyport are examples of where sanctions were avoided by complying with plans similar to Cohasset's for the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area.

For Cohasset residents who are not familiar with Cohasset's environmental problem, here are the facts.

In 1979 Cohasset was found guilty of violating the Federal Clean Waters Act because of effluent discharged from septic systems and other sources. A portion of the judgment against the Town required an upgrade of the sewage treatment plant and the addressing of three sources of pollution:

- Straits Pond. This was accomplished by the North Cohasset sewer project with connections to Hull.
- Lily Pond. This was accomplished by connecting a limited number of abutting residences to the Central Sewer District.
- Little Harbor. The most serious pollution problem and the most expensive to correct remains. Cohasset has spent more than $500,000 to date preparing for the sewering of the Little Harbor watershed.

The pollution of Little Harbor makes its waters unsafe for human recreational activities and threatens wildlife. In fact, our shellfish beds have been closed and will remain so until the area is cleaned up.

Since there is no definitive evidence of the eventual capacity or actual usage of an expanded treatment plant, the recent proposals to connect new residential developments to the planned Little Harbor expansion would involve serious risks, to both the environmental and financial health of the town.

I appeal to every citizen's sense of obligation and fairness to vote yes on article #8 to mandate compliance with the plan presented to the DEP. This will cure our most serious pollution problem and avoid millions of dollars of fines and expenses for Cohasset residents.

Little Harbor area residents hope voters provide sewer guarantee

Little Harbor sewer project on track and has allocated a good amount of money over the years for the cause. CEES members say therefore, the DEP expects one day the Little Harbor area homes will in fact be sewered. However, with senior housing projects on the rise which could impact the amount of available capacity at the central district sewer plant, members of CEES are worried sewer will never be a reality.

Although it has been said connecting developments to municipal sewer will not affect plans to sewer Little Harbor, members of CEES say that is not true. While the Sewer Commission has proposed dedicating capacity from the planned upgrade of the system to the Little Harbor area of town, CEES members believe by the time their sewer system is built, developers could already have been granted all available capacity. The Sewer Commission has said if one development were granted a hook-up, most likely all other developments and developments to follow would also have the legal right to tie-in as well. The only alternative for Little Harbor, which is currently slated to begin construction of its sewer in 2007, would be to build a new satellite treatment plant, which CEES members say would be more expensive than an upgrade to build, and very, very difficult to permit.

While it has been argued that senior citizens, who will live in either Cedarmere or the Cook Estate, should not have to deal with on-site septic systems, and should therefore be granted sewer connections, CEES members say there are roughly 400 seniors currently living in the Little Harbor area of town who are experiencing septic problems on a daily basis, which is why CEES believes existing homes should be taken care of before developments. If the 400 units from the two senior housing projects as well as the 200 proposed Avalon rental units, are granted the 400 connections which could have been used for Little Harbor, CEES members say their capacity will no longer exist.

Caroling on the Common

First Parish, Cohasset's Unitarian Universalist church, is reviving an old and well-loved Cohasset tradition — Caroling on the Common —Saturday, Dec. 18.

This is a community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; caroling books will be available, but you may bring your own.

Participants will assemble at the First Parish's Parish House (23 North Main St.) between 4 and 4:30 p.m. Carolers will circuit the Common, serenading all homes as weather permits. At approximately 5:30, everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies (cookie donations are appreciated).

Senior quarterback Crandon Leahy (5) comforts classmate Matt Casey as their season fades into the night during the closing seconds of Tuesday's playoff loss to Westwood.

The dream ends

Cohasset bested by Westwood for second straight year

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Literally and figuratively, Cohasset and Westwood are in different leagues.

The Tri-Valley champions made that clear Tuesday at Walter M. Katz Field at Curry College in Milton, as they ended the Skippers' season with a 31-8 loss in the semifinal of the Div. 3 playoffs..

Cohasset ended its season with a 10-1 record and the team's first undefeated regular season since 1957.

Head coach Tony Rolfe's team played a decent game, but were simply outmatched by the arsenal of weapons Westwood has at its disposal.

"We hated for it to end like this," Rolfe said on the field minutes after the game. "But Westwood has everything. They have all the toys, and they executed flawlessly."

For the first couple minutes of the game, however, it looked like it may have been Cohasset's day.

On the fifth play of the opening drive of the game, senior quarterback Crandon Leahy faked the handoff to fullback Teddie Straughn, and took off on his own around the left side.

What transpired was one of the most remarkable efforts one can expect to see in a high school football game. Eluding and running through defenders left and right, with a little help from a downfield block by Joe Durkin, Leahy broke about six tackles during a 73-yard touchdown run.

With the Cohasset fandom still buzzing and the Westwood supporters in stunned silence, the ensuing two-point conversion was no good. Nonetheless, the Skippers appeared to have the early momentum.

It took one play for that momentum to disappear.

Westwood started their first drive at their own 14. Wolverines quarterback Jeff White tossed a bomb down the middle of the field, hitting wideout Chris Laham in stride. Laham had beaten his man, and no one would catch him en route to the end zone. He then kicked the extra point, and Westwood had a 7-6 lead with 6:49 left in the first quarter.

The Skippers would not lead the remainder of the game. Westwood head coach Paul Hallion admitted after the game he couldn't quite comprehend what was happening with two long touchdowns so early in the game.

"To be honest, I was still reeling a little bit [after the Leahy run] when we made that pass," Hallion said. "That was the longest run against us in two years."

The significance of the 86-yard play was not lost on Rolfe.

"That very first play set the tone," he said. "It got us back on our heels a little bit. We had the momentum, and then they made that play. It was very deflating."

The Wolverines' two subsequent drives also resulted in points. A Cohasset fumble gave Westwood the ball at the Skippers' 21. Three plays later, Jason Urdang ran around the right side for a 15-yard touchdown, proving to be simply too fast for Cohasset defenders.

That problem was one Rolfe was well aware of while studying his opponent.

"We just couldn't counteract their speed," said the Cohasset coach. "We've seen them a lot on film. It seems like the elements are the only thing that slows them down."

A 39-yard field goal from Laham made it 17-6, Westwood, with 9:20 left in the first half.

Cohasset fought back, though, with a sustained drive that ate up over six minutes. The highlight was a sweep to Straughn that turned into a pass back to the quarterback, Leahy, for 15 yards. The play gave Cohasset a first down at the Westwood 12.

The drive stalled right there, however, as a couple penalties hurt the Skippers.

Cohasset got their last points of the game with 1:36 left in the first half, right after their long drive had ended. Westwood went into their two-minute offense, and when White rolled out to his left, Skippers defensive end Kelvin Ferriera got to him and knocked the ball out of his hands.

White jumped on it in the end zone, and Cohasset's Joey Kehoe was there to record the safety. The play brought Cohasset within nine going into the half.

EXTRA POINTS

MIKE SPELLMAN

You folks who call yourselves baseball, football and/or basketball fans really have no concept of what true hockey fans are suffering through right now.

Yeah, your pro sports leagues have gone through work stoppages too, but those situations versus what's going on in the lives of many hockey fans right now as a result of the NHL lockout is, as I see it, an apples and oranges deal.

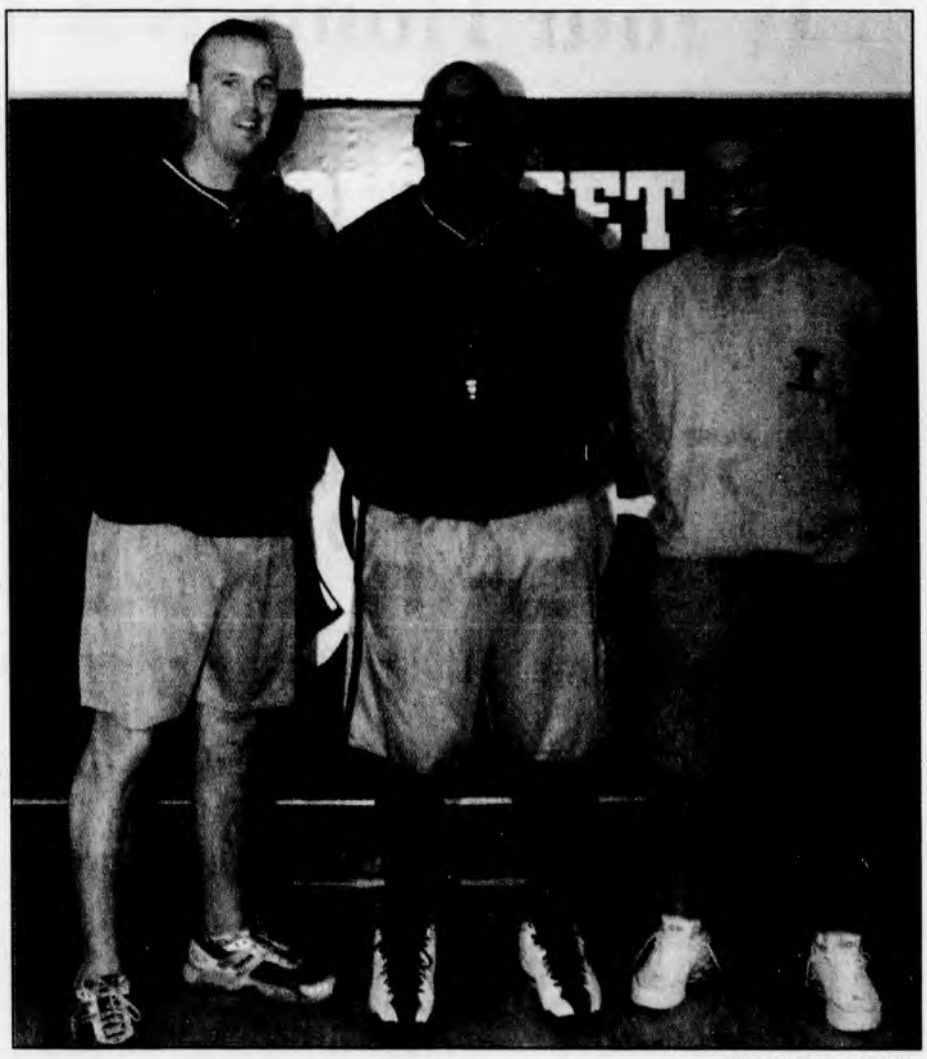
By and large, baseball, basketball and football fans fall under the general heading of "all around sports fan." Hockey fans, by and large, love hockey first, second and foremost.

The Patriots TV ratings at this time a year ago were generally five times greater than anything the Bruins saw. Don't take that to mean, though, that there are five times as many diehard football fans in this region as there are hockey fans. It's probably more like a 2-to-1 comparison.

Go to a Pats game, and you're just as likely to strike up a conversation with the guy seated next to you regarding the Red Sox or even the Celtics as you are the team performing in front of you. At Bruins game, folks talk Bruins. In fact, many of those you bump into in the FleetCenter stands might well confuse David Ortiz and David Patten in a lineup.

I can't help thinking here of the time I took in a basketball game with Scituate High hockey coach Mike Breen. At one point, after we both watched a kid get basically steamrolled as he went in for a lay-up, Mike asked me why the ref blew a whistle. He wasn't joking.

And I know a few other "hockey guys" like Mike. Eddie Andleman calls these folks "Hockey Krishnas." And greater Boston is over run with them. Why do you think Jeremy Jacobs has been able to flourish in this market despite operating his franchise like hockey's version of the Montreal Expos?



Do you think Patriots fans would have continued flocking down Route 1 if Bob Kraft had let Tom Brady go without a thought after his initial contract ran out? How do you think Sox fans will react if at both Pedro and Tek aren't re-signed? My guess: even the World Series hangover won't save the organization from some pretty serious fall out.

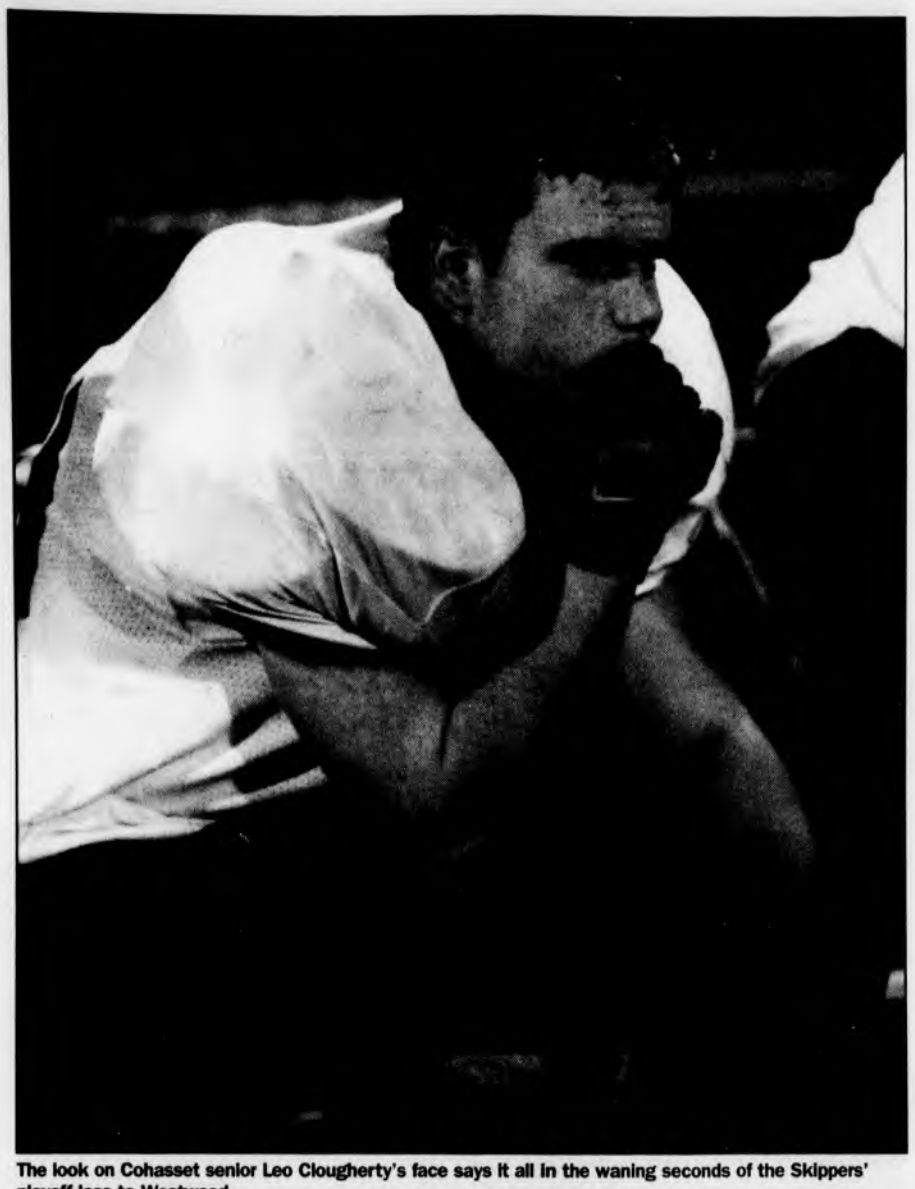
A career comes full circle

Former CHS star Dorian Bryant hired as new boys hoops coach

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Longtime Cohasset boys basketball fans know the name Dorian Bryant.

In the mid-90's, Bryant was the center for a team that twice made it to the Boston for the state finals, once in the Garden and once in the then brand-new Fleet Center.



Bryant's career at CHS has come full circle, as he now embarks on his first season as head coach of the boys basketball team.

An assistant last year for Ron Ford, Bryant is not new to the basketball coaching ranks at Cohasset. He served as the junior varsity coach last year, and the freshmen coach the two years prior to that.

Bryant's coaching philosophy stems from four basic keys to the game he has been stressing to his team in its first week of practice: defense/rebounding, turnovers, free throw shooting, and overall intensity.

"I know that 99.9 percent of the time, we will win against any team we face if we have the advantage in those four things," Bryant said in an interview after Wednesday's practice. "I never

The good and the bad

Cohasset football played two games in five days, each with completely different results and emotions. The 31-8 playoff loss to Westwood came on the heels of a 20-6 Thanksgiving Day win over rival Hull. The Skippers had an undefeated regular season and finished with an overall record of 10-1.

BOSTON HERALD

This story appeared in the Nov. 26 edition of the Boston Herald.

Like the rest of his teammates, Cohasset running back Joe Durkin had been monitoring the forecasts all week and anticipated that he'd have an even heavier than usual workload in yesterday's Thanksgiving Day clash with Hull.

"We knew it was going to be like this a couple of days ago," Durkin said. "We heard there was going to be rain and we prepared for it."

Missing three-fifths of the interior line that had paved the way for his 1,500-yard season, the running back rushed for 132 yards on 27 carries and scored all of his team's points as the Skippers subdued the stubborn Pirates, 20-6, at Alumni Field.

The victory capped Cohasset's first undefeated regular season in 45 years.

"We lost Nick Arment, who's basically the captain or our line. We were without Jake Cuneo, who got hurt in the Norwell game, but we brought in subs, they took care of business, and we still put up 20 points," Durkin said.

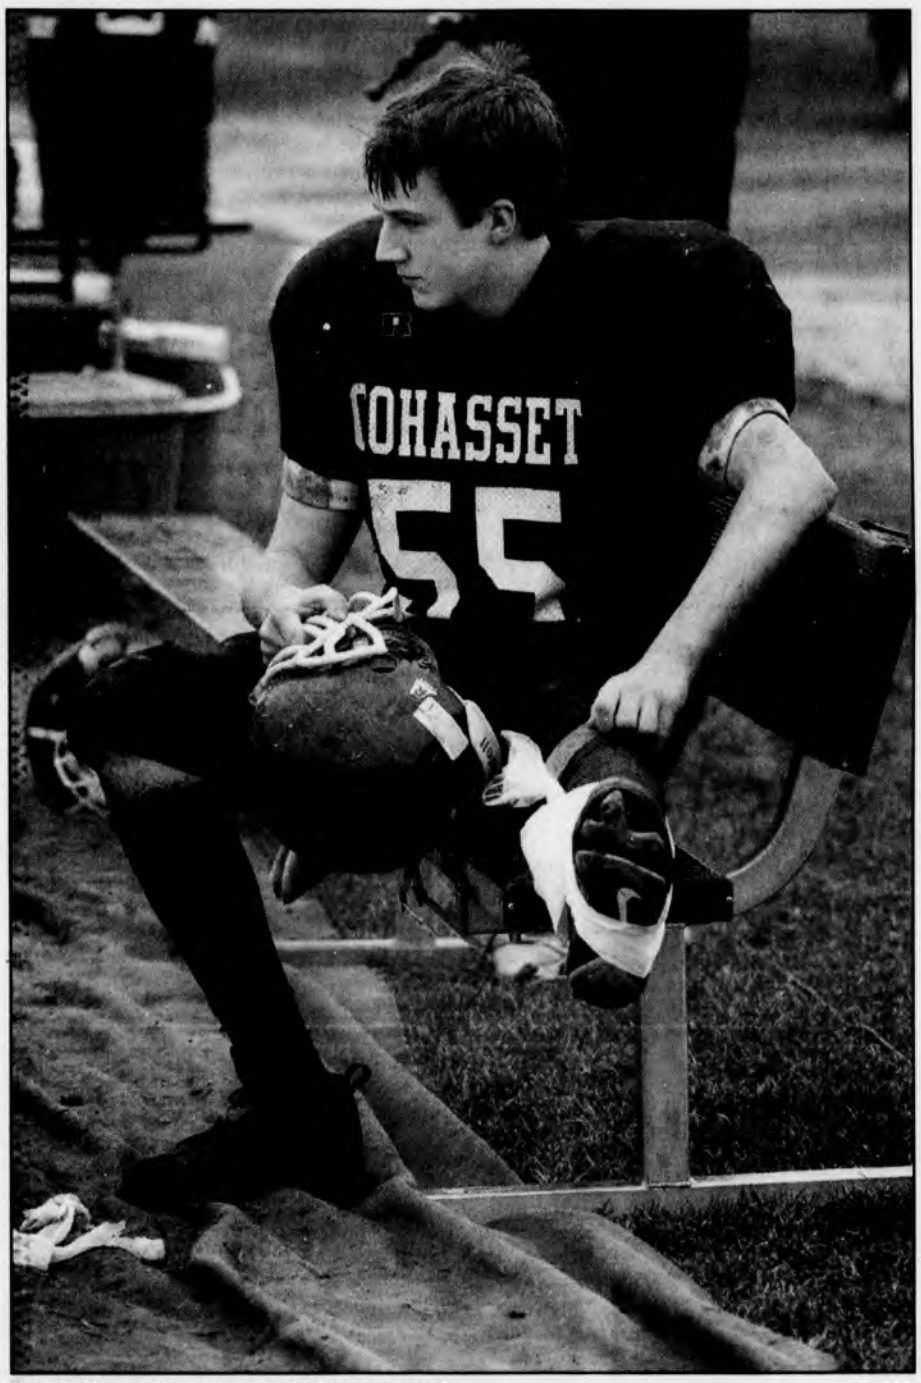
Said Skippers coach Tony Rolfe: "Under these conditions, I think he played a great game. It wasn't exactly a fast track. But that's the way he's played all year. He didn't let the changes up front bother him. He had two big ones (30- and 22-yard runs) and might even had a shot at another one, but to be honest with you, that's what we expected from him."

Durkin scored the game's first touchdown on an 8-yard run midway through the first quarter and tacked on the two-point conversion rush. He then burst into the end zone from 3 yards out to make it 14-0 just 31 seconds before halftime.

Hull cut its deficit to 14-6 with a little more than six minutes remaining in the fourth quarter when junior Justin Albert ran around the left end for a 15-yard touchdown. The Pirates' score created a sense of urgency on the Cohasset sideline.

"We knew they weren't just going to die down," Durkin said. "We knew we had to step it up. One of our coaches came up to me and said, 'Our line is really getting tired. You're going to have to put it in your own hands.'"

After Nick Cambi fell on Hull's attempted onside kick at the 43, Durkin carried on 7-of-8 plays, taking it in from 11 yards out to score the game's final touchdown with 2:47 left to play.



"We'd lost three offensive linemen and our line has been our strength," Rolfe said. "We had some young kids who really filled in well. We moved our second tight end (sophomore Conor Holway) to tackle. I don't think he'd had six reps there all season, but he played a great game. We lost Nicky Arment, so Paul St. Pierre played the whole game. As coaches, we were struggling the whole game just to catch up."

But for some gritty defense on the part of the overmatched Pirates, the score might have been higher. Hull forced one Cohasset fumble on the 25, twice stopped the Skippers on downs inside the red zone, and Albert set up his own TD with an interception of Cohasset quarterback Crandon Leahy.

"We felt they would be loading up [in the box], so we wanted to try and fake the run and throw it," Hallion said of the play. "That play was a credit to how well [Cohasset's] defense is coached."

The South Shore League champions once again had the momentum. But, for the second time, it took only one play for that to change.

At the start of the second half, a long kickoff return by Laham and a personal foul penalty by Cohasset gave Westwood the ball at the Skippers 42. White again looked to throw the ball deep, with Joe Fabiano as his target this time.

Cohasset sophomore Jeff Brown appeared to have great coverage, but White (6-for-8 passing, 174 yards) made an even better throw, hitting Fabiano in stride over his far shoulder as he was running a fly pattern down the right sideline.

The extra point was good; Westwood 24, Cohasset 8.

The Skippers offense isn't designed to come back from a big deficit, so this was a huge play, and one that left Cohasset senior co-captain Teddie Straughn in awe after the game.

"Jeff Brown is one of the best defensive backs around, and he was right there on that play," Straughn said. "The quarterback just hit his receiver in stride perfectly. I don't know if anyone can defend a pass like that."

Cohasset's offense could do little after that, punting three times and throwing an interception on their remaining possessions. A Ryan Gold 13-yard touchdown run at the end of the third quarter accounted for the rest of the scoring.

The Skippers defense played better than the final score would indicate, with solid games turned in by Ferriera, defensive linemen Scott Wakefield and Leo Clougherty, and linebacker Matt Casey.

The team played without their best offensive lineman, junior guard Nick Arment, who broke a bone in his leg during the Thanksgiving Day game against Hull. Despite that, Cohasset ran for 170 yards, led by 86 from Leahy. Durkin had 62 yards on 23 carries.

So Cohasset finishes the season with a 10-1 record, and will be able to add another league championship banner to their collection. The year did not end as the team would have hoped, but that did not keep Rolfe from complimenting his team during his postgame talk with his players.

"I said, 'Be proud of the season you had,'" Rolfe said. "We've been together since Aug. 6. It's a shame we had to let it end like this, but in the end, we're proud of them."

Dorian Bryant hired as new boys hoops coach

lost in college when we won those four categories."

The 27-year old continued his success on the court in college at Salem State, where he was a two-year captain for a team that made NCAA Div. 3 tournament play all four years he was there. One of those years, the team made the Final Four.

Bryant is hoping to bring some of that success to the Cohasset program, instilling some of the same coaching disciplines he learned at Salem State. It will be a challenge at the beginning; the Skippers are a very young group this year, with no seniors coming back from last year's tournament team.

It is a challenge Bryant says he is looking forward to.

"We have a chance to build something special here," said the new coach. "It's going to take a little bit of time, and a lot of effort and teaching on our part."

Bryant has brought Peter Bishop and Dave Costa, two local men that are new to Cohasset, to assist him. Costa coached last year at Plymouth South, and will be in charge of the JV team this year.

The connection between Bryant and Bishop goes back a while. As a young child growing up in what he calls a "tough neighborhood" in Roxbury, Bryant came to Cohasset as a first grader as part of the Metropolitan Council for Education Opportunity (METCO) program.

The Bishops were Bryant's host family, as Bryant attended Cohasset schools for 12 years. Bryant now lives with Bishop in South Boston, and says he is still close with the Bishop family.

Over those 12 years, Bryant says he developed a special connection with the town, one that still remains today.

"For me to come back to my alma mater and give back to this community is very special to me," Bryant said. "I'm very happy to be working here in Cohasset, working for Coach Ford, and working in a place that is very near and dear to my heart."

Bryant, who works full-time for Ground Effects Landscaping in Marshfield, says he will also be a part-time substitute teacher at CHS. He sees that as an opportunity to further build relationships with his players and other students at the school.

Ford, who remains at CHS as athletic director, is confident that his former player and assistant will get the job done.

"Dorian is an excellent basketball person, but more importantly, he is a great overall person," Ford said. "He will be a great representative for the program and the town. He has a big rebuilding job to do here, but he will do a great job."

Alternatives place NHL on thin ice

Bruins fans are a unique breed. Like a good dog, they're loyalty comes largely unconditional.

So why do I bring this up at this time? To punctuate the pain hockey folks are going through right now? Of course not. To poke a little fun at pal Mike Breen?...well, maybe a little bit.

Really, though, what I'm looking to accomplish is convincing a few of you diehards there is really no need to despair. The sport you love is still eminently accessible.

This is the hub of the best college hockey in the land, and there's some pretty good minor league and Junior hockey being played right now as well. And then there's my personal favorite, high school hockey, which will kick off in less than two weeks.

Speaking for myself, I'd much rather attend a high school hockey game than a Bruins game. It's infinitely more convenient, close, cheap and, it says here, satisfying.

You just can't put a price on cheering for a kid you've watched grow up, even if it's been from afar. He could be your newspaper boy, the youngster who walked by your house on the way to school or simply someone whose progress you've followed in the weekly newspaper. Regardless, it's a unique connection. There's just something kind of cool about watching these kids take the next step. And if he or she just happens to be pursuing that while playing your favorite sport, all the better.

It's your call, though. Maybe B.U., the Providence Baby B's or Bridgewater Bandits are more your cup of tea.

The bottom line is there are plenty of options beyond the NHL and we hockey diehards owe it to ourselves to explore them. The levels of proficiency and aesthetics may not be as high, but, hey, it's still our game.

In fact, I think it's highly appropriate we turn our backs on the NHL, just as the shot-callers within that august body have turned their backs on us. The fact these folks find it acceptable to go to the mats to fight over how to best split hundreds of millions of dollars tells me all I need to know about the regard in which they hold my allegiance.

Hope to see you at the rinks.

All-Scholastic golf team

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

The young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

Matt Lombard - Senior (Capt.) - Hanover

A four-year player on the Indians golf team, Lombard was a consistent No. 1 man again this season…The Patriot League All-star and three-time Mariner All-Scholastic paced his team to a 15-3 record, their best in years, and kept them in the tight four-team race for the PL crown…Hanover ended up second behind only Duxbury…Lombard recorded a team best 81 at the challenging course at the Pleasant Valley Golf Club in Sutton, helping the Indians finish third overall in the Div. 3 State tourney…A week earlier, the Hanover golfers also took third at the Div. 3 South Sectionals to qualify them for the states….The team's postseason berth was its first in 14 years…Lombard plans to attend college in the fall. Hanover coach John Sullivan: "His strength on the course is that he has few weaknesses in his play. He doesn't get into much trouble. He's extremely dedicated to the game and never missed a practice, even those that were optional. That really shows leadership to the younger players."

Pat Cadigan - Junior - Hingham

Was the No. 1 man for Hingham this season after the graduation losses of top talent…Cadigan improved by leaps and bounds this season, helping to pace his team in the four-team race for the Patriot League title…Hingham ended up tying Scituate for third with a 14-4 record, behind champs, Duxbury and runners-up, Hanover…Was the medalist in a number of matches this season, one of his biggest efforts coming in a key 210-214 victory over Scituate at the end of the year…At the Div. 2 South Sectional, Cadigan and teammate Bryan Quinlan teamed for a seventh place finish, just one stroke shy of the sixth and final Div. 2 State qualifying spot…A Patriot League All-star, Cadigan shot a 78 at the Sectionals, qualifying him for the State Individuals…Just a junior, Cadigan returns for another golf season at HHS next fall.

Bryan Quinlan - Senior - Hingham

Shot a team best 77 at the Div. 2 South Sectionals, pacing his team to a seventh place finish, just one stroke shy of the six and final state qualifying spot…His score was low enough to qualify him for the State Individual tourney…As Hingham's No. 2 man, Quinlan was a key factor in the Harbormen's race for the Patriot League title…The four-team battle found Hingham falling a bit short in the final standings, getting edged by champs Duxbury and runners-up Hanover with a 14-4 record, tying Scituate for third…Quinlan is making his first appearance on the Mariner All-Scholastic team after receiving an Honorable Mention last year.

Hunter Talcott - Junior - Scituate

A shoo-in for this team with his Div. 3 state championship…Earned that honor by shooting a one-over 73 at Sutton's Pleasant Valley Golf Course, one stroke better than the nearest competitor…Title came on the heels of a 77 at the South Sectional match at Wentworth Golf and Country Club in Plainville…A member of Scituate's Hatherly Country Club and Marshfield Green Harbors, where he broke the course record this past summer…Plans to play golf in college, and is hoping for a career in the game…Scituate coach Bob Beatty: "Hunter just lives and breathes golf. When I think of all his hard work, and all the hours on the driving range and on the golf course, it just makes me smile. He pulled all that together with his incredible tenacity and did something no one else here at Scituate High has ever done, and something maybe no one else here ever will."

Mike Dempsey - Senior - Norwell

The Clippers' number-one golfer all season, for a team that won the South Shore League…Was at his best against South Shore League rivals…Shot a third-place 76 at the league meet at Southers Marsh Golf Club, only two shots behind the leader, who was playing on his home course…One of ten league all-stars, along with teammate Cody Cavicchi…Norwell coach Ken Camerota: "He had a few tough losses against good teams, but was a good golfer all year. The team got some good leadership from him."

Cody Cavicchi - Freshman - Norwell

Won consistently at the number-two position, no small feat for a freshman…Shot a second-place 75 at the league meet, one shot off the pace…A South Shore League all-star with teammate Mike Dempsey…Is being counted on to help lead a talented group of returnees to the Clippers' golf program in 2005…Norwell coach Ken Camerota: "He went 8-1-1 in the league. For a freshman, that's pretty damn good."

Honorable Mention:

Kevin Barber - So. - Cohasset
Bill Lambert - Sr. (Capt.) - Hanover
Ted Schwartz - Sr. - Hingham

— These teams were selected by Mariner Sports Editors Julie Ann Nevero, Mark Goodman, and Rob Slager with the help of area coaches. Only public school athletes were considered.

Senior Nicole Whitney makes a run for it during last week's Powder Puff game.

$3K raised for Quincy-based homeless shelter!

Brian Houlihan, owner of bia bistro of Cohasset, in conjunction with Ron Goodwin of Goodwin Graphics and the Cohasset Rotary Club, hosted a dinner and raffle recently to benefit Father Bill's Place, a homeless shelter located in Quincy.

Bia Bistro served a three-course dinner which included pan-roasted Atlantic salmon, leek and fennel risotto, slow-braised lamb shank, maple roasted root vegetable ragout and for dessert, Tahitian vanilla crème brulee.

The Cohasset Rotary Club held a sold-out fundraiser dinner and wine tasting at BIA's Bistro in the Village last Monday that raised $3,000 for Father Bill's in Quincy. Contributing to the success of the event were those pictured above - Ronnie Goodwin, Rotary Club; Mark Melia, Horizon Beverages; Amrya Chase, Village Wine & Spirits; John Yawinski, Executive Director of Father Bill's; Brian Houlihan, Chef/owner of BIA's and Jim Wells, Coldwell Banker - Hingham.

"We couldn't continue to serve the homeless community on the South Shore without the faithful support of our local residents and businesses."
— John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place

Raffle items included an 1898 antique photograph of Cohasset donated by Richard Fitzpatrick of The Book Rack in Braintree, Wine Baskets donated by Ron Goodwin of Goodwin Graphics, and generous gift certificates to bia bistro donated by Brian Houlihan of Bia Bistro and PJ's Country House Restaurant by Geoff and Lisa O'Brien of PJ's Country House in Scituate. The event raised $3,000 for Father Bill's Place and will be used to purchase gift cards for shelter guests this Christmas holiday.

"We couldn't continue to serve the homeless community on the South Shore without the faithful support of our local residents and businesses," said John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place. "On behalf of the board of directors of Father Bill's Place, our dedicated staff and most important, our guests, I extend heart-felt thanks to Bia Bistro, the Cohasset Rotary Club, and Goodwin Graphics for sponsoring this event. It will be a Merry Christmas for the individuals and families Father Bill's Place will serve this holiday season."

Mrs. Schleiff gets a standing ovation on her last day at the middle school.

Mrs. Schleiff sets sail

By Caroline Meade
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Mrs. Marie Schleiff has been teaching for 34 years, and she has spent all of them in the Cohasset schools. Mrs. Schleiff took one year off from teaching (or it would be 35 years) to adopt twin girls. She has taught in five grades: 7, 8, 9, 11, and 12

Two of her most enjoyable grades to teach are 11 and 12. She loves to have long discussions with older, more mature students, but she loves the enthusiasm and spirit of the seventh graders. Despite common rumors, Mrs. Schleiff was not a cheerleader for the Red Sox.

A student of hers who was present during the interview, Cam, says she is a great teacher and that she has the hardest subject to teach but does a great job with it. There was one assignment that he did not like — a piece of homework called the vocabulary book (mainly because he was doing his homework during the Red Sox game and he got distracted). He also said that it's hard to teach all the language arts of writing, grammar, speech and reading because most kids don't like the subject those are some quotes from Cam.

" She was a great teacher. and I'm going to miss her."
— Andrew DeVitre, freshman

Ninth-grader Andrew DeVitre says, "Mrs. Schleiff was a very interesting teacher, and if you were having trouble with something, Mrs. Schleiff would always be there to help. She was a great teacher. and I'm going to miss her," a touching quote on his part. He says a big "good bye" for Mrs.Shcleiff.

Mrs. Schleiff was inspired to go into teaching because she greatly respected her teachers as a child. Mrs. Schleiff was treated with just as much respect by her students. Who knows how many students she has inspired to go into teaching? Best wishes for a fun- filled retirement

Caroline Meade, a sixth-grader at the middle school, wrote this article for the school newspaper.

New England Artisans Showcase premiers Saturday

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

"There are a lot of disappointed buyers who have told me they are delighted that we are doing something to continue to bring this type of craft to this area," said Diane Jumper, organizer of the first annual New England Artisans Showcase, to be held at the Sons of Italy Hall this Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"Compared to Winterfest, the Artisans Showcase is very low-key, almost like an open house sort of event."
— Diane Jumper, organizer

Without missing a beat, the Artisans Showcase has stepped in to fill the void created by the sudden cancellation of the Hingham Winterfest Folk Art and Craft Show, which ran annually for 12years at the Hingham Middle School. The cancellation was due to the decision to drop the show by national promoters Goodrich & Co. of Pennsylvania, which managed Winterfest for last six years, after Jumper, a longtime Hingham resident, had managed the show from within town for the first six years.

"They did a great job the last six years and I know it was a difficult business decision that they made," Jumper said.

The showcase is what Jumper and her co-organizers call a spin-off of Winterfest, a small independent gathering of 12artisans with all but two of the exhibitors who participated in that show, which hosted more than 50 exhibitors at its peak.

The smaller but equally accomplished list of artisans in the new show includes two Hingham residents. One of them, Tim Jumper, Diane's husband, is a wood craftsman whose carvings have been featured in national magazines, including one of his many Santa Claus pieces which graced the cover of Early American Life magazine in 1997. His total works also include animals and birds, folk art and historical figures.

Also from Hingham, Bill Sarni specializes in wooden decoys — fine examples of traditional New England style decoy carvings.

Another artisan whom Diane Jumper recommends as one of the showcase's most expert participants is David Claggett, from Weston, Vt. Claggett is a tinsmith whose work is sold in the American Folk Art Museum in New York as well as in other private and state museums. He is a licensed craftsman for the Winterthur Museum in Delaware and for Colonial Williamsburg, Va.

"David practices his craft the way it was done 200 years ago," Jumper said. "His work reflects the time period between 1780 and 1840 just as his techniques and tools do."

The remaining artisans appearing in Saturday's show include miniature doll craftsperson Carol Spence Sellner, of Connecticut; Bob & Nancy Sampson of the Tobacco Shed Pottery inWestminster, Mass.; respective floor cloth and band box specialists Dennis & Sheila Belanger, of New Hampshire; and furniture and accessories makers Ed & Diane Faria, of Middleboro, Mass.

Also, this collection of craftspeople from Maine — fabric artist Cathy Shamel, scherenschnitte specialist Claudia Hopf, June Weaver of Out of Knowwear soft sculpturists, and Betsy Golon of Common Folk Farm, offering specialty herbal products.

"Compared to Winterfest, the Artisans Showcase is very low-key, almost like an open house sort of event," Jumper said. "But it's going to be great fun. It's a unique opportunity for people to buy goods from out-of-state artisans, whom they usually don't find in this area."

Merrie Market offers holiday delights

Old Ship Church, 107 Main St., Hingham will hold its annual holiday Merrie Market Saturday, Dec. 4, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. This festive bazaar has been held for more than 50 years and is eagerly anticipated by shoppers all over the South Shore.

New features this year include a special area where children may purchase gifts for their friends and families and a spectacular gingerbread house raffle. Gift baskets with themes, unusual gifts, a silent auction featuring a handmade quilt and special art items, an opportunity to win a reserved pew or parking space for Old Ship's popular Christmas Eve service, tempting food products, and a new lunch menu are among the other offerings.

The fair also features festive holiday wreaths, each one hand-crafted and designed to achieve the one-of-a-kind look. The materials used are natural products such as pine cones, berries, nuts, boxwood, rose hips, winterberry, juniper, and white pine boughs.

Seekers of unusual items should stop by the Treasures Table, which features jewelry, small furniture, glassware, ceramics, and many other items donated from homes in the community.

A special room for children will have the usual array of toys, plus a new area where they may purchase gifts for their families and friends. To help keep kids happily occupied while their mothers shop, volunteers will help them work on crafts. Santa will pose with children and families for photos, which will then be mounted in a holiday folder designed by artist Marty Saunders.

The Kitchen Treats table will again feature a wide variety of food items, such as preserves, homemade candy, pies, and honey, all produced by Old Ship members and friends.

A new creative lunch menu will feature homemade corn chowder, chicken vegetable soup, macaroni and cheese, hot dogs, apple pie, brownies, coffee, tea, and cold drinks. Stop for lunch before or after shopping.

A spectacular Gingerbread House created and donated by a parishioner will be the featured raffle item this year.

Don't miss the (un)common Cohasset Village Fair

Holiday tradition is for one and all

Cohasset has one of the most pristine town commons on the South Shore. And never is the 300-year-old green lovelier than during the holiday season.

Bargain hunters, who want something a little different, won't be disappointed by spending a few hours from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 4 at the Cohasset Village Fair that has a decidedly Victorian flavor.

For starters John Coe, portraying the Town Crier, with bell in hand will once again welcome visitors and direct people to the attractions on and around the common.

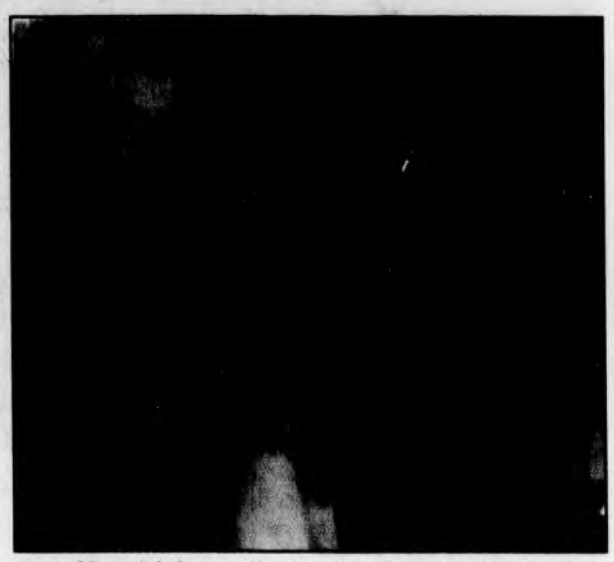
The Village Fair, which has been a holiday tradition for more than 60 years, is hosted by three of Cohasset's churches and the non-profit Cohasset Appalachia Service Project (ASP) – a home building ministry for the poor.

Volunteers from First Parish Unitarian Universalist, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, the Second Congregational Church, and the ASP work together to create this holiday marketplace.

• The Second Congregational Church (next to Town Hall across the common on Highland Avenue) opens its doors to its holiday boutique filled with hand-crafted gifts and decorations. While Mom and Dad shop, children can visit the Kids' Craft Corner where they can make an ornament of their own.

Hungry shoppers can visit the church's popular New England Chowder Bar and bake table. The Surf 'n Turf Raffle where fresh lobsters and filet mignon will be raffled hourly beginning at 11 a.m.

• On the other side of the common, treasure hunters can make their way to the First Parish's Estate(ish) Sale in the First Parish Hall, 23 No. Main St.. Quality items include furniture, housewares, books, children's toys and clothing, select adult clothing, linens, games, sporting goods, and much more.



The Swedish Bake Shop is also in the First-Parish House and can warm shoppers' spirits with home-made cinnamon buns served with coffee, tea or hot chocolate. Many volunteers begin very early in the morning under the direction of Sine Pounder to create these delicious treats. The opportunity to bargain shop while savoring Pounder's famous Swedish rolls has been a Cohasset tradition for years. Visitors will also find delicious homemade soup mixes made by the church school and a tree of new and used ornaments. Tickets will also be on sale for the annual Christmas Concert by the Unicorn Singers Dec. 12 at 4 p.m. at the historic First Parish Meetinghouse.

• Shoppers can find the perfect hostess gift and wonderful Herbes de Provence at Saint Stephen's Country Store. The Bake Shop there is famous for its homemade toffee, fudge, cakes and pies, while the Snack Bar will offer donuts and bagels, hot dogs and homemade soups. Volunteers have been busy collecting hundreds of used books, CD's, tapes and videos to include in the popular Book Sale.

• Santa Claus will be the guest of honor on the Common (or the Second Congregational Church Nursery in inclement weather) from 11 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Children can visit with Santa and have a picture taken by an ASP volunteer. Don't miss your child visiting the Secret Room at St. Stephen's Church where ASP volunteer elves help little ones select and wrap the perfect surprise for Mom and Dad, a sister or brother, or even the family pet! All gifts are priced for a child's wallet and start at just 50 cents. Proceeds support ASP's home repair program.

• And don't miss the Rusty Skippers who perform their Annual Holiday Pops Concert at First Parish Meetinghouse on the common at noon the day of the fair. The Skippers have been preparing a variety of holiday selections sure to appeal to all ages. Their spirited program will include several styles of holiday music including carols, classical, jazz, rock, Latin and Hanukkah selections. The concert is free and appropriate for all ages, and will last about one hour. A free-will offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

Parking is available along North Main Street and at the municipal parking lot behind the Red Lion Inn. Fair-goers can also visit the many shops and boutiques along South Main and Elm streets in Cohasset's historic village.

Two of Santa's helpers at the First Parish's Estate(ish) Sale last year were Betsy Millard and Margie Brown.

The Unicorn Singers perform in Cohasset on Sunday, Dec. 12. Tickets will be available at the Village Fair Dec. 4.

Hear holiday carols of the season

The Unicorn Singers directed by Margo Euler presents "WASSAIL! A Concert of Christmas Carols," Friday, Dec. 10 at 8 p.m. at St. John's in Hingham and Sunday, Dec. 12 at 4 p.m. at First Parish in Cohasset. Included will be carols from long ago, as set by modern composers; carols from the pop, jazz and gospel tradition; carols by talented soloists and carols for everyone to sing together.

Hear them perform together as a chamber choir in exquisite choral arrangements. Hear them in trios and quartets in costume, serenading you from the four corners of the room. Hear them bring to life the much-loved music of this joyful time of year. Come to listen and to sing, and to get in the spirit of the season.

First Parish is holding a special reception in their newly renovated Parish House following the concert so that the musicians and concert-goers can visit and enjoy the festive nature of the event together.

Members of the Unicorn Singers, now in its 26th season of making music on the South Shore, come from 10 surrounding communities, meeting weekly at House of Prayer in Hingham. Tickets are $15 at the door and $12 in advance at First Parish's office by calling (781) 383-1100.

IT'S HAPPENING

Snowflake Fair at Beechwood

The Snowflake Fair will be held on Sat. Dec. 4 at the Beechwood Church on Church Street from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Beach glass candy will be available this year! Crafts by The Crafty Ladies as well as baked goods and attic treasures will be for sale. Lunch will be served.

Ellen and Merri Rosen of Duxbury find a parking spot on "Black Friday" at the Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham. Ellen likes the new plaza because she can walk her dog, Elijah (in the car), while window shopping.

Plaza parking passes muster at new Derby Street Shoppes

Spaces adequate for busy weekend

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If last weekend — including the day-after-Thanksgiving which is touted as the busiest shopping day of the year — was a parking test, then Derby Street Shoppes passed.

Satellite lots with shuttle buses for employees helped take the pressure off the tight parking situation at the new plaza, says Robert Frazier of W. R. Weiner Associates, owners of the shopping center.

"Friday was a tough day no matter where you were," said Frazier, who is vice president of development at the company. He said at peak times Weiner Assoc. will continue to offer the shuttle service. The outdoor plaza that has been described as a "lifestyle center" has two satellite lots with 300 spaces, plus other employees spots behind certain stores. Including customer parking, there are roughly 2,000 spaces in all.

Weiner Assoc. realized parking could be a problem at the plaza when the retail mix changed to include more restaurants which have greater parking needs than shops. To that end, the developers met with the Planning Board last spring to come up with the additional parking.

But the Hingham Planning Board, which has described the site as "over populated," sent up a red flag on the potential for parking headaches much earlier. Back in October 2002, the board sent in a letter to the Hingham Zoning Board of Appeals, which later issued a special permit for the project, expressing its concerns that the redevelopment project had too much gross floor area for the available land.

Hingham Planning Board Chairman Sarah Corey said while it's good the satellite lots are working out, there has to be a continual, coordinated effort on the part of the developer to make them successful. Corey noted the plaza is not yet fully built out but hopes parking and traffic flow on Derby Street both work out.

There are currently spaces for a total of roughly 60 shops at Derby Street, 50 of which are occupied. Six vacancies are not spoken for, according to Frazier. Coming soon are Crate & Barrel, Burton's restaurant, and Water Water Everywhere, among others.

"I have to say our store is always full – so people are finding a parking space somewhere."
— Greg Lagrottera, the Shoe Market

Frazier said store managers have done a good job encouraging their employees to use the satellite lots making plaza parking available for customers. He said Weiner Assoc. will continue to be vigilant about the issue.

"We're willing to consider improvements and are willing to work with the retailers and the town to make sure Derby Street Shoppes is a good experience for the customers," he said.

Hingham Police Sgt. Rusty Corcoran said plaza officials have been extremely cooperative in ensuring that traffic moves smoothly and parking is adequate.

"We've had the utmost cooperation from the management company (Weiner)," Corcoran said. "They've been fantastic. We talk to them several times a week."

Corcoran said three detail officers are at the plaza on a regular basis — for eight hours on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday — two hired by Weiner Assoc. and one by Whole Foods, a new supermarket.

The officers assist traffic in and out of the parking areas, make sure the fire lanes are left open, and motorists observe the pedestrian crossings. Corcoran said parking has not been a problem.

Weiner Assoc. completed improvements to Derby Street itself this week, including repaving and marking the heavily traveled road. The traffic lights at the plaza can also now be adjusted by computers as traffic needs demand.

The plaza, which is just off Route 3 at Exit 15, draws mainly from Duxbury and Pembroke to Weymouth — a region that includes 90,000 households with an average household income of $85,000 a year.

Patty Doyle, general manager of White's Fine Cakes and Pastries – which remained after the old Hingham Plaza was razed – said she has confidence the new owners will rectify parking problems that surface.

"We haven't had a lot of complaints," she said about parking. White's has been at the location roughly 10 years and survived the years when the former plaza became a virtual ghost town before it was redeveloped. "We very happy," Doyle said. "Things are going well – the plaza is much cleaner and in general, the whole plaza is very nice."

She also noted the traffic light at the plaza entrance has been a big improvement. "Before (the light) you took your life in your hands," Doyle said.

Greg Lagrotteria, owner of The Shoe Market that moved to Hingham from Cohasset Plaza, said people have complained about parking but that is quickly washed away when they see the mix of shops.

"Sure there are some challenges as things are worked through," he said. "But I have to say our store is always full – so people are finding a parking space somewhere."

Michele Kelley, a Pembroke resident who works in Hingham, said parking issues are not going to deter her at all. Shopping at Derby Street Shoppes just before Thanksgiving, she described the availability of spaces as "not bad."

"But I imagine parking is going to get insane when everyone does their Christmas shopping and once they realize what's inside Derby Street. There's everything from Kohl's at the low end to Coldwater Creek and J. Jill at the high end," she said. "It's so convenient and there's so much variety.

"It's to die for."

Diversity Committee sponsors talk on culture

International tensions and specific recent events have convinced the Cohasset Diversity Committee to provide forums to engage the entire Cohasset community around issues and opportunities of diversity. The programs have all been suggested by local residents in response to questionnaires and conversations about what would interest them. Local residents will serve as panelists and discussion leaders.

The Diversity Committee will sponsor a holiday event at the South Shore Arts Center, 3 N. Main St., on Thursday, Dec. 9 from 7:30 - 9 p.m. Harvard Professor and Cohasset resident, Ubaldo DiBenedetto, will present Renaissance painting as a staircase having six steps, each a technical contribution to the conquest of reality - the chief objective of Renaissance painting.

Art critic Bernard Berenson once said that art is what we feel; the rest is science. Since it would be pretentious to teach what one should or should not feel, the lecture will deal with the "science" of painting. Special digital images and photographs will show the characteristics of each progressive step.

Questions and discussion will be welcomed. Light refreshments will be served, and harpist, Genevieve Poole will provide background music before and after the lecture and discussion.

Gen, a freshman at South Shore Vocational Technical High School, has been playing harp for five years and was featured at the March 2004 spring musical at First Parish Church. She plays a new Lyon & Healy pedal harp, studies with Stephanie Curcio of Straham, N.H., and enjoys a variety of musical styles, especially contemporary.

• The subject for Wednesday, Jan. 12 is a discussion about how different customs affect the way people relate to one another.

Gumbo — the class of one-pot meals

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

When I cook for the holidays, I often start my menu planning with a make-ahead one-pot meal. Beef stew (or a variation thereof) seems a bit mundane and soup is not festive enough. That's when gumbo comes to the rescue with its rich, dark roux paired with aromatic vegetables, spices, smoked sausage, flavorful stock and finally chicken or shellfish. A salad, some bread, and a dessert are all that's left for an easy-to-manage and first-class holiday meal. The secret to this Louisiana dish is complexity of flavor that depends on the dark roux, a slow-cooked mixture of oil and flour, which is the foundation of any respectable gumbo.

Many traditional recipes require an hour or so slaving over the stove to produce a perfect, deep mahogany roux. In this case, the roux is equal parts flour and vegetable oil stirred slowly over low heat until it turns the color of an old penny. To reduce the cooking time, we not only preheated the oil but also found that medium heat and constant stirring reduced the hour-long process down to 20 minutes, time well spent to deliver a gumbo's unique flavor. Most recipes call for equal parts oil and flour (a half-cup of each in our recipe) which turned out to be the best ratio. Just in the interest of testing, we did test oil substitutes (butter, bacon fat, and olive oil) but simple vegetable oil was best. Bleached all-purpose flour was slightly better than unbleached for a silkier result.

Next are the vegetables, the typical combination of onion, celery and bell pepper. We felt one large onion, one bell pepper, and one rib of celery provided lots of flavor. Along with the aromatics, the gumbo benefits from some garlic and six cloves did the trick. Creole and Cajun cooks use lots of spices in their cooking, most commonly being bay, thyme and oregano. Of course we wanted the gumbo to have a touch of heat as well. We settled on a couple of bay leaves and a teaspoon of thyme — the oregano seemed to get lost. For heat we added a small amount of cayenne although it can be added to taste.

Recipes for gumbo always include stock so we tested making gumbo using both chicken stock (canned or homemade) and homemade shrimp stock. The chicken stock was fine, eliminating the need to make the shrimp stock. As we added the stock to the hot roux, we discovered adding cold or room temperature stock made the smoothest gumbo. When we tried to incorporate hot stock into the hot roux it invariably produced lumps.

Another key ingredient is smoked sausage such as andouille or kielbasa, the latter being easier to find and perfectly acceptable. For our pot of gumbo we found a half-pound of sausage was plenty. We favored gumbo that also included chicken and especially liked bone-in thighs. We skinned the thighs, seasoned and then browned them until dark golden brown. The chicken not only cooked much quicker this way, it also had a meatier texture than if simply thrown into the pot. We also liked the addition of shrimp and call for 3/4 pound. They should be shelled and deveined (the last step is optional). The shrimp should be added to the gumbo five minutes before the dish is finished to prevent it from becoming tough and overcooked.

Many gumbo recipes use file powder or okra as thickeners. I didn't even bother with file since it is not available to most local cooks and it is also an acquired taste. Okra was easy enough to find in the freezer case but we didn't come across a taster that preferred the okra gumbo to okra-less gumbo. So, we omitted the traditional thickeners and instead reduced the amount of chicken broth to six cups, which resulted in full-flavored gumbo with tons of body.

GUMBO WITH CHICKEN AND SHRIMP

This gumbo is even better if made a day ahead. If doing so, don't add the scallions and parsley until immediately before serving. Reheat over medium-low heat until the gumbo has reached a simmer and the chicken is hot all the way through. Deveining shrimp, especially with smaller varieties, is a matter of personal preference. Quick frozen shrimp (IQF) with no additives are recommended.

1/2 cup plus 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/2 cup all purpose flour, bleached preferred
1 large onion cut into 1/4-inch dice
1 red or green bell pepper cut into 1/4-inch dice
1 rib celery cut into 1/4-inch dice
6 medium garlic cloves, pressed or minced
1/2 teaspoon salt plus additional for seasoning the chicken
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1/4 teaspoon cayenne
2 bay leaves
6 cups low sodium homemade or low sodium chicken broth at cool room temperature
6 bone-in chicken thighs, skin removed Freshly ground black pepper
1/2 pound smoked sausage such as andouille or kielbasa cut into 1/2-inch slices
3/4 pound shrimp (31 to 40 or 41 to 50) peeled and deveined
3 medium scallions thinly sliced
1/3 cup chopped fresh parsley leaves
3 cups cooked white rice

1. Heat 1/2-cup oil in a Dutch oven or soup pot over medium-high heat until hot, about 2 minutes. Stir in flour gradually using a wooden spatula or spoon until no lumps remain. Lower heat to medium and continue stirring frequently until the roux is a very deep mahogany or like the color of an old penny, about 20 minutes. If the roux begins to smoke, remove to cool and lower heat slightly before resuming cooking.

2. Add onion, bell peppers, celery, garlic, salt, thyme, cayenne and bay and sauté stirring frequently until the vegetables are softened, about eight minutes. Slowly add the chicken stock stirring briskly until completely incorporated and smooth. Increase heat and allow the mixture to come to a boil. Reduce heat to maintain a lively simmer and cook for 30 minutes. Meanwhile season the chicken thighs liberally with salt and freshly ground black pepper. Heat a large skillet over high heat. When hot add the remaining tablespoon vegetable oil and swirl to evenly coat the bottom of the pan. Add the chicken pieces and brown well on both sides. Remove from skillet and set aside.

3. Add the browned chicken and the sausage to the gumbo and simmer an additional thirty minutes. Stir in the shrimp and simmer until cooked through, about five minutes longer. Taste for seasoning adding salt or cayenne as needed.Off heat stir in the scallions and parsley and serve immediately with a mound of rice.

Serves six.

A final farewell to the growing season

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

Another priority for this coming week is to gather and empty clay pots, strawberry jars, and ceramic containers that remain outdoors.

'Tis the season' for holiday shopping, baking and decorating but several days of moderate temperatures produced an irresistible urge to spend my time working in the garden rather than cope with the crowds at the mall. Should Mother Nature continue to offer these mild stretches of weather, I may actually manage to spread my lingering heap of pine bark mulch, clean up the borders and heel in several dozen pots of shrubs and perennials clustered along my back walkway before the ground freezes.

Once the month of December arrives, the time has come to bid a final farewell to the garden. I set aside the first week of December to make a final inspection of the gardens, rake the last crop of leaves, collect pine needles to apply later in the season as a winter mulch, organize and clean garden paraphernalia and store chemicals.

As I clipped, raked, and hauled refuse from the garden surrounding my fish pond, I was alarmed to discover my resident goldfish swimming near the surface gulping for air. Usually, once water temperatures drop into the 50's, the fish become inactive, stop feeding and tend to congregate on the bottom of the pool. Regretfully, I neglected to cover the pond this fall to minimize the accumulation of falling leaves in the water. Decaying debris and a malfunctioning pump were obviously taking their toll on my colorful water garden inhabitants requiring immediate action. Tender annual water plants that had been killed by frost were removed and composted. Hardy potted plants on the shallow shelves were lifted, cut back and dropped to the bottom of the pond. A long-handled net was used to scoop out hundreds of soggy leaves that had drifted into the pond during our recent wind storms.

Pond care

A pond that is at least 18 inches deep should be able to support goldfish through the winter months. It is rarely cold temperatures that cause the demise of fish and frogs but rather the formation of gasses from decaying plant material building up below the frozen surface. Keeping the pond surface open during the chilly months ahead is essential for the survival of fish, especially in small water gardens. The failure of my pump necessitated a quick visit to Paradise Water Gardens to procure a new device which I attached to a cinder block with the outflow pointed up, approximately 6 inches below the surface. All winter long the vigorously bubbling water should prevent the surface from freezing solid enabling harmful gasses to escape. There are also small heaters that can be purchased to allow an air hole. In addition to ensuring the survival of the residents below the surface, the open water will attract birds and small wildlife that are often desperate for a drink during the coldest weather. If a solid layer of ice should form over the surface, pour boiling water several times over the thin, frozen mounded dome of ice above the pump. Never bang a hole through the ice with a tool or rock as the sound waves can potentially kill your fish.

Clay pots

Another priority for this coming week is to gather and empty clay pots, strawberry jars, and ceramic containers that remain outdoors. Many gardeners have a substantial investment in these decorative pots and those left with soil in them through the winter months may crack or break as the damp soil freezes and expands. Tender, withered plants should be removed and added to the compost heap. I create a separate compost pile for the used potting soil and when spring comes, it serves as an ideal, organic additive for planting perennials or preparing new beds. Once the contents have been composted, scrub and clean the pots inside and out to eliminate any pests and diseases and store the dried containers in a shed, garage or basement.

Large plastic containers left outdoors during the winter months often discolor or become brittle when subjected to freezing temperatures. Although most of the pots are unlikely to break, they will maintain their integrity longer if they are emptied and stored in a dry environment. On the other hand, half whiskey barrels tend to fare better when they remain filled with soil during the dormant months. While their soils are still workable, the shriveled remains of frost-damaged annuals should be removed. Hardy chrysanthemums, asters, or sedums may survive the winter in these large containers, but could be snipped back to a few inches. A collection of mixed green branches and berries inserted directly into the soft earth will create a festive, holiday display and provide additional winter protection for remaining plantings.

Garden hoses

Care should also be taken to drain garden hoses by stretching them out in an area with sufficient pitch to allow the water to run out. Freezing water left in the hoses through the winter may expand and burst the hoses. Scrub tools and oil them; empty and clean lawn mowers; wash sprayers and spreaders. Bring in and dust off garden stakes, cages and markers. Be sure to store fertilizers and lime in a dry location. Liquid chemicals should be stored above 40 degrees.

Once these critical preparations for winter weather have been accomplished, I will be able to bid at least a temporary farewell to the garden and focus on the holiday season as I begin the process of gathering greens, colorful berries and dried weeds and pods to create my holiday decorations.

SCIENCE CENTER

The South Shore Natural Science Center announces December programs. For more information, or to register, call the Center at (781) 659-2559. The South Shore Natural Science Center is located at 48 Jacobs Lane in Norwell.

Boxwood Workshop — Have you ever wondered how florists make those beautiful boxwood trees and wreaths? On Tuesday, Dec 7 at 9:30 a.m. and 7 p.m., visitors to the Science Center can learn how to create a tabletop tree or wreath from this hardy green, which will surely last throughout the holiday season. Participants are asked to bring a pair of small pruning shears, and a box to bring their creation home in. All other materials are included in the program fee: $27 for members and $30 for non-members.

Holiday Gifts Workshop — Would you like to tuck a little extra something into Grandpa's holiday present or create a special handmade gift to surprise a friend? On Saturday, Dec. 11 from 1-3 p.m., children grades K-5 are invited to the James to learn how to build simple toys and other creative holiday gifts. The program costs $20 for members and $23 for non-members.

Dad and Me Breakfast and More —On Saturday, Dec. 11 from 9-11 a.m., the James will host a breakfast for children and fathers, followed by a scavenger hunt on the trails surrounding the center. Uncles and grandfathers are welcome too.

The cost for the breakfast event is $12 for members and $14 for non-members (prices represent each adult-child pair)

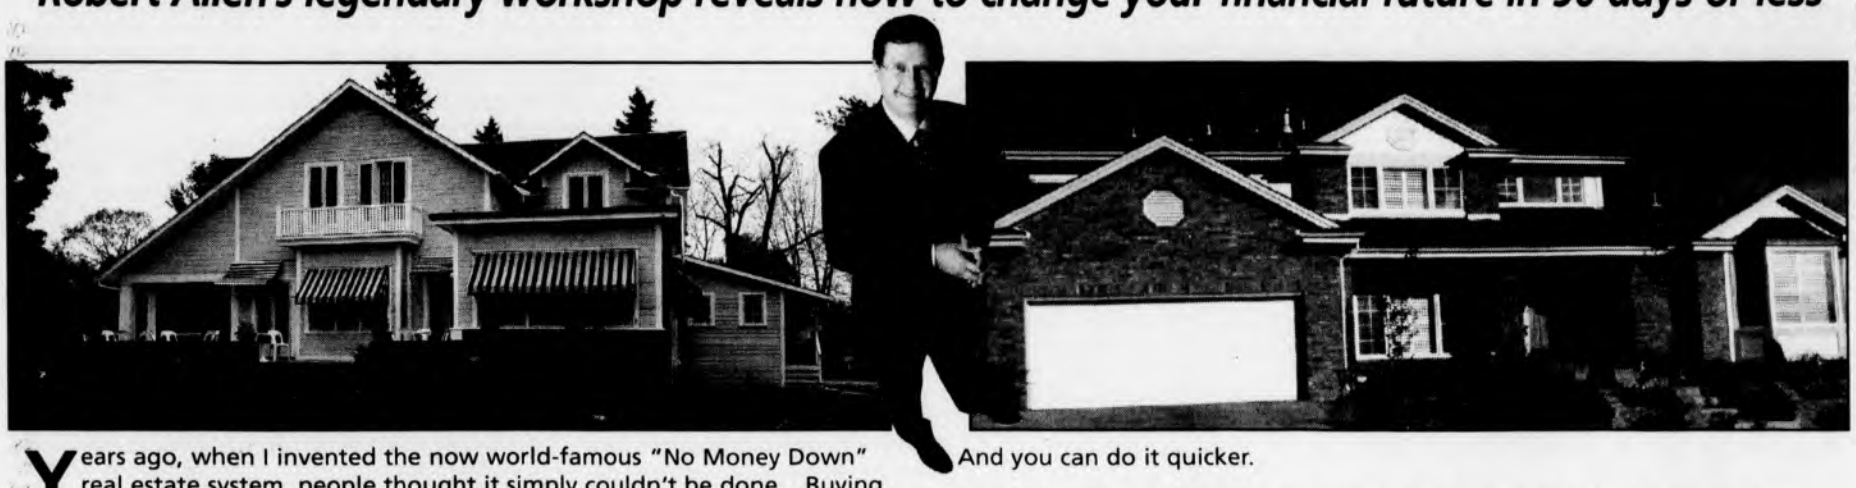
Winter Solstice Celebration — On Friday, Dec. 17 from 6-8 p.m., the science center will host a number of activities to celebrate the arrival of the winter solstice. Festivities will include watching the night sky, telling stories around the campfire, sipping hot cocoa and eating delicious munchies.

Come light a colorful lantern on the darkest day of the year and together we'll end the evening with a brilliant parade. Participants are asked to bring a recycled plastic bottle (2 liter) for lantern-making.

The cost of the event is $10 for members and $12 for non-members. The cost for a family of four is $30 for members, $36 for non-members.

Winter Vacation Week:

During winter vacation week — Dec. 27 – 31 — the science center will have a number of activities planned for young science enthusiasts, grades 1-5.



Topics for the classes will include: Bathtub Science (12/27), Cupboard Chemistry (12/28), Where the Wild Things Are (12/29), Leftover Science (12/30) and Lunchbox Plants (12/31)

Costs for each half day — 9:30am-12:30pm — are $28 for members and $32 for non-members. To come for a full day — 9:30am-3:30pm — the cost is $45 for members, $50 for non-members.

There will also be separate morning classes for kindergartners at the center, at a cost of $28 for members and $32 for non-members, for each half day.

World-famous real estate investor and author reveals secrets of buying homes with no money down

Robert Allen's legendary workshop reveals how to change your financial future in 90 days or less

Years ago, when I invented the now world-famous "No Money Down" real estate system, people thought it simply couldn't be done... Buying real estate without investing a dime of your own money! But, I have proven it can be done, year after year, in all kinds of housing markets. Perhaps you've seen me on TV — or perhaps you've read one of my bestselling books.

I've shown millions that just about anyone can make a fortune in real estate. But I have to tell you, in all my years of showing people how to create wealth through real estate, I believe it's never been as easy as it is today. Plus, I believe you can make more money now in real estate than ever before. And you can do it quicker.

Before the end of the year, you could be my next real estate millionaire — perhaps even a multimillionaire. Even if you're stone cold broke right now, you can still become richer than most Americans will ever be. The profit floodgates have truly opened for so many of my students. I believe you too can take advantage of all the lasting wealth that real estate can provide. And I'd like to tell you how in my updated workshop, Creating Wealth with Real Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO

Challenge #1: Find fast wealth in any city, town, or neighborhood

When I first developed my revolutionary system for buying real estate, I very publicly challenged the media to... "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money." Keep in mind, I would have no cash to invest. No connections. No firsthand knowledge of the real estate market where I was going. But I would have my new system for buying real estate. And that meant none of the above mattered.

DONE

I didn't buy one property. I bought seven!

The Los Angeles Times took me up on my gutsy challenge. In just 57 hours, I had taken title to not one, but seven properties — adding $722,000 in assets to my real estate portfolio. That's the equivalent of more than $10,000 an hour.

ST. LOUIS

Challenge #2: Take someone from unemployed to over $100,000 in equity

No better example of "ANYBODY CAN DO THIS" exists than when I made another major public challenge. As you might be able to guess, I'm not shy about proving my system works. So I declared..."Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, that person will be back on his/her feet with $5,000 in the bank."

DONE

It was in St. Louis, Missouri, where I pulled a couple out of the unemployment line and placed them on the path to wealth. Within 90 days, these first-timers earned more than $5,000 in cash. But that was just getting started. For within the following 12 months, they garnered more than $100,000. It changed their lives forever. Think of how an extra $100,000 or more could change your life and improve your family's future. What dreams have you put aside that $100,000 could reawaken?

NEW YORK

Challenge #3: Prove anyone can do it

I've become famous as America's leading expert on purchasing real estate with no money down. I've been interviewed in newspaper, and on radio and TV. In fact, Regis Philbin challenged me on the spot to prove my system worked for anyone. I selected a young woman right out of Regis' studio audience and guided this first-timer to earning more than $20,000 in 90 days. And now, I'd like to pull you out of your chair and invite you to discover why my powerful and internationally acclaimed Creating Wealth with Real Estate program has been so hugely rewarding for people across the country — and why it can also be your path to substantial wealth.

DONE

Your turn to succeed

Can you become a millionaire? Dozens of my students have. At the FREE preview of my workshop, you'll see real-life examples of how my powerful wealth creation strategies have helped people jump into making money right away.

Challenge #4: Make you my next millionaire! STARTS NOW!

I've proved time and again that my system can work just about anywhere, anytime, and for just about anyone — even people who are flat broke. Now, I'd like to prove it can work for you.

In fact, my big mouth could make you a millionaire. That's because I've challenged myself to create millionaires all across America. Yup, I went right for the "M" word: millionaire. Raised a few eyebrows with that one. But remember, you don't need money in the bank to buy real estate. You don't even need good credit. All you need is my Creating Wealth with Real Estate system and the personal gumption to go out and apply it.

Now it's your turn to take a step toward real wealth

The wealth is out there. I will show you how it's possible to find it and grab it. Take a life-changing step toward financial independence for yourself and your family today. The road (it's more of a superhighway actually) to millionaire status begins right here. Right now. I'm hoping to create at least 1,000 millionaires. And I'd like to count you among them. There's no telling when the free preview of my workshop will be back in your area because it's simply impossible for me to bring my famous workshop to every city. Grab this unique opportunity to discover hidden wealth opportunities in real estate.

Bring someone you care about

If you have a friend or family member who wants to increase their wealth, bring them to this FREE empowering event. I believe there's never been a better time to invest in real estate. Forecasts call for soaring demand for homes and rising prices. At this free event, you'll see how it's possible to ride this historic trend to personal riches.

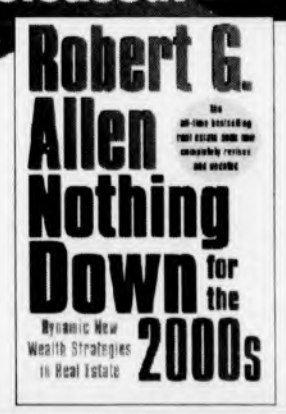
True Stories. True Success.

"Right now, I have a positive cash flow of $2,800 on one property."
— Richard Douglas, New Jersey

"We didn't take anything out of our pocket, and we bought a $250,000 property that gives us a $900 monthly cash flow."
— Guy Burns, Nevada

"I bought two pieces of property and made $25,000 in 90 days. It's so easy to do this stuff, it's amazing."
— Gary Harris, Missouri

"These are proven methods — they work. You can make $25,000 to $35,000 in a matter of 60 days or less."
— Preston Fleming, Illinois



"I just sold my first project; my net profit after all costs was $65,000. I received the check on my 40th birthday."
— Henning Van Deusen-Jensen, California

"Today has been the best day of our real estate careers. We sold our fourth house. This will put our net worth to around $1,000,000."
— John (Chuck) Neuschafer, Georgia

You will discover it's possible to:

- Buy prime real estate without a penny of your own money
- Acquire properties at below market value and put the difference in your pocket
- Profit in unexpected ways from some of the lowest mortgage rates in decades
- Generate immediate cash flow
- Turn your retirement account back into the comfy nest egg it's supposed to be
- Locate hugely lucrative properties nobody else knows about
- Find fantastic foreclosure properties before they ever hit the courthouse steps
- Build substantial monthly income

Rockettes kick off holidays

'Radio City Christmas Spectacular' at the Wang through Dec. 31

New York's famed Radio City Music Hall has presented a "Christmas Spectacular" every year since its 1933 opening. For the past decade, the show has also been performed outside New York. The venerable holiday production — complete with a 42-member cast that includes 22 Rockettes as well as performers playing everything from dancing teddy bears, wooden toy soldiers that come to life to snowmen who shimmy and rapping reindeer —makes its area debut this week at Boston's Wang Theatre.

At the heart of the touring production are the famed Rockettes whose spectacular footwork and eye-high kicks have been featured in Radio City productions for more than 70 years.

"There's nothing quite like this beautiful line of women executing amazing precision dances," said Canton-born Amanda Kloots, 22, who has been a member of the fabled dance company for two years." There is quite simply nothing else like this in the world."

Much has changed in the Christmas Spectacular over the years, but the Rockettes have remained the audience-pleasing staple of every show with their patented high kicks and precision-styling which makes the line of dancers appear as one. As has been the case since the company was first formed as "The Missouri Rockets" in St. Louis in 1925, the women must be between 5'6" and 5'11" inches tall. The line is arranged with the tallest dancers in the center descending to the shortest at the end, creating the illusion of consistent heights.

At 5'11", Kloots is the tallest Rockette in the touring production and as such holds the all-important center position in every kick line. "I have to lead a lot of the numbers, but it is a great spot to have. Dancing as a Rockette requires a style all its own, because everything is timed and has to be perfect. No one can stick out — we have to work really closely together. This job has really taught me the true meaning of teamwork and discipline. We rehearse eight hours a day for three weeks before a show opens," says Kloots who studied at the American Musical and Dramatic Academy in New York and remembers watching the Rockettes as a young child.

"I grew up watching the Rockettes every year on the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade For me, it was as if it just wasn't Christmas-time without them."

"The Radio City Christmas Spectacular" will be at the Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, through Dec. 31. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.wangcenter.org.

A DIZZYING EXPERIENCE

Benign paroxysmal positional vertigo (BPPV) is an inner-ear problem that some individuals experience in conjunction with migraine, certain injuries, and aging. The condition occurs when microscopic, gravity-detecting crystals (called canaliths) end up in the wrong part of the inner ear and strike nerves that sense the body's position. Because the inner ear is responsible for balance, this alteration in its interior landscape can result in dizzying imbalance. Fortunately, a report issued by the Cleveland Clinic indicates that canalith repositioning can reverse between 72 percent and 90 percent of BPPV cases. This reversal procedure involves sitting on an exam table and having a trained practitioner rotate the head, so that canaliths float back into position.

Your ability to hear is as unique as your fingerprints - no two people have exactly the same hearing impairment. That's why it is so important to meet with a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist, a professional who uses his or her extensive training and skills to conduct a variety of tests to determine the exact nature of a person's hearing problem. In addition, here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 534 Main St. (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, we also dispense and fit hearing aids, always careful to match the most appropriate instrument to each individual. PH: 781-337-1144. We offer FREE hearing evaluations, FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased, and FREE repairs of any make of hearing aid.

P.S. Merniere's disease is another condition that can result in vertigo and ringing in the ears.

Ski Europe's Alps, but know what you're getting into

By NEIL COTE HERALD
STAFF WRITER

CHAMONIX MONT-BLANC, France (Ah, to ski the Alps. What serious downhiller hasn't fantasized about those above-timberline bowls, long serpentine trails and lifts to spare, especially during weekend waits of 20 minutes-plus at the Loon base quad? Got to be so much better across the Pond, n'est pas? After all, the travel brochures are rife with photos of blue skies, knee-deep powder and megamountains that dwarf anything in our hemisphere. Oui, there are such places and skiers owe it to themselves to do the Alps at least once while there's still cartilage in the knees. But a word of caution: Restrain your expectations. On a perfect day, the skiing may well be better on that side of the world. But perfect days aren't always handed down from above, especially on terrain fabled for avalanches and other disruptions. It was a little Austrian man at last year's Boston Ski Show and Expo who sold me on an overseas adventure. Even with the dollar in the doldrums, he stressed in a deep accent there were better deals in Europe than at Aspen or Vail. And already having skied many of the great Western U.S. and Canadian mountains, I was ready to go in the other direction.

The base price for the trip was a little north of $1,400 for planes, buses, lodging, breakfasts (rich in such high-cholesterol fare as cheese and eggs) and five days of skiing. A 9,205-foot vertical drop and the famous 15-mile Vallee Blanche trail listed in the Chamonix brochure were the deciding factors. Plus the fact that ski scenes in the James Bond movie "The World is Not Enough" were filmed here. Well, as I'd learn, there might be reasons aplenty for going to Chamonix, but the above shouldn't be included among them. A high-country hamlet of some 10,000 people near the mountainous border of France and Italy, Chamonix, France's oldest ski resort and scene of the first Winter Olympics in 1924, seems almost too picturesque to be real. It's certainly well out of the way; getting there took nearly 24 hours with flights and layovers from Boston to Frankfurt to Geneva, and then a bus ride through the Swiss and French countrysides. But Chamonix is a pleasant enough destination where, even on January nights, rarely is it uncomfortably cold. Every street seems to have at least one little gourmet shop with baskets of freshly baked breads, wheels of fine cheeses and meats and poultry hanging from above. Surrounded by ever-white, jagged Alps, it's rife with traditional European charm. Sixteen hotels, ranging from five-star to the quaint but Spartan Blanc Croix (where my penny-counting travel agent put me) are in town, and five ski areas with enough varied terrain to handle all levels of ability are either within a long walk or a short bus ride away. Indeed, transporting skiers is something Chamonix does very well with an interchangeable pass good throughout the valley.

Skiers of a lesser god gravitate to Les Houches, Le Tour and La Flegere, all of which offer acres of low-risk downhilling as well as more challenging terrain, while intermediates and experts like the big Les Grands Montets and Aiguille du Midi, the latter of which has a two-stage cable car to bring you to the 15-mile descent on and along the Vallee Blanche glacier. Well, so I heard; for much of my January visit neither of the big mountains was completely open, and although both still offered good to great terrain on their lower halves, it was more than a little unsatisfying to come so far and not scale the summits. But here in the Alps, you're constantly reminded that you are at the mercy of the elements. Even at breakfast. Each morning at 8, the church in the village square chimes, but you're unlikely to sleep that long. For dawn is often greeted with the sounds of explosions, the avalanche patrol is dropping dynamite from helicopters onto steep, unstable slopes. How the patrol fares will have much to do with where you'll be skiing that day, if anywhere. Good advice: Get in with a group and hire a guide. Guides come by the hotels each evening, and though one may cost you $200 for five days, it's money well spent. If the valley itself is closed, the guide will load all of you in a van and drive you to other nearby resorts (in Italy, if need be.

Under optimum conditions, there might be no better skiing than in above-timberline expanses at Grand Montets, one of five ski areas in the Chamonix Valley near mountainous border of France and Italy.

Wherever you wind up, you learn fast that European skiing isn't as well defined as North America's; the trails, or pistes, are likely to be marked with stakes, and though off-piste skiing is tempting, it's not advisable without the guidance of someone familiar with the slopes. That's because there are risks here that you won't encounter on the mountains off I-93. Such as: Skiing to the bottom of a mountain and finding no lodge or lift; finding out too late that there's a crevasse under the powder; and straying into avalanche-prone areas. My group, three Americans, two Canadians and a Russian, was fortunate enough to have hired Vincente, a 40-ish Franco-Italian who knows these mountains well. Depending on the seasons, he's guiding either skiers or rock-climbers. Lucky man, this Vincente. But, alas, occupational hazards confront him daily. "The best guide is an old guide," he said. He saved our trip from being a disaster because much of the Chamonix Valley was closed to skiing due to inclement weather , everything from too much snow and too little snow to poor visibility because of fog, to rain that turned to ice and shut down the lifts, to heavy winds that made the lifts unstable, even after the ice had melted. But on days when the valley was closed, Vincente drove us to Courmayeur, Italy, or to Les Contamines in another part of France. Though both mountains offered deep powder and interesting trails, neither really was worth crossing an ocean for. That said, at Courmayeur we were treated to one of nature's true splendors: an avalanche across the valley, and what sounded like several minutes of rolling thunder as snow cascaded down a high cliff into a white explosion. And about the Vallee Blanche? Even when open, it's not for everyone, it's rife with hidden dangers; you're not recommended to go without a guide, and even Vincente said he needs several hours to do it. Turns out Pierce Brosnan didn't do it while the movie was filming; either; he used a stuntman. Still, despite high expectations not quite met, my visit here brought the satisfaction of trying something new. Chamonix? Been there, done that. For more information, go to www.chamonix.com

Surrounded by white, jagged Alps, the village of Chamonix offers traditional European charm with easy accommodations to the valley's five ski areas.

With the mid-day mean the staple of the European diet, skiers get fine feasts and views at Chamonix.

Local veterans take the flight of a lifetime

Visit memorials in Washington

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Touching down at Plymouth Municipal Airport last week, the smiling faces of local veterans home from a trip to Washington D.C. could be seen through the windows of Cohasset resident Donald Staszko's private jet. Disembarking, many stopped to shake the hand of their host for the day, expressing great appreciation for his generosity. But Staszko said the gratitude is all his.

With the 63rd anniversary of Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, Staszko — a Vietnam veteran and former U.S. Air Force pilot — said he could think of no better way to honor members of the "greatest generation" than with a trip to visit the recently dedicated World War II Veterans Memorial in Washington D.C. Because he owns Professional Airways, an aircraft leasing and management company, Staszko was able to arrange the trip for 10 local veterans Thursday, Dec. 2.

Several of the veterans invited to take the trip in Staszko's Hawker 800 XP are members of the Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146. World War II veterans Ralph Perroncello, his brother Joseph Perroncello, Austin Ahern, Louis Longo, Ira Stoughton, and Tom Healy as well as Korean War veterans Frank Lagrotteria and Cliff Jones, and Vietnam Veteran John Morgan are all members, as is Staszko. Citizens petition recalled

Matter falls short on second night

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Elected officials in Cohasset will not have to worry about being recalled. A citizens petition, which would have allowed voters to hold a special election to change the guard, was voted down during Tuesday's session of Town Meeting.

After two and a half hours of discussion that included motions to amend the article to increase the difficulty of initiating the recall as well as providing amnesty to current officials, a hand count defeated the motion 93 to 60.

Proponent Lou Harvey, 465 King St., explained the recall provision is nothing more than a way to assure the voters, who are trusted to elect officials into public office, have the same right to remove an official.

There has been much turmoil in town over the past year, including controversy surrounding the suspension of two police officers, the resignation of the police chief and Town Manager, federal charges against a former town employee for embezzlement at

Budget bottom line drives athletic fee hike

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Next fall charges will be $150 per athlete per season, with a $25 discount for the third sport and a maximum charge of $600 per family.

In an effort to increase revenue and get the school budget on track, athletic fees will be doubled next year with an increase beginning this spring, the School Committee said.

Middle High School Athletic Director Ronald Ford said there has been no change in user fees for the past 12 years. Currently athletes pay $75 per season to play. If a student plays a third sport, the fee is decreased to $50 for the third season to ensure the per-student fees are no more than $200 per year.

To ease athletes into higher sports charges, the School Committee voted to increase fees to $125 per season this spring with a $25 reduction for those playing their third sport of the year. Next fall charges will be $150 per athlete per season, with a $25 discount for the third sport and a maximum charge of $600 per family.

Every time athletic fees are increased by $25, Ford said it will generate roughly $10,000, assuming participation stays the same. "In a lot of communities where they increase fees, participation stays the same, but in some, it doesn't," said Ford, adding because Cohasset's enrollment numbers continue to climb — even if the fees deter participation — he hopes the increase in the amount of students each year will help balance out the numbers.

It costs roughly $300,000 per year to run the school athletic department. Included in the budget are the expected funds from the local boosters clubs, as well as admission fees or "gate receipts." Ford said during non-Thanksgiving Day home game years, gate receipts bring in enough revenue to cover roughly 10 percent of the total athletic budget. Cohasset no longer splits Thanksgiving Day revenue with Hull, meaning every other year, the team which hosts the event gets all the gate receipts. With the Thanksgiving Day game held at home this year, Ford estimates the total gate

Groups help local families to soldier on

Editor's note: CNC/South's Gifts of Hope campaign this year focuses on raising awareness and funds for several groups helping the military and their families at the holidays.

By Amanda Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

When soldiers are deployed to the Middle East, their families are left behind, to send letters and care packages, to worry, to pray and to hope for their loved one's safety.

But while a family, be it a wife or husband or a mother and father, is concerned for their soldier, there are many people and systems in place here to care for the families left at home.

"By supporting the families, you're supporting the soldier," said Maura Yanosic, a Scituate mother of a 20-year-old soldier serving in the Middle East. "It's very, very important for the soldiers. It's important for them to know the morale is being addressed, that they know their families have a support network here."

GIFTS of HOPE
YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

Yanosic and Jen Riley from Burlington are co-leaders of the Family Readiness Group for the Braintree unit of the National Guard. While they and members of the group are coping with a loved one deployed to an area of war, they also are helping families deal with the absence of their soldier.

The Family Readiness Group can help the families of soldiers with a variety of needs, from just having someone to talk with to getting a broken oil burner fixed.

With the holidays fast approaching, the Braintree FRG held a Christmas party this weekend at the Abington VFW for the children, siblings, nieces and nephews of deployed soldiers, complete with Santa Claus

'Toys for Tots' drives in town

The Cohasset Harbor Resort is collecting "Toys for Tots" through Dec. 17. The program, facilitated by the U.S. Marines, will help bring toys to needy children this holiday season. All are welcome to bring in a non-violent, unwrapped gift to either Atlantica or the Cohasset Harbor Inn. "Toys for Tots are also being collected at the police station on Elm Street and can be dropped off there 24 hours a day.

School Council meetings open

School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts, who serves as the committee's liaison with the Osgood School Council, wants to remind residents all School Council meetings are open to any members of the public who wish to attend. While she said she knows there are a large number of residents who watch the School Committee meetings on television to stay informed with the happenings at the schools, the Committee cannot gain feedback from those who are at home. "If you have an interest in anything we talk about," please attend any of the posted meetings, she said. School Councils, established under the Education Reform Act of 1993, can be made up of faculty, school officials, and residents.

CMHS musical this weekend

The CMHS production of "Grease" will be held this weekend, Dec 10-12 in the school auditorium. Tickets for the production are $10 and can be purchased at the door. Both the Friday and Saturday shows will begin at 7:30 p.m. and the Sunday show will begin at 2:30 p.m.

Buckley receives standing ovation

At the start of Town Meeting Monday, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan took a moment to recognize Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley for all he has done for the town over the past seven months. Since the resignation of former Town Manager Mark Haddad in May, Buckley has been serving not only as Town Manager, but in his primary role as Director of Finance.

Sullivan added Buckley has been instrumental in keeping the community going in the direction the town wants it to go. "He's doing a tremendous job," he said. Those in the audience gave Buckley a standing ovation. Buckley will step down from his position as Acting Town Manager when new Town Manager William Griffin comes on board in February. He will continue as Director of Finance.

$194,000 capital request approved

Town Meeting approved allocating funds for two new police cruisers, refurbishing the fire department's pump engine, a new school utility vehicle, and a new van and computers for the Council on Elder Affairs.

Police Chief James Hussey said the money received from trading in the two old cruisers will be used to remove and reinstall radios and other technical equipment in the new vehicles. He said money from trade-ins can be used to pay for upgrades, such as the flashing lights. For example, the department received $5,000 recently when it traded in a cruiser and obtained a new one with funds allocated at the last Town Meeting.

Town Manager Michael Buckley estimates refurbishing the pump engine will "give it some extra life" perhaps as much as 11 years. Fire engines are on a 21-year replacement cycle.

The vehicle for the schools is not a brand new truck, but will replace one which would have cost more to repair than making the investment in a newer vehicle. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said the truck is currently used for trash removal and the new truck will be equipped with a plow that can be used both by the school department and the Department of Public Works "during those noon-time snow storms which creep up on us."

CPC funds available

Chairman of the Community Preservation Committee Stuart Ivimey would like to remind residents, if there is a cause they would like the Community Preservation Fund to support, to file an application. The Community Preservation Committee recommends appropriating money from the fund for projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation. Anyone interested in applying for Community Preservation funding may contact Ivimey at (781) 383-2604.

Beechwood Ball Park

Town Meeting voters allocated funds to begin design work for Beechwood Ball Park improvements at Tuesday night's session. An informal meeting to discuss what the town would like to see improved will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 14 during the Selectmen's meeting.

ZBA vacancy

Residents who would like to be considered for a vacancy on the Zoning Board of Appeals are asked to send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

CEA needs volunteers

The Council on Elder Affairs is looking for volunteers and especially needs helpers to drive shuttle vans and serve lunch. For more information on ways to donate time or other volunteer opportunities at the center, please contact Kathy Bryanton, director at (781) 383-9112.

Strategic Planning brochure available

Copies of the schools' strategic planning brochure is now available for the public. Copies can be picked up at the superintendent's office, and the School Committee said it will also be made available at the Town Library as well as online in the coming weeks. The brochure outlines the goals and objectives of the schools moving forward for the next five years.

receipts at roughly $31,000.

Students are currently charged $3 to attend sporting events while adults are charged $4, except for the Thanksgiving Day game at which everyone is charged $5. During tournament games charges increase to $7 for students and $10 for adults, but the schools never see that money, Ford said. Funds collected during tournaments cover the cost for hosting the event, including purchasing awards and T-shirts for the athletes. "We plan those events so we don't lose money," said Ford.

However, with the increase in athletic fees, Ford floated including one free season pass for a parent to attend sporting events. If there are two or more children in the family, one free pass could be given for each student.

Ford also said starting a program where students could purchase season passes for sporting events could help generate more revenue. By selling 150 year-long sporting events pass for $25 each could bring in $4,000 in additional revenue.

The athletic department is allowed to charge for any games which take place after 5 p.m. as well as weekend games. Ford said basketball, wrestling, hockey, and any sports played at night under the lights such as field hockey, soccer, and lacrosse, all generate funding.

School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts asked whether it might make sense to take into account the cost of running the various sports programs and set the fee scale accordingly.

Ford said implementing fees by the individual sport has never been done in Cohasset. "We value all the sports the same," he said.

Ford added those who play ice hockey, for example, which requires practicing on the ice, would be negatively impacted with a fee scale because the hockey team doesn't have the high number of participants some other sports like football have. He said enrollment for some sports could be affected or certain sports would have to be cut altogether if enough participants did not sign up to fund it.

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy asked whether it might make sense, rather than focusing only on those students who play sports, to begin charging an all-encompassing activity fee to include students who are involved with drama and those who take after-school art classes, as well as athletes. She said if all students in grades six through 12, who participate in any extra-curricular activities are charged $150 — with roughly 800 students in both schools — fees could generate roughly $120,000. "Granted, I would like to see no fees, but this would at least put everyone on an even playing field," she said.

However, School Committee member Rick Flynn said charging students who might participate in more cerebral activities, which don't cost anything to run, could deter participation. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said in her experience, it is better for the athletic budget to be kept separate from any extra-curricular charges.

Walsh said the question which needs to be answered is, "How much of the athletic budget should be paid by the operating budget?"

Currently, 90 percent is being paid by the operating budget with 10 percent coming from outside sources, such as fees and game admission. She said she has heard of schools which choose to only take on 20 percent through the operating budget and leave the remaining 80 percent up to outside sources due to budget constraints.

Walsh said she knows of a school that hit such dire budgetary times it had to stop funding anything athletic and every student participating in sports paid a $500 fee to play.

Ford said with the increase in fees, parents should be made aware there are waivers available for those who cannot afford to pay. In addition, he said there are many residents who are on payment plans and he is willing to work with the parents to ensure every student is able to participate.

Full-day kindergarten is floated for Osgood

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Full-day kindergarten would be fee-based at roughly $1,800 per student per year. Those attending the half-day program would not be charged.

Implementing full-day kindergarten classes is a topic which has been brought up many times over the years. The program is being discussed again as a valuable educational option as well as a possible revenue generator.

The third grade has been moved to Deer Hill this fall leaving more space to work with at the Osgood School. With room to spare, school officials are considering the possibility of implementing full day kindergarten as well as a new school-run preschool, both of which would charge an enrollment fee.

A full-day kindergarten feasibility task force, established in the spring of 2003, has been working hard to determine whether full day kindergarten is an option, and what kinds of financial benefits it could have. Members of the task force include Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan, Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey, Osgood Adjustment Counselor Bob LeCount, parents, kindergarten teachers, pre-school teachers, and special education teachers.

The group developed and distributed a district survey to collect input whether residents would like to see full-day kindergarten implemented in Cohasset. Sheehan said surveys were distributed to parents of Deer Hill and Osgood students, as well as the local preschools.

Sheehan said roughly 159 surveys – or 20 percent – were returned of approximately 475 distributed at Osgood, 375 at Deer Hill and from 25 to 50 at local preschools.

"This is a program that has been sweeping the country," said Fennessey of full-day kindergarten, adding research has shown young learners can retain more than had previously been thought. She said with the number of children who attend preschool before coming to kindergarten, many are far more advanced than a half-day (2-1/2 hour) program can fully nurture. A full-day of kindergarten would be six hours long.

Full-day kindergarten would be fee-based at roughly $1,800 per student per year. Those attending the half-day program would not be charged.

Sheehan said another option is start with the half-day program for all kindergarten students for the first half of the year, then transition into a full day for the second half of the year for those who choose to participate. Parents will have the option of enrolling students for either the full- or half-day programs. There would also be a sliding fee scale associated with the full-day programs.

Sheehan said the task force met last week with the Osgood School Council to discuss the possibility of full-day kindergarten and the response has been very positive.

"We know it's the goal of the Department of Education, we have the space, we have the commitment, and the enthusiasm of three kindergarten teachers," Sheehan said. In addition, she said most parents in town support the option of full-day kindergarten as well, even if they would not choose to enroll their child.

Sheehan said while the school would like permission to move ahead and further study how the full-day program could impact the school, she acknowledged the fact that the program will only be successful if the number of students who enroll is enough to support a full class.

The School Committee gave its support for further study and said it looks forward to hearing more about the program in the future.

For more information, please contact Supt. Denise Walsh at (781) 383-6111, or Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan at (781) 383-6117.

GREASE ON STAGE

Grease is the word! Join in the fun and see Cohasset High School's production of the musical "Grease" in the high school auditorium on Friday, Dec. 10 at 7:30p.m., Saturday, Dec. 11 at 7:30p.m., and Sunday, Dec. 12 at 2:30 p.m.. All tickets are $10 and may be purchased at Buttonwood Books or at the door. For ticket or additional information, please contact Kasey McCarthy at 781-383-1718.

BIG THANK YOU

A great big thank you goes out to Jim Coffey, owner of Busy Bee Jumpers in Whitman for his donation of the popcorn maker, popcorn and supplies to the Osgood PSO for use at the Book Fair which was held on Nov. 17. His generosity was greatly appreciated!

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS

One of the most invaluable gifts one can give during the holiday season is one's time. All Scituate/Cohasset Newcomer's Club members are encouraged join the Scituate Community Christmas organization at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Scituate between 7-9pm on Wednesday, Dec. 15 to help wrap presents for families in need during this holiday season. All that is needed are helping hands; Scituate Community Christmas provides the tools. Time is valued but feel free to donate a gift as well - older children's toys are most needed. The Knights of Columbus Hall is located on Route 3A, across from PJ's Country House by the intersection of 123 & 3A. Please help to bring a smile to children's faces as they unwrap gifts they may not have received if it were not for the generous efforts of Scituate Community Christmas! For more information about the Newcomer's Club please visit www.scnewcers.com or contact Jen Harris at jkharris24@hotmail.com or 544-3910.

NEWCOMERS CHILDREN'S PARTY

The Newcomer's Club is hosting its annual Children's Holiday Party on Wednesday Dec. 15 at the Second Congregational Church from 10 a.m.-noon. The club will have entertainment and a holiday craft. Enjoy coffee and refreshments or feel free to bring a special treat to share. It is free for all playgroup members, $5 for those not participating in SCNC playgroups. Please RSVP to Gina Steele at 378-1310.

SCNC is also using this opportunity to collect for the local food pantries. Donations most appreciated are non-perishable food, men's and women's toiletries, and house hold items (dish/laundry soap, paper towels, napkins, foil, etc..). For more information about the Newcomer's Club visit www.scnewcomers.com or contact Jen Harris at jkharris24@hotmail.com or 544-3910.

ON STAGE

Cohasset's Reed Dickinson and his daughter, Rebecca, are appearing in the Company Theatre classic "A Christmas Carol," running through Dec. 18 in Norwell. For tickets, call 781-871-2787. There's another Cohasset connection in the production this year, see page 9.

COMMENDED SCHOLAR

Stephen Hughes, the principal, of Boston College High School, is pleased to announce that senior Andrew J. Flynn has been named a Commended Scholar in the 2004 National Merit Scholarship program. Congratulations Andrew on this wonderful honor.

TOYS FOR TOTS

The Cohasset Harbor Resort (Atlantica & the Cohasset Harbor Inn) will be collecting "Toys for Tots" from Dec. 1-17. This program, facilitated by the U.S. Marines will help to bring needy children toys this holiday season. All are welcome to bring in a non-violent, unwrapped gift. The police station on Elm Street is also collecting for Toys for Tots.

XAVERIAN HONORS

Brother Daniel Skala, C.F.X., the Headmaster of Xaverian Brothers High School, is pleased to announce the honor roll for the First Marking Period of the 2004-2005 school year. The honor roll has different degrees and senior Mark Lewis achieved Second Honors. Keep up the good work Mark.

DESSERTS NEEDED

During the month of December, The Cohasset Elder Affairs is in need of luncheon desserts.

Lunches are served each Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at noon. Although dessert is usually provided, The CEA will need your help for the month of December.

If you have extra cookies, breads or other desserts that you wish to share with the seniors, that will be most grateful. They can be dropped off at the CEA office (open from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday, and 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., Monday and Friday).

PARENTS OF BASKETBALL PLAYERS

Attention to all parents of basketball players. The next Basketball Boosters meeting will be held on Dec 15 at 7:30p.m. (please note time change from 7p.m. due to girls game in Hanover). The meeting will be in the CMHS Library. This is for all parents of recreation players, travel and high school teams and the more the merrier.

That is all my news for this week. Please send me all your event, news and happy celebration information no later than Tuesdays by noon.

Local veterans take the flight of a lifetime

an John MacNeil also went along.

Staszko, who has a long history of military service in his family, holds patriotism close to his heart. His father, who was one of nine boys, served in World War II with four of his brothers. "It's rare to have five members of a family all serve and come back alive," he said, but somehow they beat the odds. However, all four of his uncles have passed away and will never have the opportunity to see the memorial dedicated to their efforts.

From spending time with his father, now 90 years old, Staszko said he realizes taking a day trip via a commercial airline would not be feasible for the veterans, many of whom are in their 80s. However, "When you have your own airplane, you can do it," Staszko said.

As a member of the VFW, Staszko has come to know the men well over the years but their history goes back further. Living in Cohasset for the past 40 years, Staszko said some of the veterans remember him as the "lifeguard at Sandy Beach" or in various other roles he held as a teenager.

He said it is nice to be able to give something back. "I've been very fortunate," he said. "It's important to give back to the community you're in."

In addition to visiting the World War II memorial, which opened to the public April 29 and was dedicated one month later on May 29, the men visited the Korean War memorial, Vietnam War Memorial, and the National Museum of Natural History at the Smithsonian Institute. "We had our lunch on the bus so we wouldn't miss out on any time," said Joseph Perroncello. Staszko added, "We didn't want to miss a minute."

Many veterans said the memorials made the biggest impression.

"It was super-colossal, and that's no exaggeration," said MacNeil of the World War II memorial. However, he said visiting the Vietnam memorial had quite an impact on him as well. "It was very heart-rending," he said. When he saw the 58,000 names listed on the memorial wall, the size of the sacrifice really hit him. "Right away you start thinking about all these wonderful people (who gave up everything to fight for their country)," he said.

Lagrotteria said he was amazed by the size of the World War II memorial and loved its placement, flanked by the Lincoln Memorial on one side and the Washington Monument on the other. A Korean War veteran, Lagrotteria said he would have eventually made the trip to visit the memorials, but was delighted at the chance to fly down with Staszko. "He was so gracious to bring us along."

WWII veteran Joe Perroncello can't stop smiling after he disembarks from Don Staszko's private jet after a trip to Washington, D.C.

"I've been very fortunate. It's important to give back to the community you're in."

— Donald Staszko

Lagrotteria's sentiments were echoed by many of the veterans. Joseph Perroncello said he had been invited to attend the dedication of the World War II memorial, but with the length of the trip, decided not to go. However, when his brother Ralph said he was going to take the trip with Staszko, he decided there was no way he was going to pass the opportunity up. "It was a beautiful flight," he said.

Joseph's brother Ralph, who is commander of VFW Post 9146 agreed, adding the events throughout the entire day were wonderful. "It was just fantastic."

The men couldn't help commenting on the luxury of the private jet and said the flight itself was very much a highlight. "Imagine, sitting for the first time in life, in a private jet," Mac Neil said.

As the men, still smiling, headed toward the hangar last Thursday, they chatted with each other about the day's events. As they made their way across the tarmac one said to another, "I'll sleep tonight!"

'The Eclectic Gardener' on sale

Community Garden Club of Cohasset announces publication of "The Eclectic Gardener," a reflection on the pleasures of gardening and the related activities that we enjoy. Local artists illustrate the new book with original watercolors and drawings. A new painting by Cohasset artist JoAnne Chittick appears on the book's cover.

The entire Community Garden Club has contributed in some way to this labor of love, and members are happy to be able to present it in time for holiday gift giving. Copies are $25 and may be reserved by calling 781-383-2486. Profits from the sale of "The Eclectic Gardener" will be used to fund the scholarship and community projects sponsored by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

Town Meeting

Reserve fund to hold key to paying school bills

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town is going to pay school department utility and unemployment bills.

But despite guarantees from the Superintendent of Schools that any money allocated for utility bills would be spent on those bills, voters at Monday's Special Town Meeting want the schools to seek a transfer from the Advisory Committee as the invoices come in and did not allocate the money directly into the school budget.

Town Meeting voted to transfer roughly $160,000 into the reserve fund — which is similar to a savings account, as it is used to hold money which has been set aside to fund future items — which will be dispensed by the Advisory Committee to the school department as needed.

During Monday night's session, Article Three asked for a $67,000 reserve fund transfer, which would set aside the funding necessary to pay for this year's school unemployment costs. Unemployment varies from year to year, depending on the amount of employees who participate.

Articles, which are listed in the Town Warrant, are items of business tackled at Town Meeting.

In addition, Article Three asked Town Meeting to add $93,500 to the school department budget as a general expense to cover a Keyspan gas bill for the schools. However, Town Meeting felt the money for the gas bill would be better handled if it too was placed in the reserve fund and the motion was adopted by a majority vote.

Leland Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, made the motion to transfer the money into the reserve fund to ensure money for utilities isn't spent on anything other than utilities.

Supt. Denise Walsh said she would personally guarantee any money set aside for utilities would be spent only on utilities. She added Cohasset has joined a co-op to purchase natural gas, which should help with the cost, however, "No one knows how severe the winter will be," she said.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said he thought the transfer was unnecessary.

"The superintendent said the money would only go to gas expenses," he said, and the town should show it supports her and defeat the motion.

The Advisory Committee supported the amendment 6-2.

Enrollment increases

The School Committee has said part of the problem with balancing the budget is greater increases in enrollment than expected. School Committee Chairman Rick Shea said in 1996, enrollment estimates showed there would be a steady increase with projected enrollment in 2010 at 1,480. "Enrollment today is 1,502," he said. With roughly 110 students added to the district over the past two years, "it's very difficult to keep budget increases at 2-1/2 percent," he said. [Prop. 2-1/2 prevents municipalities from increasing their tax levy more than 2-1/2 percent over the prior year without an override].

Wig Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., asked about the number of children of teachers who live out of town attending Cohasset schools free of charge – a number that could be contributing to burgeoning enrollment.

Walsh, who said she will make that information available at the Dec. 16 School Committee meeting, supported the practice which is in the teachers' contract.

"It is a rather unique benefit our teachers have in their contracts and it is a wonderful benefit for the town," said Walsh. She said allowing out-of-town teachers' children to attend Cohasset schools encourages the "best and brightest" teachers to continue teaching here. "It is an important benefit and we're proud to offer it."

Walsh said current per-pupil cost is roughly $8,600 a year.

a prior job, and budget trouble with the schools. Many say the town has become divided over many issues.

While some think the article was directed at those currently in office as a result of the events of the past year, Harvey said is not about "whether you trust a public official, but what you do if that trust is ever lost." He said the article was not directed at any current officials, but would provide some insurance to the town.

Selectman Rob Spofford said the majority of the Board of Selectmen was against the petition, adding it is especially difficult to discuss at this time in light of recent events. He said he had asked Harvey and the other proponents to bring it back in the future to give the community time to heal.

"This is not what this town is about. We are neighbors, we are friends," Spofford said, adding he doesn't believe this is the right time to bring a matter like this to the forefront, "when we're trying to build the community back."

Spofford added, the simple act of bringing a recall petition to Town Meeting has caused some waves, which is further disrupting the healing process. "You've seen the future," and what could happen if a recall was called, just by bringing up the issue, he said.

In addition, those against the article said it is currently very hard to find people to run for office and if the recall is put in place, it could further deter residents.

School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts said as an elected official, she knows how hard it is to get people to run, as she has run unopposed during the last two elections.

However, School Committee member Jamie Williams said she is for the article and does not fear the ramifications it could have on her position, because it is only used when the majority feel a board member is not acting in the best interest of the town. She said if a recall must be conducted, "It's not personal, it's policy."

But Spofford said having someone always looking over his shoulder is not what community government is all about. "I don't believe I need to have a hammer over my head. You elected me for a reason," he said.

Nancy Garrison said the recall would not be in place to discourage public officials from taking office, but to provide a way to "remove any elected official who has failed us." She added a recall is not conducted because of honest mistakes, but serves as a way to protect the community.

Stuart Ivimey agreed, saying the recall petition was a vote of no confidence, just as the countries of Great Britain, France and Germany exercise.

Pat Martin, a former School Committee member, expressed concern over how an elected official could be personally affected by a recall effort. She said it is important to realize there comes a point with the recall provision, where it leaves the hands of the public and is driven into the hands of the official being challenged.

She said after the signatures are collected, there is a window where the official is contacted and notified of the public's intention to hold a recall election and has the option of resigning voluntarily. Essentially, that person is given a choice of, "Which poison would you like to choose?" she said.

Town Meeting

Hand count establishes committee to examine school budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee came under scrutiny Monday as Special Town Meeting voters spent almost 90 minutes discussing whether to allocate funds for an unpaid Keyspan gas bill for the schools.

One resident called for three School Committee members to resign effective immediately, but voters ultimately approved the appointment of a new investigative committee to determine why the school department is over budget.

Last spring the town passed a $400,000 operating budget override to help balance the school department budget. But even with the override, the School Committee needed to reduce its budget significantly by cutting teaching and administrative positions, eliminating the middle school athletic program, and not giving salary increases for administrators.

Then with the override still fresh in the minds of taxpayers, a $93,000 unpaid gas bill surfaced just before the close of the fiscal year June 30.

In addition to the $93,000 in Article One, Article Two asked for $65,000 to cover FY04 school unemployment costs and Article Three sought $93,000 to be added to the FY05 budget for school utilities, as well as $67,000 to cover this year's unemployment costs.

Roy Fitzsimmons, 116 Doane St., said during his 36 years in town, he has watched the School Committee ask for more money from the taxpayers every year. He said requests don't always have to do "with the quality of education" but have been used to "make the buildings prettier." Fitzsimmons, whose five children went through the school system, said there needs to be monitoring and controlling of expenditures.

He said this year alone, the town is being asked to pay $700,000 between this Special Town Meeting and the override at the Annual meeting which took place last spring. "This is gross neglect," he said.

Fitzsimmons made a motion which called for the resignation of incumbent School Committee Chairman Rick Shea, and members Chartis. Tebbetts and Rick Flynn. [Adrienne MacCarthy and Jamie Williams were elected last spring].In addition, he made a motion to form a committee to determine if there was a conspiracy between former Supt. Edward Malvey and the School Committee.

At that point, Moderator George Marlette said, "Mr. Fitzsimmons, can I see you for a moment?"

After some discussion at the podium, and a conference with Town Counsel, Marlette said the first motion would be ruled out of order, but allowed Fitzsimmons to present an amendment. The amendment called for a committee to be appointed by Marlette, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan, and Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee to investigate why the schools are over budget.

Fitzsimmons said he believes the committee is necessary because if the School Committee says the budget was thoroughly reviewed last year, and is now coming back to ask for additional funds, "Apparently, someone missed an awful lot," he said.

Selectmen voted 4-1 to oppose the amendment to form the committee and the Advisory Committee voted unanimously against it.

Adding drama to the evening, Town Meeting then took a voice vote to establish the committee and Marlette ruled the motion had been defeated. However, Wig Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., asked for a hand count. Marlette said under Town Meeting rules seven other residents would have to agree with Pierson for the vote to be reconsidered. More than seven residents stood up and a hand count was conducted.

The final count on the motion to adopt a committee was 131 in favor with 110 against. The motion was adopted and many members of the audience clapped their hands in approval.

Gas bill

With the matter of paying the gas bill still on the table, Shea tried to clarify the issue. He said the budget for utilities in FY04 (which the unpaid $93,000 Keyspan bill relates to) was set in November or December of 2002, which enabled it to be considered at the spring 2003 Town Meeting. (Fiscal year 2004 began July 1, 2003). He said both the Deer Hill and middle-high schools were under construction at the time and the School Committee worked with the School Building Facilities Committee and the Advisory Committee to build the budget.

Shea said the FY04 budget had been increased substantially from the year before, but the Keyspan bill was received by the school department in May 2004, just one month before the end of the fiscal year. He said the School Committee regrets the situation, but "this was not foreseen." He said as a result of that bill, there would be another $93,000 appropriation included in Article Three, which would increase the line item for utilities for this fiscal year, based on the estimates the School Committee has now.

However, Tana Carlson, 18 Old Coach Road, asked what the architects and engineers who designed the school buildings predicted for utility figures, and "how far off were they (School Committee) in their allocations?"

Selectman Rob Spofford, who served as Chairman of the School Building Facilities Committee until last spring, said the estimates given to the School Committee by the building committee were the same as the numbers the committee is asking for now. To be clear, Spofford reiterated the building committee gave the School Committee numbers from the architect that provided estimates for the cost of utilities once the buildings were complete. "They did not include those numbers into their budget," he said. Spofford's comments seemed to shock some in the audience as gasps could be heard from the crowd.

Leonora Jerkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, then restated the information the audience had just been given, pointing out the School Committee had the estimates from the architect of the buildings, for both the FY04 and FY05 budgets, and alleged it under-budgeted the items on purpose, "so they could come back and ask us later." She said that means the schools received a $400,000 override but they really needed $600,000.

Shea explained the estimates, stating the architect and engineers estimated the amount of therms, or heat units, the buildings were expected to use. He said although he was not on the School Committee at that time, it is his understanding the committee budgeted for FY04 based on the actual cost incurred for FY03. "At that point, we had the architect and engineer estimates, and the '03 actuals, and hoped in '04 that we'd have the same savings" as the '03 season, he said.

However, Shea said there were a couple of problems which came up during the course of the year, including the fact that the building was not "buttoned up" as quickly as estimated, a water line froze and burst during the extreme weather last winter, which required the heat to be on "full blast for weeks," and the unit costs were increased from FY03.

Flynn also added his explanation regarding problems which arose during the year, which led the utility bill to double in cost. He said Keyspan had provided estimates to the school outlining expected utility costs, but when the actual bill came in for FY04, it was much higher than anticipated. "We added a large amount to arrive at where we are right now," he said. However, factor in the increase in the cost of utilities and that number was still not large enough.

"If we had asked Town Meeting (for funding) based on what we'd need, we would have been denied because we didn't have the history of costs," he said. Flynn added the cost of utilities, "has gone up for everyone in this room. The cost of natural gas and electricity is not something we can predict."

But those in the audience were not thoroughly convinced with the argument and many did not want to approve the funding to pay the bill.

George Chamillard, 400 Atlantic Ave., said while he understands budgets are very complicated and it is a tough job to pull one together, he believes the School Committee should put together a budget, live within it, and "just say no" to spending. "I would suggest we defeat the motion," he said, and members of the audience applauded.

However, Town Manager Michael Buckley said, "At the risk of stating the obvious," it is important to remember what happens if a utility bill doesn't get paid. The schools won't have utilities and will have trouble regaining utilities in the future, he said.

Pierson asked for a clarification one more time of Spofford's comments, and wanted to make sure he understood correctly that the School Committee was given estimates by the architect and it chose not to use those numbers, adding he wanted to know why and how that could have happened.

Spofford said the architect provided the School Building Facilities Committee with estimates of what it would cost to pay for utilities once the buildings were complete, and those numbers were given to the School Committee. "That number needs to be included in their FY05 budget," said Spofford. However, Spofford said regardless of how it happened, the FY04 bill has been incurred and is unpaid, and it would not be in the best interest of the town to be known as the community that does not pay its utility bills.

"You have what you want, you'll get an investigation," of the School Committee, but it affects the town to not pay the bill, he said.

Ann Stenbeck, 42 Atlantic Ave., asked if everything has been done to ensure Keyspan figures will not be estimated in the future, adding perhaps a representative could come out more often and read the meters to give actuals. Shea said the School Committee is making sure it is getting accurate meter readings.

Stenbeck also said she also wondered where the money would come from to pay the utility bill should Town Meeting vote against it. Buckley said if Town Meeting opted to go in that direction, he would have no legal mechanism by which to pay it and Keyspan would turn off the heat. He said when that happened, he would have no choice but to declare an emergency, as the health and safety of the students and those who work in the buildings would be jeopardized, and he would need to petition the Department of Revenue to add the cost to the tax rate for FY06.

With that being said, debate was ended and a hand count was necessary to determine whether nine-tenths of Town Meeting supported paying the Keyspan bill. The final count was 287 in support with 24 opposed.

Also included in article one were two Tutela engineering bills incurred by the Sewer Commission. In the middle of school budget discussion, sensing he could be before a tough crowd Sewer Commissioner Raymond Kasperowicz asked that his commission's portion of the article be considered separately from the School Committee bills.. "I don't want to go down with the ship," he said. Town Meeting approved allowing the bills to be considered separately, and ultimately passed their payment by a nine-tenths vote, the margin required under Town Meeting rules for unpaid bills.

Town receives gift of rare Minot's Light letterpress prints

Imagine the delight of Marion Douglas, town clerk, opening a package of beautiful Minot Light prints last spring. She had no idea why they were sent to the town or their value.

Wig Person, chairman of the Committee on Town History, just happened to be in her office that day and said he'd look into it. After several phone calls to print collectors and members of the Society of Printers in Boston, Pierson learned the town was indeed the recipient of a rare treasure, one of a series of 29 color, woodblock prints of distinguished buildings and sites around Boston by the renowned New England graphic artist Rudolph Ruzicka.

The Committee on Town History is making 130 limited edition prints available for sale at $60 each during this holiday season.

Pierson discovered the series was produced starting in 1911 by the Merrymount Press in Boston as Christmas keepsakes and that of 29 different subjects, Minot Light was the last subject printed in 1942.

Shortly after that time the press was closed. The complete set of original wood blocks are in the collection of the Boston Athenaeum and reproduced in an out-of-print book titled "Boston, Engravings on Wood" by Rudolph Ruzicka with text by Walter Muir Whitehill published by David R. Godine, Publisher, Boston. The book is available at the Cohasset library.

Pierson also learned Selma Ordewer of Southbury, Conn. was executrix of the estate of Daniel Berkeley Bianchi and decided it was appropriate for the Town of Cohasset to be the recipient of the prints rather than print dealers. Now Cohasset townspeople may enjoy a unique original graphic reproduction of the lighthouse on the dangerous ledge that the New England historian Samuel Eliot Morison characterized as "more difficult even than the famous Eddystone".

The Committee on Town History is making 130 limited edition prints available for sale at $60 each during this holiday season. Each 3-1/2 x 5 inch print is mounted in a bevel edge acid-free matte and is numbered from one to 130 with a description of the print. The matte will fit any 8 x 10 frame suitable for hanging or displaying on a table top. Proceeds from sales are returned to the town to help fund historical publications.

Prints of Minot Light by New England graphic artist Rudolph Ruzicka are available through the Committee on Town History.

Checks may be made out to the Town of Cohasset and mailed to Committee on Town History c/o Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Avenue, Cohasset, MA 02025. Telephone 781-383-6940 to arrange with Pierson how to pick up the print.

Local family is featured in 'A Christmas Carol'

On stage now at Company Theatre

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

The Duprés from Cohasset are appearing in the Company Theatre's production of "A Christmas Carol": From left are, Josh, Peter, Jessie and Lori Dupré. "A Christmas Carol" runs through Dec. 18. Tickets on sale at the box-office at 30 Accord Park in Norwell, and by calling 781-871-2787.

"A Christmas Carol" has always been regarded as a family-oriented show for the holiday season. This year's production of the Charles Dickens classic at Norwell's Company Theatre puts an even further accent on family.

Peter Dupré, a Cohasset software technology executive, is also a part-time community theatre actor with numerous credits in Company Theatre productions over the last five years. The latest is his role as Nephew Fred in the Company Theatre's current version of "A Christmas Carol," performing at the theatre through Dec. 18.

But also featured in the show's cast are Dupré's wife, Lori — in a double role including that of Fred's fiancé, Bess, and two of his four children, son Josh, 15 and daughter Jessie, 14. Josh and Jessie play the roles of Dick White — a childhood flashback friend of Ebeneezer Scrooge, and Belinda Cratchit — daughter of Scrooge's bookkeeper and the show's protagonist character Bob Cratchit, respectively. The Duprés' collective casting in CT's "Christmas Carol" makes the semi-nightly performances a true family outing.

The Duprés' collective casting in the Company Theatre's "Christmas Carol" makes the semi-nightly performances a true family outing.

But the family connections from Cohasset don't stop there. Also among the 40-odd total members in the show's cast is the father-daughter team of Reed and Rebecca Dickinson, as well as sisters Ellie and Emily Baumgarten, all Cohasset residents.

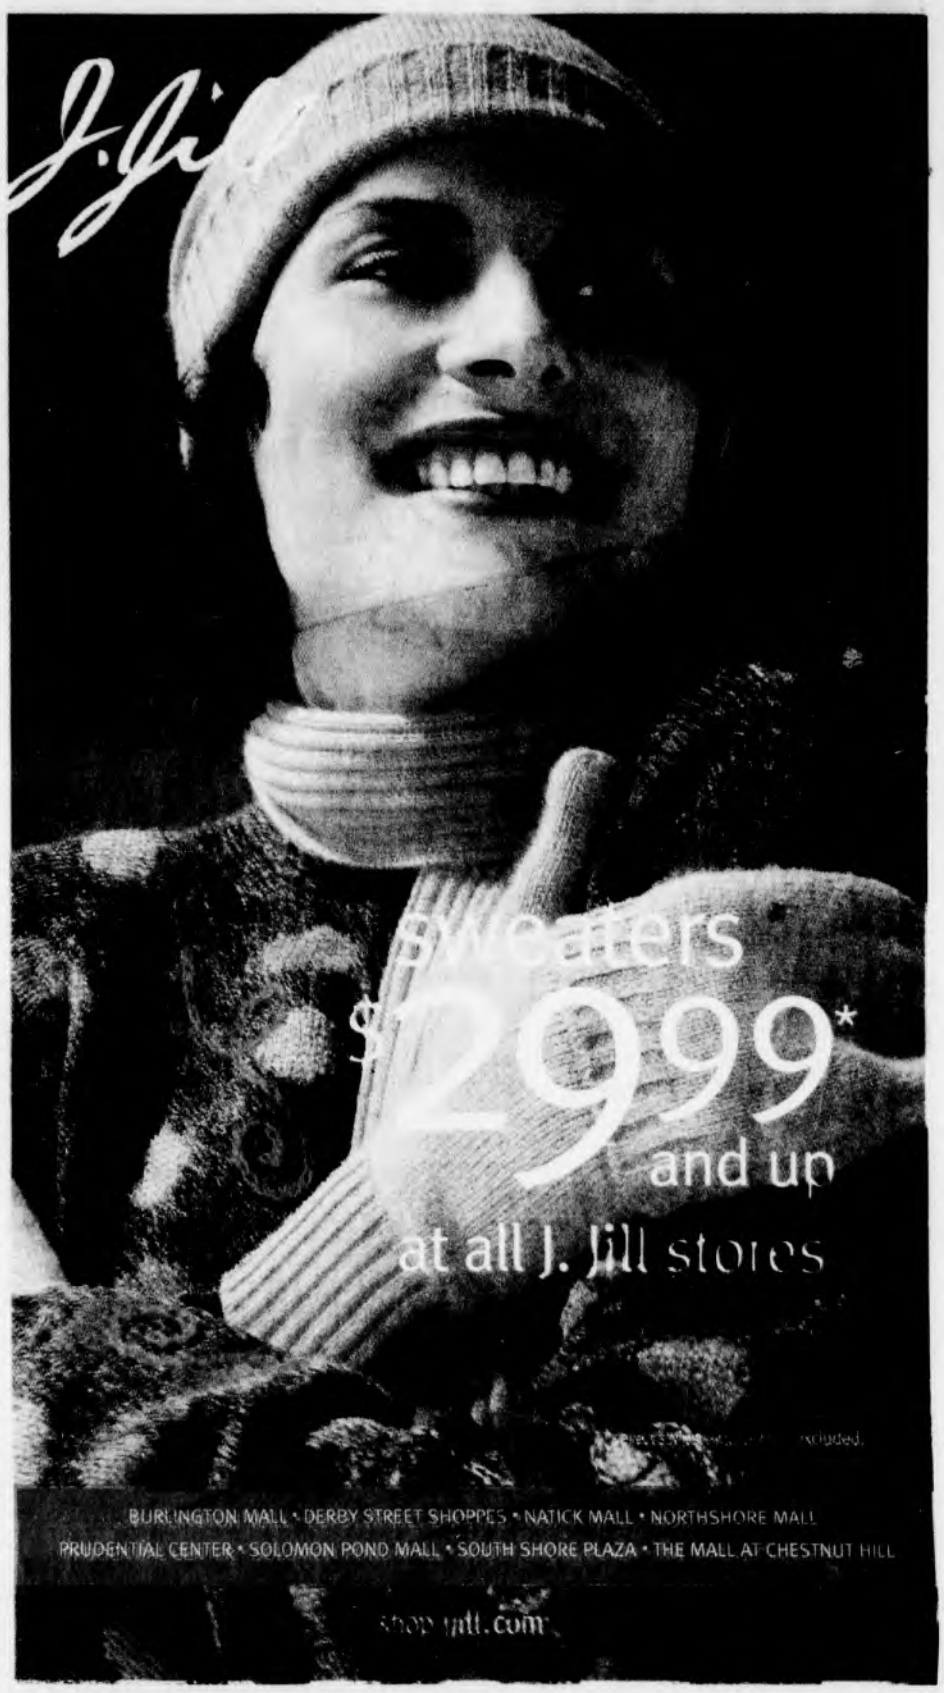
Dupré, 45, is currently Chief Strategy Office at Edgewater Technologies in Wakefield, and has also been an executive at W.B. Mason & Company as well as a sought-after seminar and conference speaker and trade journal contributor in the area of information systems technology.

But his involvement in community theatre goes all the way back to age five, when he made his stage debut as a royal child in a 1965 Concord Players Productions version of "The King and I" in his native Concord, Mass.

"My Mom was involved in community theatre when I grew up in Concord," Dupré recalled, "and she got me a role in the Concord Players' production of 'The King and I' back at the time, and I just fell in love with it — the whole idea of community theatre and being onstage. I guess I knew even then that stage acting would become a lifelong interest, and I continued to do theatre work after that, including children's theatre as well as children's roles in adult productions."

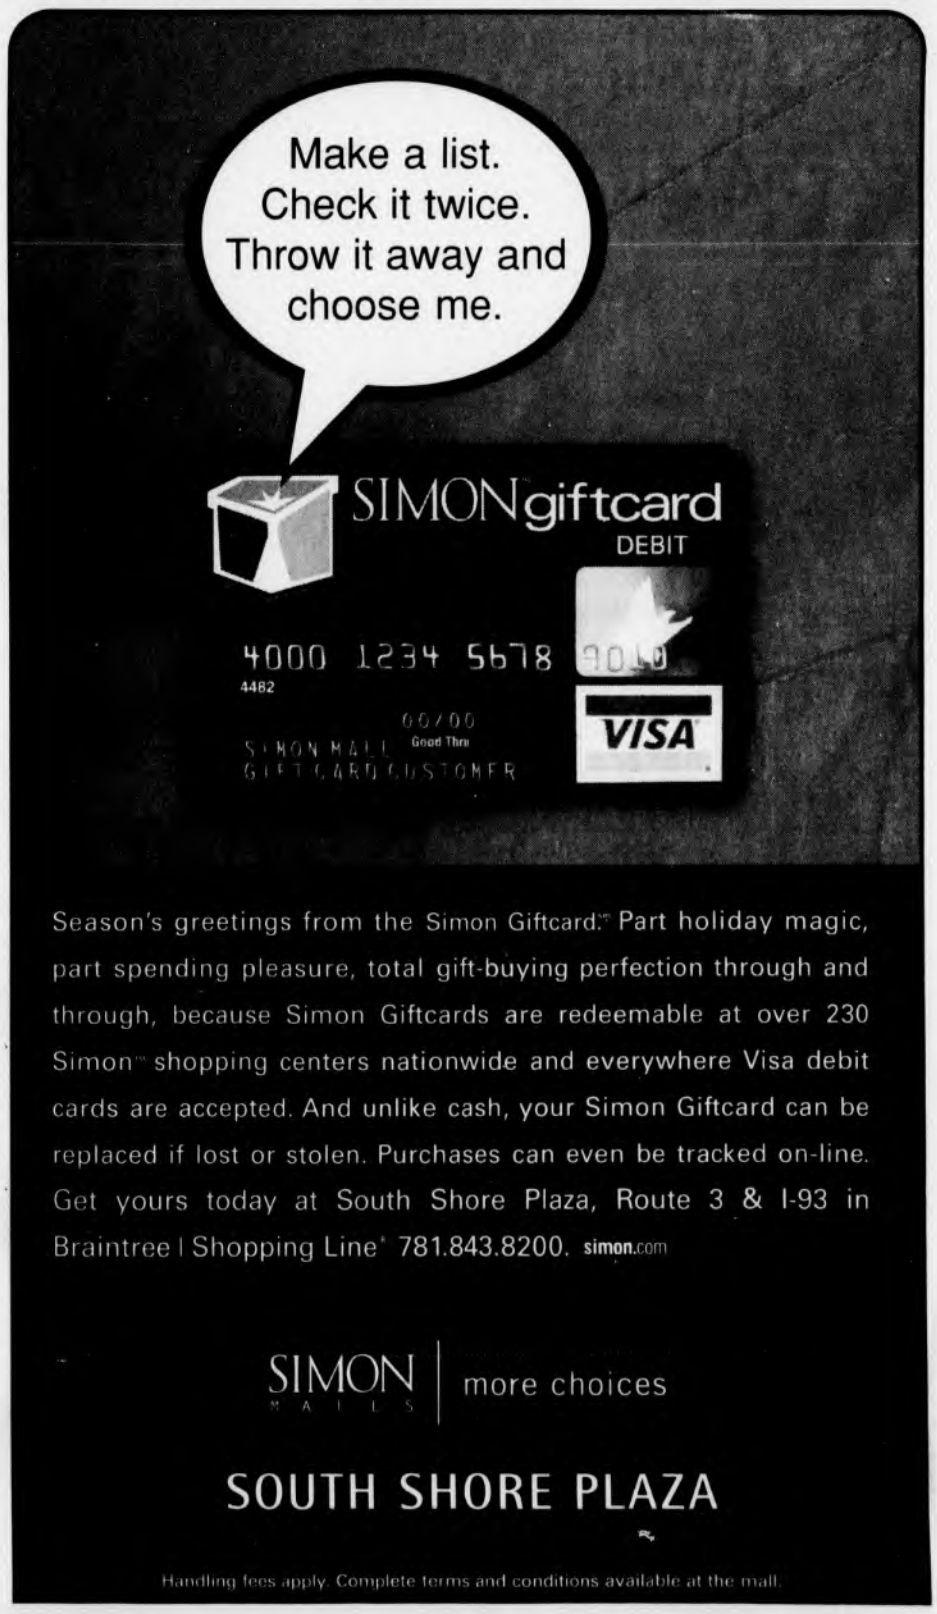
Dupré took about 20 years off from the theatre after high school, during which he was busy with college, career, marriage and family.

"But a few years ago I was at the church where my wife and I go, the North River Community Church in Pembroke, where they have a drama ministry doing weekly theatre productions," he says. "I got involved in that for awhile as a way to get back into being onstage, when sometime around 1999 another one of the actors apparently liked what I did and told me that I should audition for 'Children of Eden,' which was the current Company Theatre production at the time."



Dupré auditioned and earned a role in the production, beginning a profitable long-term relationship with the Company Theatre that has in the last five years included casting in CT productions of "Footloose," "42nd Street," "Company For the Holidays" and others. He's also taken his talents into the city, performing in the original cast of "The Curse of the Bambino" at Boston's Lyric Stage Theatre.

Lori Dupré, an experienced community theatre actress herself, has also previously joined her husband in the casts of "Footloose" and "Company For the Holidays," and now in "A Christmas Carol."



Dupré, who's lived with his family in Cohasset since 1993, offered his perspective on the unique chemistry of working with his wife and kids onstage

Said Dupré, "Lori, the kids and I have been acting in shows together off-and-on for four years. And I think that part of the whole experience of working together like this is the family atmosphere as much as the artistic side of acting. When you work with your kids onstage, it's not a parent-child relationship but rather peer-to-peer. Altogether, it's a very unusual thing."

Dupré added that also during this season he will perform with Josh and Jessie in a North River Community Church production of "A Christmas Tale," in which Lori Dupré is also on hand to direct.

Volunteers

We respect anyone who has the courage to run for and to hold office today. We also applaud those who sit on appointed boards and committees.

Today's issues are complex and taxpayers can get riled up by the decisions made and policies enacted – making the job of public officials unpleasant at times.

The paperwork and preparation for a meeting can be daunting. We realize being a town official can be time consuming – in short, it's a tough job.

But with that being said, no one is forced to become a public official. Homework and long hours go with the territory.

We're a little disturbed that the term "volunteer" is being bandied about of late in a way that could intimidate ordinary citizens from challenging a decision or policy. Town officials are not paid a salary. Therefore, they are volunteering their time.

However, we put those serving on boards and committees in a different "volunteer" category than, let's say, volunteers who work at a hospital, food pantry, or non-profit organization out of the kindness of their hearts without any expectation of thanks or recognition.

Running for office can be expensive and it is not for the faint of heart. Yet, it is a healthy process and Cohasset seems to have no shortage of folks willing to serve and lend their talent, judgment and expertise to the town.

Serving on an appointed board, like the ZBA, is also challenging and can be fraught with controversy – look at the debate generated over 3 Jerusalem Lane, for example.

So while public officials are unpaid for the most part and are therefore, volunteering their time — they shouldn't throw the term around loosely at meetings so those in the audience will feel "their pain," so to speak. When someone says, "I'm just a volunteer" – it's human nature to immediately think that person's decisions should not be questioned because of all the time they've put in for no remuneration.

We've also noticed a growing lack of civility at selectmen's meetings from both sides of the desk. But it's especially incumbent upon selectmen to show restraint when the going gets tough. When frustrated citizens are heard out – often a situation can be diffused without creating more animosity. While no town official should have to sit back and take verbal abuse, true leadership means rising above the fray.

Town Meeting

We can never understand why there is not standing room only at Town Meetings. There is no purer form of democracy or better theater than that venerable form of New England government.

Here at the Mariner, we try to provide a synopsis of what decisions were made, the debate and capture a sense of the "mood" or tenor of the taxpayers.

The great thing about Town Meetings for those in attendance is the way all sides of issues are discussed; so usually by the time a vote occurs most have a clear picture of what they're voting for.

If you didn't attend Town Meeting, then you really can't complain about any allocations of funds or decisions made there. For those who enjoy the workings of government, Town Meetings aren't boring – they're fascinating arenas.

Those who regularly attend are participating in their government which couldn't run without them. We thank you for making the commitment of spending a couple of nights helping to make the important decisions that affect your community.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Differences of opinion

TO THE EDITOR:

In both sessions of this week's Town Meeting, some selectmen and advisory board members repeatedly brought up the words "devisive" ands "mean-spirited" in connection with some of the proposed articles. It appeared that they only used such terminology for proponents and articles that they disagreed with. The impression they conveyed was that if you did not agree with them, you were being "devisive" and "mean spirited."

My opinion is that accusations of being "devisive" and "mean-spirited" do not belong in Cohasset's public debate. At every previous Town Meeting I have attended there have been differences of opinion between honest well-meaning people, without accusations of "devisiveness" and being "mean-spirited."

As pointed out more than once from the floor of this Town Meeting, the free expression of differences of opinion is what America is all about. Instead of pejoratively labeling them, we should celebrate our differences of opinion, advocate for our positions, and trust our fellow citizens in Town Meeting assembled to draw their own conclusions on what is best for the town, as they have for hundreds of years.

Deep Run needs sewering

TO THE EDITOR:

While large housing projects continue to line up for sewer access, we must not forget that the intent of providing wastewater treatment capacity in the Town of Cohasset was to improve, restore and protect the environment and health of the Town. At the Special Town Meeting on Dec. 6, the voters took an important step to this end by endorsing additional action to be taken by the Town to complete the Little Harbor and Atlantic Avenue Sewer District project. Completion of this project, as described in the Supplement to Final Wastewater Facility Plan and Environmental Impact Report dated February 2002 (the "EIR") for the Town of Cohasset, is critical to restoring the environmental quality of our coastal waters and tidal areas. However, the environmental integrity of our coastline is still compromised and additional action by the Town is required to provide sewers to Deep Run and Rust Way.

The EIR designates 38 residences on Deep Run, Rust Way and joining section of Jerusalem Road as "the Jerusalem Road Sewer District." It notes that, once the Little Harbor-Atlantic Avenue Sewer District is in place to satisfy the Second Amended Final Judgement, the Jerusalem Road Sewer District will be the only remaining unsewered portion of the Cohasset coastline. The EIR goes on to state that any additional Hull capacity should be utilized by the Town of Cohasset to alleviate the existing problems within the Town namely for the original North Cohasset Sewer District expansion areas and the Jerusalem Road Sewer District. It concludes that "Until these environmentally sensitive areas are sewered, capacity allocation for new development should not be entertained or allowed to traverse public streets and/or ways".

Rust Way is already a designated expansion area of the North Cohasset Sewer District. This leaves Deep Run as the only street remaining on the Cohasset shoreline susceptible to contributing pollution to Massachusetts Bay which is not included in either the Central Sewer District or the North Cohasset Sewer District nor covered by the Second Amended Final Judgement. This is clearly an oversight that needs to be remedied. It is contingent upon the Town to initiate action to designate Deep run as an expansion area of North Cohasset Sewer District and to work to obtain additional Hull capacity to cover the expansion areas. It is logical to redefine the North Cohasset Sewer District accordingly to rectify the existing situation and to provide environmental protection along the entire Cohasset shorelines. As the EIR states, this work should take precedence over new development.

Senseless vandalism

TO THE EDITOR:

Last spring, my son and I attached a flower box to the little ticket office next to the Hingham Shipyard ferry to Boston. During the summer, Lynda the manager of the facility kept it full of flowers, and watered them faithfully, to cheer our morning commute.

A few days ago the flower box, ripped from its supports, was found floating in the water next to the dock.

I just don't get it. Are our kids so angry and alienated that they engage in malicious vandalism, striking out to hurt anybody and anything — even flower boxes?

Can anybody explain this?

Jingle Bell Walk support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The South Shore Community Center in Cohasset would like to express its appreciation to the many merchants and volunteers who lent a helping hand at our Tenth Jingle Bell Walk.

As the bells rang out from St. Stephen's Church, thanks to Mary Kennedy, Santa and Mrs. Claus along with many elf assistants arrived at the Community Canter. All our volunteers were ready to go with jingle bells, bet cocoa, and cookies waiting. Mrs. Claus and Santa, along with Frosty, Rudolph, and the merry Elves led a community sing-along of traditional holiday favorites. Photos with Santa, bowling, and face painting followed. Hayrides, the Turkey Trot, and the Luminaries were a big hit for everyone.

We would like to express our sincere thanks to the many, many contributors and volunteers who helped make the day successful.

150 N. Main St. development plans should concern us all

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

There is a hearing scheduled for this Monday, Dec. 13, before the Zoning Board of Appeals which should be of concern to all residents. The basic facts are these:

About a year ago a pair of local developers (Steven Bjorklund and Mark Winchester) purchased the property at 150 No. Main St. (that's the house almost directly across from Ripley Road with the solar panels on the roof). The property was grandfathered as a three-unit structure, but shortly after the new owners purchased it, they went to the ZBA for permission to turn it into a four unit structure. For reasons which are unclear (and which in the opinion of some may have exceeded the ZBA's authority), the ZBA granted the request by the new owners to permit the property to become a four-unit dwelling.

Last week the developers came before the Planning Board for a preliminary hearing regarding a Large House Site Review pursuant to the new by-law passed at last spring's Town Meeting. At that hearing the developers unveiled their proposal for their new plans for the property, which are as follows: They stated that shortly after purchasing the property, they "discovered termites," which, they asserted, leave them no viable option other than to demolish the existing structure and build anew. (I should note here that Richard Henderson, our former Town Counsel, read aloud the ZBA decision granting the four-unit conversion in which the ZBA appears to have plainly stated that the permit was granted "on condition that the exterior of the dwelling not be changed.") They intend to convert what had been an owner-occupied home with two apartments into a four-unit condominium "apartment building" (Mr. Bjorklund's own words). The existing footprint and living area are 1,982 and 3,844 sq. ft. respectively; the new footprint and living area will be 3,388 and 6,776 sq. ft. respectively. In short, the new structure will be almost twice the size of the current one on a lot of 26,119 sq. ft.

In addition, there will be a four car garage; a double-driveway with two curb cuts at this busy intersection of No. Main and Ripley Road; and uncovered parking areas for 4-6 more cars.

Plans for the house at 150 N. Main St., shown here, are the subject of a public hearing before the Zoning Board of Appeals on Monday at 7:30 p.m.

...the look of that neighborhood, especially for the abutters, will be changed dramatically because of the size of the proposed new structure as well as by the garage and increased parking accommodations.

The developers mentioned that they felt that such a project would help to meet the needs of Cohasset's senior population who are looking to downsize; however, when Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey asked whether their project would be age-restricted, their answer was, "No." They also mentioned that one of the units would be handicapped accessible because "it will have a bedroom on the first floor." However, there was no mention at the meeting of whether there will be a wheelchair ramp, bathrooms designed for handicapped use, etc. for this unit.

There is no question that the new building looks quite nice on paper. On the other hand, it also is clear that the look of that neighborhood, especially for the abutters, will be changed dramatically because of the size of the proposed new structure as well as by the garage and increased parking accommodations. Moreover, an existing antique structure which has been on that piece of land for almost 250 years will be gone, forever changing the face of the main thoroughfare into our historic downtown district.

The reason that this project should be of concern to all of us is this: As surely as night follows day, the pressure to intensify the use of every square foot of land in Cohasset is going to increase dramatically as every additional foot of track is laid for the train. Developers will use the magic words du jour – "It's good for seniors" – to coax neighbors and our town boards to allow their projects, even in the face of our zoning by-law restrictions. After surveying their proposal, Bob Sturdy, the long-time Planning Board member, bluntly told the developers, "You are beating the zoning by-laws to a pulp."

Although this is just one lot in our town, the ZBA surely will be setting a precedent if they allow this sort of development to go forward. It is not a stretch to say that what is at stake is whether we want to turn our town into a densely-settled community with an urban feel or whether we want Cohasset to remain as Cohasset.

Memories of the Yard

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Watching them take down the familiar skeletal crane ways that symbolized the Fore River Shipyard the other day called to mind a sad, nostalgic realization.

After a hundred years, they ain't gonna build no ships there anymore!

I remember a time when they turned out ships like Carter turned out little liver pills and if the Japanese sank them as fast as they built them, they'd just build them faster.

There were some 35,000 men and a few women at work in the Yard around the clock in three shifts 60-odd years ago and one of the ships they built, the battleship Nevada, was so well-built that she survived Pearl Harbor and the A-Bomb test at Bikini and had to be sunk by torpedoes.

They built the aircraft carrier Wasp at the Yard, too, and therein lies a personal tale.

There were some 35,000 men and a few women at work in the Yard around the clock in three shifts 60-odd years ago...

The Squantum Naval Air Station put on an air show to celebrate the launching of the Wasp and two of the planes locked wings and crashed in East Braintree, killing the four crewmen involved.

We lived on Edgemont Road at the time, as did a lot of my classmates in Miss Clark's seventh grade class in the Thomas A. Watson School and, as black smoke rose from the crash site, the school leaked kids running home to see if it was still standing.

One plane crashed into the house next to Mallen's across the street from our house and one of the crewmen, whose chute didn't have time to open, came down in the house lot behind us on Bickford Road. The second plane crashed about a half mile away on Sheppard Avenue.

It was a memorable day for me and the Shipyard, too.

I never worked at the Yard. My uncle scooped me up to give me a free tour of the Pacific the minute I escaped from Braintree High School. But one of my jobs while a high school student was to deliver a weekly paper for the Independent Union of Fore River Workers.

The union was fighting a losing battle with the CIO shipbuilders union and we used to stand at the gates when the 11 o'clock shift got out and pass out the papers to the workers while some guys --- from the CIO, I suppose --- glared at us. The job didn't last long.

Only last year I came across a paperback book called "The Shipyard: Will It Float," by Dave Drummond, the memoir of a man whose family worked at the Yard for three generations. It contains a list of every ship constructed at the Yard and a few surprises.

Like the list includes five submarines built for the Japanese Navy. No, they weren't used to sink American ships built at the Yard, but wouldn't it be ironic if they were?

They were built in 1904 just in time for the Japanese war against the Russians. They were built at Fore River, then taken apart, shipped to the West Coast, loaded on steamers bound for Japan and reassembled. They were scrapped in 1921.

And now the Yard is a used car lot.

HEALTH NOTES

Some health hints for the holidays

And tips that are good all year long

As the holidays approach we like to celebrate by entertaining friends and family, throwing parties, and preparing feasts. From the buffet table to the office party, food moves center stage throughout the holiday season. In order to avoid a dyspeptic December:

Keep food safe by following good sense food safety practices.

•Clean: Wash hands and food-contact surfaces often. Bacteria can spread throughout the kitchen and get onto cutting boards, knives, sponges, and counter tops.

• Separate: Don't cross-contaminate-don't let bacteria spread from one food product to another. This is especially true for raw meat, poultry and seafood. Keep such foods and their juices away from ready-to-eat foods.

• Cook: Cook to proper temperatures. Foods are properly cooked when they are heated for a long enough time and at a high (>160 F) temperature to kill the harmful bacteria that cause food borne illness. Chill: Refrigerate promptly. Refrigerating foods quickly keeps most harmful bacteria from growing and multiplying. Refrigerators should be set at 40 F and the freezer at 0 F, and the accuracy of the settings should be checked occasionally with a thermometer.

Germs

Whether you are with friends, family, or at the mall: Holidays are also the time we meet more people. It's a good thing to remember how germs are transmitted. Illnesses like flu (influenza) and colds are caused by viruses that infect the nose, throat, and lungs. Flu and colds usually spread from person to person when an infected person coughs or sneezes. Take care to:

• Clean your hands often When available, wash your hands -- with soap and warm water -- then rub your hands vigorously together and scrub all surfaces. Wash for 15 to 20 seconds. It is the soap combined with the scrubbing action that helps dislodge and remove germs.

Germs can live for a long time (some can live for 2 hours or more) on surfaces like doorknobs, desks, and tables.

When soap and water are not available, use alcohol-based disposable hand wipes or gel sanitizers You can find them in most supermarkets and drugstores. If using a gel, rub the gel in your hands until they are dry. The gel doesn't need water to work; the alcohol in the gel kills germs that cause colds and the flu.

• Cough or sneeze into a tissue and then throw it away. Cover your cough or sneeze if you do not have a tissue. Then, clean your hands, and do so every time you cough or sneeze.

• Avoid close contact and stay home if you're sick

• Avoid touching your eyes, nose, or mouth Germs are often spread when a person touches something that is contaminated with germs and then touches their eyes, nose, or mouth. Germs can live for a long time (some can live for 2 hours or more) on surfaces like doorknobs, desks, and tables.

• If you get sick or have flu symptoms: stay home, get plenty of rest, and check with a health care provider as needed. Your employer may need a doctor's note for an excused absence. Remember: Keeping your distance from others may protect them from getting sick. Common symptoms of the flu include: fever (usually high), headache, extreme tiredness, cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose, muscle aches, and nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea (much more common among children than adults).

• Practice other good health habits: Get plenty of sleep, be physically active, manage your stress, drink plenty of fluids, and eat nutritious food. Practicing healthy habits will help you stay healthy during flu season and all year long.

• When you have to see a doctor: Ask questions, and if you don't understand, ask again. It's your body and you have a right to know.

• Pay attention to the care you are receiving. Make sure you're getting the right treatments and medications by the right health care professionals. Don't assume anything.

• Educate yourself about your diagnosis, the medical tests you are undergoing, and your treatment plan.

• Ask a trusted family member or friend to be your advocate.

• Know what medications you take and why you take them. Medication errors are the most common health care errors.

• Keep an accurate record of your medications. Include dosage, when you have to take them, and know about side effects. The Board of Health can provide a handy chart which can be used to list medications and other helpful information.

• Participate in all decisions about your general health and its treatment. You are the center of your health care team.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Memory Tree at the South Shore Community Center

Each week the Cohasset Mariner will run a list of contributors to The Memory Tree.

This holiday season will be enriched by remembering, in a tangible way, the joy our loved ones have shared with us in seasons past.

Commemorative lights will shine on The Memory Tree on the lawn of the South Shore Community Center. As contributions are received, bulbs will be illuminated throughout the season and the names of the donors will be published in the Cohasset Mariner. Your tax-deductible contribution will help continue quality programs at SSCC. The star atop the 2004 Memory Tree will shine in honor of our departed loved ones whom you wish to honor. Participation options are:

Individual: Forget me not white lights for a gift of $5;

Angel: Individuals, businesses or professionals giving $15 or more, forget me not white lights;

Archangel: Individuals, businesses, professionals giving $50 or more, forget me not white lights.

Generosity will be acknowledged by white lights on The Memory Tree and on the scroll published weekly.

Please make checks payable to The South Shore Community Center, P.O. Box, 631, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Former governors and others need to come clean on Big Dig

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

MICHAEL P. NORTON

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

Anyone who thinks the Big Dig's problems aren't a big deal should have been in Room A-1 at 10 am last Thursday (Dec. 2). A half hour before lawmakers were due to grill the project's public and private managers, every seat was occupied and the crowded room was buffeted mostly by men in suits and some stake in the $14.6 billion mega-project.

Members of the Legislature's Transportation Committee, after hearing from independent engineers they called to testify two days before, spent hours grilling Massachusetts Turnpike Authority Chairman Matthew Amorello and Bechtel Parsons Brinckerhoff executives over leaks in the new I-93 northbound tunnel.

While everyone listened attentively to the questions and the answers — most notably Bechtel's acceptance of responsibility for a Sept. 15 tunnel wall breach — it's worthwhile to pause and think about whose feet are not being held to the fire, at least not yet, in the ongoing inquiry into who knew what about the water leaks in the tunnels and how long ago they knew it.

Gov. Mitt Romney has already asked for Amorello's resignation, essentially claiming the leaks occurring under his watch have further eroded public confidence in both Amorello and the independent authority he runs. Most others in positions of power on Beacon Hill have the knives out for Bechtel Parsons Brinckerhoff (BPB). The line of thinking goes like this: after being paid $2 billion to manage the largest public works project in the world, BPB ought to be delivering a flawless product. Hard to argue with that.

But here are a few names that no one on Beacon Hill has mentioned in a sentence with the words accountability or responsibility in it: William Weld, Paul Cellucci, Jane Swift, Thomas Reilly, Gregory Sullivan, Joseph DeNucci, James Kerasiotes, Richard Capka, Andrew Natsios.

Is it so far-fetched to think that footage of water pouring into the tunnel from its walls and roof would stir the Legislature to want to hear from former governors who appointed the people who ran the project and were charged with holding Bechtel accountable? Is it a stretch to wonder why the state auditor, attorney general and inspector general were not called to testify? And while Amorello is running the Dig now, he's only been at the helm since 2002. Why not bring in the turnpike's former chairmen – Kerasiotes, Capka and Natsios – since evidence has surfaced that the leak problems date back to the late 1990s?

"There has been a lot of change at the top of this project over the years," committee co-chairman Rep. Joseph Wagner said. Wagner said he wished his panel had subpoena power — the House Post Audit and Oversight Committee does have subpoena powers — and indicated he would forward actionable information he learned about the leaks to the "appropriate authorities," without naming them.

At some point; maybe someone will call these folks to ask them questions. How would they rate their oversight of the project? What did they know about the leaks and waterproofing problems and when? Why did they not disclose at an earlier point information they knew was important? And if they didn't know key information one might reasonably believe people in those positions would know, why was that?

Almost amazingly, the Inspector General's office within the US Department of Transportation said it has reservations about how the state can determine which entities may have responsibility for the leaks and the repair costs those entities will assume. The IG's office said the "existing arrangements" and the "interests of the parties involved" give it pause, and recommended the creation of yet another special commission to determine responsibility for the leaks and oversee fixes.

But don't hold your breath for such an uber-independent inquiry. The history of this project has been one of quiet periods followed by massive problems, be they finance or construction-related, followed by periods of feigned outrage and then more calm. Amorello, the public face of the project, and Bechtel PB, through its contractual obligations, remain the most likely to pay if the leak problems aren't solved, as promised, or if the leaks worsen. But don't underestimate the collective but unspoken wish for this project to simply be finished by next September and for all these problems and inquiries to just go away. And don't underestimate the possibility that wishing the problems away is merely wishful thinking.

The Big Dig remained front and center all week, with fresh new developments:

• Project officials began to highlight concerns that water may corrode the project's infrastructure and lead to unanticipated expenses. "We are looking at that because of the long-term budget impact that may have on us," said Amorello. Authority officials said the leak repairs have cost the project $10 million to date. And they said they are still examining the question of whether the leaks are due to a design issue, which could trigger another whole series of problems.

• US Rep. Stephen Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, toured the tunnel and pronounced it safe afterwards. But Lynch said there are obvious problems and announced that a congressional investigative committee he serves on will be traveling to Boston in January to hold an oversight hearing here. Sen. John McCain, R-Arizona, is also still considering hearings on the project's latest problems.

• The Big Dig's recently hired independent engineering experts said they would be surprised if ice did not form this winter inside the tunnel, due to the continuing leaks. The prediction prompted Romney to supplement comments by Boston Herald columnist Howie Carr. "We got more than we bargained for, we not only got a massive tunnel system, but we got a car wash. Well in the wintertime, the car wash is going to be an ice rink, unless it's properly managed." With a more serious tone, Romney said he's confident that any ice formations will be dealt with.

• Study details state workers earning more than $100,000 per year — A Romney administration study outlined concludes that more than 2,000 people employed by the Executive Branch of state government or at independent authorities took home more than $100,000 in the most recent fiscal year. Most of the employees were in education, public safety and health and human services jobs. Unlike 13 other authorities, the turnpike authority did not submit data. Authority spokesman Doug Hanchett attributed that to an "internal mixup" and the turnpike divulged that it has 12 people on its payroll who make six figures.

• Coalition comes together around health care bill — The leading trade groups in the state representing unions, hospitals, and physicians are coalescing around legislation sponsored by Sen. Richard Moore, D-Uxbridge, to expand access to health insurance. The cornerstones of the bill are plans to raise the cigarette tax by 50 cents a pack and to require businesses that don't offer insurance to do so or pay into a fund that will help cover the uninsured. Gov. Romney and Senate President Robert Travaglini oppose new taxes or employer mandates as part of a health fix bill.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen

beaconhill@aol.com

December 3, 2004

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 413F

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2120 Room 472

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Cohasset Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on two roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

FULLY FUND REGIONAL SCHOOL TRANSPORTATION (S 2463)

Senate 38-0, approved an amendment providing that the state begin in fiscal year 2006 to provide 100 percent reimbursement to regional schools for the transportation of pupils. The amendment became part of legislation creating a new funding plan for the distribution of some Chapter 70 Education Aid. The entire bill was approved by the Senate and sent to the House which has not taken any action on it. Amendment supporters said these regional districts are having financial problems because the state currently reimburses only 65 percent of the costs. They noted that the state encouraged the creation of regional schools many years ago with the promise that it would fully reimburse their transportation costs. (A "Yea" vote is for full reimbursement).

Y

Senate 38-0, gave final approval to a bill providing up to $300 annually in additional retirement benefits for some state employees who are veterans and are on accidental disability retirement because of a work-related injury. The measure provides a retroactive additional $15 for each year and fraction of a year of creditable service up to a maximum of $300 annually. The bill also includes a local option provision allowing local cities, towns and counties to provide the additional benefits to their local employees. Supporters said the state should provide this additional benefit to veterans that have served our nation and argued that it would help many families. Gov. Romney vetoed the bill and the Legislature has not yet acted on the veto. In his veto message, the governor said the bill is very narrow and would not help veterans that are not on accidental disability retirement or any non-veterans. He noted that the bill would cost a lot of money but would benefit only a small percentage of public employees. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

TENANTS' WATER AND SEWER BILLS (H 5001)- The House gave final approval and the Senate gave near final approval to a bill allowing landlords to install meters and bill their tenants for the amount of water and sewer services that they use. Massachusetts is the only state that does not allow this practice that treats water like gas and electricity. The legislation would allow landlords to bill only new tenants and only if the landlords install water conservation devices for all faucets, showerheads and toilets in the unit. Tenants in public housing units would be exempt from having a meter installed in their units. Supporters said the measure is an environmental one that would encourage reduced water use by tenants that would now be footing the bill. They noted that one study indicated that tenants that pay for their own water typically use up to 39 percent less of it than tenants that have the costs built into their rent. Opponents said that tenants are already paying astronomical rents and argued that the bill is an anti-tenant one that would raise their rents by hundreds of dollars annually. They noted that tenants, unlike landlords, would not be allowed to deduct the water and sewer costs on their income taxes.

BIG DIG AND MORE- The heated discussion about who is responsible and who should pay for the escalating number of reports of leaks in the Interstate 93 tunnel continued on Beacon Hill last week at a hearing before the Transportation Committee. John MacDonald, an official with Bechtel/Parsons Brinckerhoff, admitted that the company made mistakes and would agree to pay its "fair share" of the repair costs. He refused, however, to agree to a proposal by Transportation Committee chairman Steven Baddour (D-Methuen) that the company establish an escrow account to pay for future repairs caused by mistakes. Some legislators are calling for a full-scale investigation aimed at uncovering fraud and criminal activity. In the meantime, a separate, broader hearing was held by the Transportation Finance Commission— a special commission that was created to draft a plan to meet the state's transportation needs for the next 25 years. At that hearing, State Transportation Secretary Daniel Grabauskas said that the $1 billion backlog of bridges across the state in need of repair can be partially blamed on the Big Dig that gobbled up 70 percent of the state's transportation funds since 1990. Grabauskas also recommended that the special commission consider various revenue raising proposals including charging commuters a tax based on the number of miles they drive. State officials fear that the increased use of hybrid and other fuel-efficient vehicles would reduce the revenue from the state's gas tax. The state of Oregon has established a pilot program and next year 400 private automobiles in that state will be equipped with mileage-recording devices. Drivers of those vehicles will pay a gas tax based on the amount of miles that they drive rather than paying the state's regular gas tax.

TAX REVENUE- State Revenue Commissioner Alan LeBovidge announced that state revenue collections for November were $1.12 billion— an increase of $75 million or 7.1 percent over November 2003. Despite the increase over last year, November's collections were $42 million below predictions. LeBovidge attributes that to changes in the timing of withholding payments that increased October tax collections and decreased November collections by similar amounts. He also noted that collections for the first five months of fiscal year 2005 were $6.236 billion— an increase of $316 million or 5.3 percent over the same five months of fiscal year 2004 and $38 million above the predicted amount.

Sewer schedule voted for Little Harbor

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"The state has been more than patient in waiting for us to address the pollution of Little Harbor."
— Lisa Lojacono, Nichols Road

Town Meeting has spoken and citizens in the Little Harbor area of town have assurance a project to sewer their neighborhood will follow a set schedule.

Since 1979, when the town violated the Clean Waters Act, the plan to clean up the waters in the Little Harbor area of town has been underway. As a result of the violation, the state gave the town a judgment, followed by a second amended judgment, which the town needed to comply with or possibly face fines of $10,000 per day.

A group of citizens banded together in the hopes that incorporating a sewering schedule into that judgment would formalize the town's commitment to the project. With a set plan and sewer connections on the way, proponents say homeowners in the area would be given amnesty from upgrading sewer systems, regardless of whether they intend to sell.

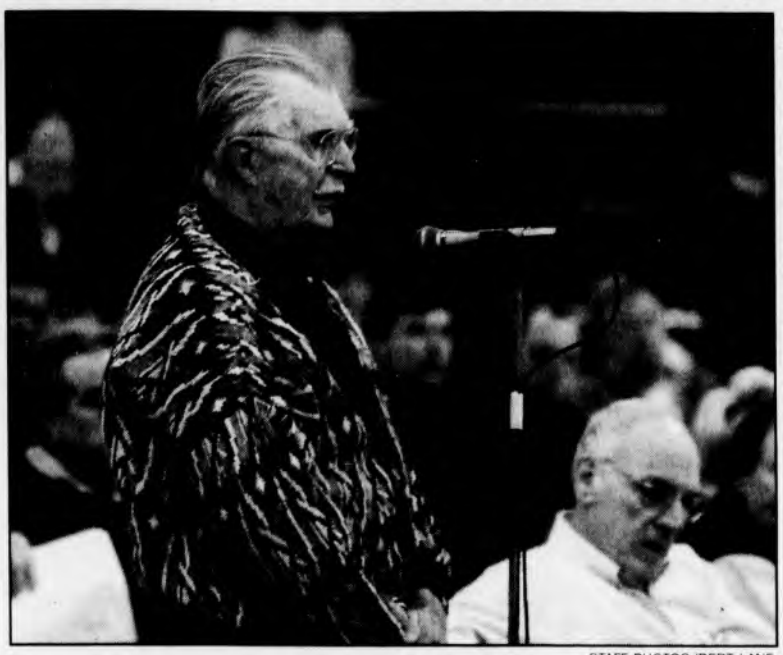
Even before Monday's session of Town Meeting, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said in his opinion, the article was not legal, and would have no effect on the town other than creating a bad precedent. He said he believed it would send the message that, "If you want to get your home sewered, go to Town Meeting with an article," he said. However, DeRensis offered an amendment that would have made the article legal, in his view, which included attaching a monetary value.

However, proponent Rickard Brooks said members of CEES hired "top, expert council to assist us," to ensure the article was legal as presented. In addition, proponents spoke with Town Meeting Moderator George Marlette who said he felt comfortable bringing the issue before the town.

While there were many residents in attendance who support sewering the Little Harbor area, others thought this was not the way to go about it. Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz said he does support the project, but worries submitting to a schedule with a deadline to the state could be harmful to the town. He said if a date comes up where an obligation has to be met, he is not sure what might happen if the town does not have the money to move the project ahead.

Sewer Commissioner Sean Cunning said he too supports the effort to sewer Little Harbor, and noted regardless of whether the article passes, the project is currently on schedule. However, he, like Kasperowicz, worries if the money is not there when the time comes, he doesn't know what the town will do.

Dick Avery said rather than looking for a fast solution, the town should look at the best solution, which is based on merits, not emotions. However, proponent Lisa Lojacono said the state began asking for action when the town violated the Clean Waters Act in 1979. "The state has been more than patient in waiting for us to address the pollution of Little Harbor," she said. Lojacono also said the longer the town waits, the more it is going to cost to fund the project.



Many in the audience agreed with Lojacono, citing the protection of the environment as something that should be a top priority. Although the argument was made that sewering Little Harbor will only add more fresh water, which will negatively impact the salinity in the surrounding waters, the article was adopted by a majority vote.

George Chamillard urges Town Meeting to defeat a motion to pay for a school utility bill. He said the town should send a message to the School Committee that it needs to "Just say no" to spending.

Alison Callahan works on a needlepoint sampler during the Monday night session of Town Meeting. Many residents who attended could be seen working on handmade crafts, including knitting and crocheting scarves, during both nights of the meeting.

Murray Campbell speaks up during school budget discussions at Monday's session of Town Meeting, reminding residents the town will not be moving forward if bills aren't paid and utilities are shut off at the schools.

Groups help local families to soldier on

and his bag full of presents.

"We're going to have gifts for all the kids," Yanosic said just days before Sunday's party.

While an early visit from Santa is special for most kids, the children at this party received something even more meaningful — an eight-inch sweatshirt-wearing Teddy Bear displaying a heart on his stomach and a flag on his arm. The Bedford Rotary Club donated dozens of these bears and the members of the FRG added the flags and hearts.

"The sweatshirt has this pouch on it and in the pouch is a letter from Dad," Yanosic said.

Patrick Hurney, a Marine who grew up in Pembroke, was in town last month to visit his parents for Thanksgiving and said there's an underlying reason as to why efforts to help the families of soldiers are just as important during a time of war.

"It's nice to know the people back home have somewhere to go to for support," he said.

His parents, Mike and Mary Hurney, are both involved in Pembroke Cares, a group that was born the month after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Patrick was in Iraq for the first six months of the war.

This weekend, Pembroke Cares handed out holiday wreaths to the families of soldiers, an event that has become a yearly tradition for the group. The group's generosity and care for the families left behind isn't tied to just the holiday time. Whenever a soldier is being deployed, his mother or wife is presented with a bouquet of flowers tied up with a yellow ribbon.

Marcia Morgan knew about the custom of the mother's bouquet, but was completely surprised to be a recipient of one the day her son left to serve his country.

"It meant a lot to me," she said. "I certainly wasn't expecting one."

When one mother was sending a child off to war, another, Elaine Crudup, was experiencing the opposite feeling – welcoming her son home from a tour of duty – and her friends and fellow members of Pembroke Cares were right there for her.

Pembroke Cares showed its support for Crudup with a patriotic toilet papering of her house, using red, white and blue crepe paper.

"They were always there for me, whenever I needed to vent, or the news came on and I'd be losing my mind," she said. "Some nights we'd all be crying. People who are going through it support each other because no one else can really know what's it like."

Gail Linehan of the Family Readiness Group for the Quincy unit of the National Guard echoed that sentiment.

"My daughter-in-law said to me once, 'My girlfriends complain that their husbands come home late from work. At least their husbands are coming home every night,'" Linehan said.

Both of Linehan's sons are in the military, as well as her husband, who last was preparing for deployment to the Middle East.

Linehan said the FRG tries to help the families of soldiers adjust to life with a loved one serving in a war. She said their assistance is needed in a variety of ways, from helping a woman adjust to being the lone head of the household to providing a family with some financial assistance.

"We try to keep the families in touch and knowledgeable about where they can turn if they need help," she said. "We're not psychiatrists or banks, but we can help them get to the right people."

Linehan said it is important for a soldier's family to remember that while the may be lonely and missing their soldier, they at least have the comforts of family and friends to help them get through this.

"I have the comfort of being able to sleep in my own bed, I can see all his stuff, his clothes," she said. "He's got to come to back – I've got everything he owns. But he won't be surrounded by the things that comfort him."

While groups like Pembroke Cares and the Family Readiness Groups of Braintree and Quincy directly help both the troops and the families, others, like Care Packs of Weymouth, continue to show the families how the soldiers are supported back home.

Since early this fall, CarePacks has been collecting food and goods to send to troops serving in the war. So far, they've shipped 43 packages to the Middle East.

"CarePacks wants to give the soldiers a chance to smile, laugh, and enjoy some food beyond the MREs that they eat," said organizer Neal Skorka. "We've sent out 43 care packages already, and the next batch of them will include more small, fun items for the soldiers—from tennis balls to board games and toys. Hopefully these will let them have a little fun to decrease the stress.

He added that the group also wants the soldiers to feel that they are supported back home, that they are in the thoughts of people here.

"They need to know that in spite of the different opinions people may have about the war in Iraq, that people here can still come together in support of the troops," he said.

Cohasset Brownies create a stir

Wooden mixing spoons decorated as holiday Santas, Snowmen, Angels and Teddy Bears were created by the girls of Cohasset Brownie troop #4769 as part of a fundraiser for Project Bread.

For more than 15 years, Project Bread's Holiday Spoons Project has remained an inspiring way for young people to raise money to help feed the hungry in the Boston community. Children of all ages decorate wooden spoons and learn the essentials of fundraising to provide for families in need during the winter.

Each wooden spoon is hand decorated and comes with a holiday recipe. Unwrap the spoon and mix up a holiday treat. Spoons make wonderful gifts, holiday decorations or ornaments, and when unwrapped, new wooden mixing spoons can be used for holiday baking.

Spoons make wonderful gifts, holiday decorations or ornaments, and when unwrapped, new wooden mixing spoons can be used for holiday baking.

Spoon purchases support the children's creativity and empower them to be part of the solution to ending hunger.

Holiday spoons are on sale at Bakery at the Red Lion Inn, Cohasset. All proceeds from spoon sales support Project Bread.

GIMME SHELTER

Lady Slipper came to the Scituate Animal Shelter after being rescued by animal control. She had been left behind when her family moved, locked inside with no way out. No matter how nervous she was, Lady Slipper has always shown herself to be accepting and gentle with humans. Hugely pregnant, Lady Slipper was sent to live in a foster home. She was quiet and unassuming, and after the birth of her four babies, the most nurturing and patient mother. All of Lady Slippers' kittens found great homes, and now this special cat deserves one herself. Please come in and meet this easy-going, gentle cat! Curtain rises on 'Grease' at CHS this weekend

"Grease" is being produced by the Music Department at Cohasset Middle-High School. Performances are Fri., Dec. 10, at 7:30pm; Sat., Dec. 11, at 7:30pm and Sun., Dec. 12, at 2:30pm (a matinee') in the CMHS Auditorium. Tickets are $10. and will be available at the door and are also available at Buttonwood Books.

This is a show that was produced at CHS 20 years ago, according to Bryan Marks, producer-music director. Many members of that cast have plans to attend the show this weekend as many fond memories linger from that cast and their performances. This year there are about 50 students in the production. It has been a cooperative effort throughout the school.

"Our athletic department has been a wonderful partner," Marks says. "Many of our cast are first-string athletes too. Even our football coach, Mr. Rolfe, has a role."

"Grease" debuted back in 1972. It ran more than 3,000 performances and received seven Tony nominations. The story centers around a 50's greaser named Danny Zuko. Danny meets Sandy Dumbrowski, a young innocent, during the summer, and falls in love at first sight. Danny showed his sensitive side, but didn't expect to see her at Rhydell High the first day of school. His friends are watching him, so he reverts to his greaser personality. Sandy gets upset and decides to join the female version of the greaser life...the Pink Ladies. All is forgiven in the end as the cast sing, "We go together."

A fine group of supporting characters make this a very entertaining show, Marks says. The choreography of Stephanie Hoskin and the costumes of Maureen Duffy and Nina Berkowicz add great visual appeal to the show. The staging work of Carolyn Crimmins is complimented by the lighting and sound management of John DeWaal. Come hear some fine voices and music. The production has been caringly edited for the whole family. You're sure to laugh and have a great time at "Grease," Marks says.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 13 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Cohassett Mariner in supporting The South Shore Womens Center in supporting the effort to help local military families this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Please make your tax deductible check or money order payable to:

First Parish invites carolers to join in

First Parish, Cohasset's Unitarian Universalist church, is reviving an old and well-loved Cohasset tradition — Caroling on the Common — Saturday, Dec. 18.

This is a community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; caroling books will be available, but you may bring your own.

This is a community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children

Participants will assemble at the First Parish's Parish House (23 North Main St.) between 4 and 4:30 p.m. Carolers will circuit the Common, serenading all homes as weather permits. At approximately 5:30, everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies (cookie donations are appreciated).

For further information call Sandy Bailey at First Parish (781-383-1100) or Woody Chittick (781-383-3215).

Volunteers are needed

Are there any college students home during the holidays who would like to help at Cohasset Elder Affairs? There is a variety of volunteer opportunities available. On completion of your volunteer hours, you will be given a letter recognizing the hours you have volunteered.

The CEA is looking for a volunteer to assist, one or more days a week as an Office Receptionist/Office Assistant. Currently The CEA is also in need of volunteer van drivers. This is a commitment of approximately 3 hours a month. Call Martha Horsefield, Volunteer Coordinator, at 781-383-9112.

Desserts needed for December Luncheons

During the month of December, The Cohasset Elder Affairs is in need of Luncheon Desserts.

Lunches are served each Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at noon. Although dessert is usually provided, The CEA will need your help for the month of December.

If you have extra cookies, breads or other desserts that you wish to share with the seniors, that will be most grateful. They can be dropped off at the CEA office (open from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday, and 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., Monday and Friday).

Starting anew

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

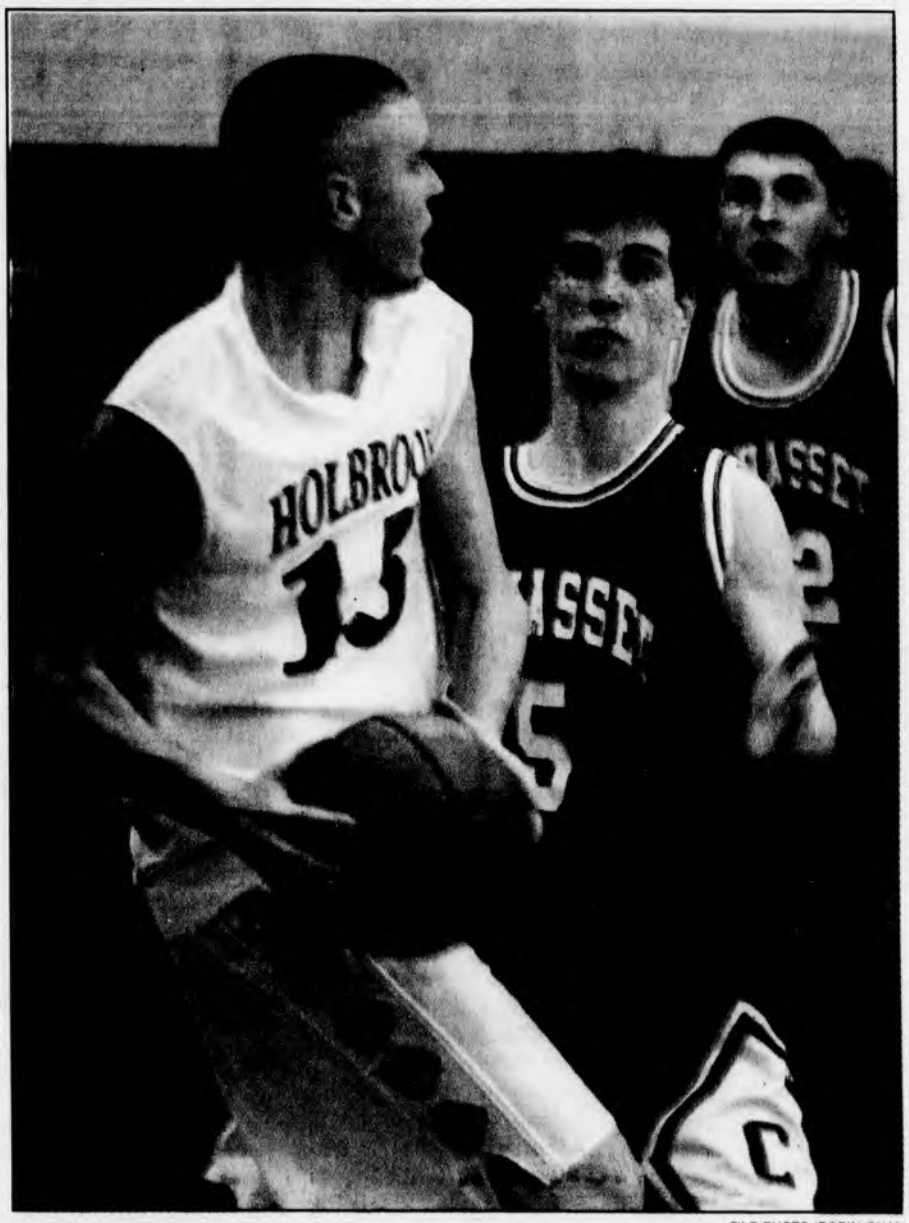
Cohasset's veteran girls basketball coach, John Levangie, navigated his squad last year to a highly impressive 15-7 record.

Many fans hope this momentum will carry their Skippers to another successful season.

Like Bill Belichick of the New England Patriots, Levangie doesn't let past success interfere with his mission for the new season.

"We want to emphasize what we want to achieve and not what others expect of us," Levangie said in an interview with the Mariner earlier this week. "We must focus on the fundamentals and the team aspects of the sport."

Matt Salerno, a very familiar face on the basketball courts of Cohasset, has joined Levangie on the Skippers coaching staff. A 1973 CHS graduate, Salerno begins his 22nd season of coaching teenagers in the game.



The new assistant has another view on what the team needs to improve on as they embark on the upcoming season.

"We need to work on our poise. We can't panic in tight situations," Salerno said.

The team lost five players to graduation from last year's team, including six-foot powerhouse Ashley Faber. Still, Salerno holds high expectations for this year's players.

"Last year's tournament berth was not a fluke," he said. "We are not a 'one-year-wonder' kind

Underclassmen to carry the load for boys hoops

A new coach and a new cast of characters.

That is the story of the 2004-05 Cohasset boys basketball team.

For a variety of reasons, including graduation and injuries, the Skippers return just one regular contributor from last season's tournament team.

Junior co-captain Trevor Brady will have a lot of responsibility this season, both on and off the court. As a result of a football injury to fellow junior co-captain Nick Arment, Brady will be the only captain actually on the floor this season.

Head coach Dorian Bryant says he will be counting on Brady to lead a very young team that is otherwise almost entirely composed of sophomores and freshmen.

"I'm looking to him to be my floor general," Bryant said. "Trevor is a bright kid and a nice guy. I think he is capable of doing it. As coaches, we are going to give all the help we can. Part of our job is to bring Trevor along as a captain."

Brady was the team's most consistent outside shooter last year, and he will likely be getting his share of shots this year. With the graduation of the team's leading scorers from last year - Chris Bilodeau, Sean Connolly, Jon Andrade and Dan Tarpey - the Skippers will be looking for different players to handle the scoring load.

Bryant said after practice Wednesday he is looking at two freshmen as his starters in the backcourt. One is Patrick McCarthy, a two-guard that the coach holds in high regard.

"For his age, he's a very skilled basketball player," Bryant said of McCarthy. "He's probably the best athlete on the team. He can pretty much do everything on the court."

The other is point guard Mike Bilodeau, the fourth Bilodeau brother to don the blue and white for Cohasset. Opponents are likely to press a lot against Cohasset's young backcourt, but Bryant thinks Bilodeau can handle it.

"He's a really smart ball-handler, and a really good passer," said the coach. "I think he'll do OK running the offense."

Likely starters up front are sophomore Justin Alexander and junior Chris Bryan. Alexander is a physical 6-foot-3 presence with a nifty touch around the basket. Bryan is around 6-2 and can shoot the ball well; Bryant says the junior will see minutes at both forward positions.

Travel basketball report update

Thanksgiving not only marks the beginning of the holiday season, it also signals the start of basketball season. This year, Cohasset's 6th, 7th and 8th grade boys are competing in the Patriot Travel Basketball League. Team tryouts and practice began several weeks ago, and this past weekend the boys played a double header, coming off the opening weekend at Abington.

The 8th grade team is coached by Jim Richardson, with Wilmarc Charles assisting. On the squad are Evan Richardson, Lennart Brown, Owen Landon, Adam Berger, Mike Fithian, John Sturino, Danny Brady, Dan Martin, Nick Savage, Nick Simonds, Marcus Charles and Ryan Daley.

In the first half against Abington, the squad came out with very aggressive play. Savage and Berger dominated the boards. Leading the offensive charge were Richardson and Sturino, who directed traffic and put the ball into play. Heads up ball-handling kept Abington running in the first half. The Abington team geared up for a strong second half and made the necessary defensive adjustments, eventually coming out on top, 49-22. Richardson and Berger each scored 6 points. The Cohasset squad shot 62% from the line.

In the Taunton matchup, Taunton put the fast break into play. Great hands and speed from Danny Brady kept Taunton from converting many fastbreak points. Nick Savage was a savage under the boards defensively. Dan Martin was a force in the low post, scoring with his patented hook shot. With 11 seconds left in the half, Marcus Charles hit a sweet 12 foot jumper to bring the score to 15-14, Taunton.

The second half began for Cohasset with several turnovers which Taunton converted to points. Ryan Daley and Mike Fithian brought fresh legs onto the court, keeping Taunton's lead to under ten points. John Sturino literally pumped up the volume with aggressive defensive play. He converted a mid court steal to a fastbreak two points feeding Dan Martin in the paint. On the next possession Sturino nailed a baseline jumper, but it wasn't enough as Taunton came away with the win.

Sunday's action proved more competitive for the squad as they matched up against Whitman. Whitman took an early lead, but strong rebounding and defense put Cohasset on top midway through the first half and they never looked back. Off the bench, Nick Simonds provided much needed size under the boards for Cohasset. Sturino kept the Whitman defense busy with smart, strong drives that he converted for baskets, scoring himself and feeding Evan Richardson.

The key to the win for Cohasset was their ability to drive to the basket, draw the defenders in and then dump to the open man who converted the pass for points. The boards were dominated by Cohasset's big men, Berger, Savage, Martin and Simonds.

With several AAU players on their team, Abington took an early lead and never looked back. Valentine, Davis and

Girls soccer All-Scholastic team

Lovallo earns honors for Cohasset

The Skippers' Christine Lovallo has been named a 2004 Mariner All-Scholastic in girls soccer..

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

The young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

After consulting with area coaches, though, we do feel secure that we chose the top 20 athletes in Marinerland for this honor:

Christine Lovallo - Sr. (Capt.)
Sweeper - Cohasset

Christine Lovallo

After being one of the South Shore League's best defenders last year, stepped up her game even more this year at a position her coach feels is the most important on the field…Played fullback (outside defender) last year, excelling there as well…Great marking and tackling skills…A two-time South Shore League All-Star…One of four senior co-captains for a team that made the state tournament for the third straight year…Has expressed interest in studying early childhood education, with thoughts on becoming a teacher…Cohasset head coach Deb Beal: "Christine has been studying that position for so long, it was just natural to put her in there when it opened up this year. It's something we're going to have to do again next year, figure out who is going to play that spot."

Alli Hubbard - Junior
Midfielder - Marshfield

This Eastern Mass. All-star was one of the most energetic players on the South Shore… Her 23 points on 12 goals, 11 assists led the Marshfield (18-2-4) team…Her gritty play in the offensive and defensive midfield helped lead the Lady Rams to the Div. 1 State Championship game, where they dropped a heartbreaking 1-0 decision to Nashoba…Gracefully gave up her offensive slot to defend All-American Catie Whelan, of Weymouth, in the Div. 1 South Sectional final and shut her down in a 2-1 victory…Hubbard cited that game as her most memorable…Helped Marshfield win the Old Colony League title (5-0-1) for the second-straight year and was the No. 1 All-star pick…Plays soccer year round with her Crusaders squad and plays basketball at MHS in the winter…She's on the Student Council and the National Honor Society. Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski: "Alli has incredible energy. She gave me 100 percent all the time. She'd do anything to win and to help the team."

Kim Giles - Senior (Capt.)
Stopper - Marshfield

A defensive stalwart throughout her career, Giles has played many different positions well, but shined at stopper this year…The third overall Old Colony League All-star pick, Giles was an essential part of a defense that allowed just four regular season goals…Her play in the backfield helped Marshfield (18-2-4) advance to the Div. 1 State Championship game…Despite playing in the back, Giles contributed to the offense tallying a pair of goals and seven assists for nine points…Strength, speed, and approach to the ball are among her greatest assets…Her play helped the Lady Rams capture the OCL title for the second-straight year (5-0-1) and she was picked third overall in the league All-star voting…Giles hopes to attend Bentley College and continue her soccer career. Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski: "She was a leader. At midseason we had a stretch of ties. She got into the huddle in a game and said, 'no more ties' and they listened. She's a super kid with a super personality."

Lyndsey McManus - Junior
Sweeper - Marshfield

Lyndsey McManus

An offensive midfielder last year, McManus was moved to sweeper when a teammate got injured… The move ended up being one of the highlights of the season as opponents rarely got by McManus…Another part of the defense that allowed only four goals in the regular season, McManus' strength and strong foot continually disrupted opposing offenses… Affectionately knick-named "Diesel", McManus took all of the Lady Rams' restarts and it was obvious why as she routinely booted the ball well beyond midfield…Because of that, McManus contributed offensively with eight assists and three goals for 11 points…Her play was instrumental in Marshfield playing in the Div. 1 State Championship and winning the Old Colony League title (5-0-1)…She was selected fifth overall in the league All-star voting. Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski: "Lyndsey is incredibly strong and I've told her she could kill seagulls with that foot. She's got a happy go lucky attitude and is a delight to coach. She could be a Div. 1 college player."

Nicole Hayward - Senior
Goalie - Marshfield

Nicole Hayward

The starting JV keeper last season, Hayward had some big shoes to fill on the varsity squad this season… Fortunately for the Lady Rams, she was up for the challenge…Hayward was the No. 1 keeper in the Old Colony League this season, allowing just four goals in 18 regular season games for an incredible 0.22 goals against average…She had 15 shutouts in those games, 13 straight to end the regular season…In the tourney, she upped that streak to 15-straight with shutouts over Barnstable (4-0) and Dartmouth (3-0)…Came up huge in the Div. 1 state semifinal, making a big stop on a last minute scoring attempt by Newton North in a 1-0 victory for her 18th shutout…Also made a pair of big saves against Nashoba, keeping the game scoreless in the first half of the Div. 1 State Championship game…Hayward attended goalie clinics in off-season last summer to improve her skills…She plans to continue her soccer career in college at either Curry, Westfield, Central Conn., Eastern Conn., Bridgewater State, or Salve Regina. Marshfield coach Fred Podbelski: "Nicole had not been tested at the varsity level until this year and ended up being one of the top goalies in the state. She did the work in the off-season, and really proved herself this year."

FROM ALL STARS, PAGE 19

Catie Whelan - Senior (Capt.) Forward - Weymouth

Catie Whelan

Where do you even begin? ... All-EMass, All-New England, All-American, All-World ... Named Division 1 New England Player of the Year ... The Larry Bird of the Bay State League, she tallied MVP honors in the Carey Division the past four years ... Scored 29 goals with 14 assists in leading Weymouth to the Div. 1 South Sectional championship game ... Finished her remarkable five-year varsity career with 84 goals and 57 assists ... Her hat trick against Oliver Ames in a 3-2 sudden death victory should be put in a time capsule ... Remarkable field vision and instinct made her a deadly passer at forward, adding to an arsenal that included power in each foot ... Played on two sore ankles down the stretch but never showed it ... Polite and humble to boot ... Will attend Northeastern University next fall ... Coach Ron Jamieson: "A player like her comes along maybe once in a coaching career." ... Her legend will live at Weymouth for a long, long time.

Kristen Moore - Junior Forward - Weymouth

Kristen Moore

Second fiddle never sounded so good ... Would have starred on most teams, but with Catie Whelan in the lineup, this superb outside right midfielder never received the media attention she deserved ... A Bay State League all-star, she scored 11 goals and added 12 assists ... Formed a deadly 1-2 combination with Whelan ... A tireless two-way player who could have scored more had she not been so valuable on defense ... Won more than her share of 50-50 balls, often igniting the offense ... Scored twice in a huge 3-1 victory over Newton North ... Her postseason play was cut short when she tore her ACL in South Sectional semifinal against Oliver Ames ... Her absence against Marshfield in the championship was obvious as the Wildcats managed just a single goal ... Coach Ron Jamieson: "She creates situations all over the field that gives us the advantage." ... Could be ready for stardom next season.

Kathleen Kennerley - Senior (Capt.) Sweeper - Weymouth

The heart at soul of the Weymouth defense at sweeper ... A chatterbox on the field, directing traffic like a player/ coach ...

Kathleen Kennerley

Bay State League all-star ... Great poise and power made her an intimidating force on the Weymouth end ... Had the skills of a forward but showed her true value in disrupting breakaways ... Played with a broken toe for the second half of the season ... A powerful leg allowed her to boot many restart balls, some as far as 50 yards ... Had four assists ... Coach Ron Jamieson: "She was the spiritual and vocal leader for us all season long." ... A fearless player who's leadership and inspiration will be difficult to replace.

Ashley Knight - Junior Forward - Rockland

Ashley Knight

Just a junior, Knight is already a four-year starter on the Rockland squad ... From the time she set foot on the field in the eighth grade, it was obvious Knight was going to have a long, prosperous career at RHS...An Eastern Mass. All-star this year, Knight led a three-pronged attack with her 38 points on 23 goals, 15 assists... She helped lead the Lady Bulldogs to an unbeaten regular season, going 16-0-2, a pair of ties with rival Duxbury the only blemishes...No. 2 in the Patriot League All-star voting, Knight paced the team to an 8-0 record in the PL West Div., winning the title...Came up big in a 3-0 quarterfinal victory over Duxbury in the Div. 2 South Sectional...In the next round, Rockland (17-1-2) fell to Wellesley, the eventual Div. 2 state champs...Dedicated her play this year to her mother, Cathy, who is battling breast cancer...Just a junior, Knight still has another year at RHS. Rockland co-coach Mike Phipps: "Ashley is an absolute force on the field. Every team tries to double team her and she goes above and beyond to make things happen. She sets goals for herself every year and no one can stop her."

Stacy Leonard - Junior Forward - Rockland

Stacy Leonard

After a breakout season last year found her leading the Patriot League in scoring, Leonard was second to only Knight with 37 points on 20 goals, 17 assists... This Eastern Mass. All-star was an essential part of the Lady Bulldogs' three-pronged attack, which produced 91 regular season goals, to 17 against...Found success even when double teamed, helping Rockland to an unbeaten year 16-0-2 (17-1-2 after tourney) and Patriot League West title (8-0)...Leonard was the No. 3 pick in the PL All-star voting, her second-straight nod...Also runs winter track at RHS...Just a junior, Leonard will return to both teams next year. Rockland co-coach Mike Phipps: "Stacy has very good speed and skill with the ball, and can take on anyone, anywhere. She had the ability to be in the right spot all the time."

Anne Foley - Senior (Capt.) Midfielder - Rockland

Anne Foley

It was a breakout season for this veteran player, who tallied 32 points this year, despite battling an injury sustained midway through the season...Foley was an essential part to the Lady Bulldogs' three-pronged offense, and was often the feeder at center midfield...Scored a big goal in Rockland's 3-0 victory over Duxbury in the Div. 2 South Sectional quarterfinals advancing to the semis, where the team recorded its only loss to eventual state champs, Wellesley...Foley helped key a season in which Rockland went 16-0-2 in the regular season (17-1-2 after the tourney)...A Patriot League All-star, Foley helped the Lady Bulldogs capture the West Div. title with an 8-0 record...Plans to play soccer at the collegiate level and has garnered interest at Wheaton and Boston College. Rockland coach Mike Phipps: "Anne is one of the top players in the area. She has all the skill in the world. She has the ability to score goals, but also set them up on a consistent basis. She's the total package."

Jenna Wells - Senior (Capt.) Sweeper - Abington

Jenna Wells

A two-time South Shore League All-star, Wells elevated her game this season and paced the Green Wave to an 11-3-2 year...As the defensive leader, Wells' slick play at sweeper helped Abington produce five shutouts this season while only allowing 13 goals...Speed and skills were among the Eastern Mass. All-star's best assets as the Green Wave finished second in the SSL with a 10-2 mark, their only losses coming against unbeaten rival Norwell, a Div. 3 South Sectional semifinalist...Had stellar games in two meetings with the Clippers, shutting down their highly productive offense in tight 2-1, 2-0 losses...Had a tremendous work rate, playing virtually every minute of every game for the last three years...Also a talented catcher on the AHS softball team, Wells hopes to continue her career in college. Abington coach Jeff Kent: "Jenna has excellent speed, very good foot skills, and sees the field extremely well. She aggressively controlled the game and was a big reason for our success this year. Great student and a great kid."

Hannah Rapalee - Senior Forward - Silver Lake

Hannah Rapalee

Second-team All-EMass ... Scored 10 goals and added seven assists as the Lakers made the tournament in their first year in the Patriot League ... Big and strong, she drew much attention from opposing coaches ... With Silver Lake losing depth following Pembroke's departure from the school district, she often found herself surrounded by defenders ... Deceptively quick, this three-time all star played both forward and midfielder and helped the Lakers rebound from a horrible start to finish second in the league. Coach Bubba Ashby: "She's just a big, intimidating player who knows how to find the net."

Jess Coleman - Senior (Capt.) Sweeper - Pembroke

Jess Coleman

A dominate force on defense at sweeper ... Helped a first-year program make it all the way to the tournament ... A Patriot League all-star, she was named team MVP by coach Kara Connerty ... A player whose contribution cannot be measured statistically ... Anchored a young defense that suffocated the Patriot League early in the season ... Strong, quick and smart ... Those who didn't get out of the way of her kicks wound up with "Wilson" tattooed on their foreheads ... If the split with Silver Lake had been delayed another year, she could have taken the Lakers a long, long way ... Pembroke's grateful that she helped its program get off on the right foot.

Meaghan Wiley - Sr. Midfield - Norwell

Meaghan Wiley

Graduates from Norwell High School third on the all-time girls soccer scoring list with 76 points... Had 32 points in 2004 (14 goals, 18 assists)...In her last game ever at NHS, notched a hat-trick in a 3-0 win over Medway in the Div. 3 South sectional quarterfinals...One of Norwell's three senior co-captains this year...A three-time South Shore League All-Star and Eastern Mass. All-Star...Talented two-way player; played sweeper as a sophomore...Took all re-start, free and corner kicks for the Clippers...Plays for the Cape Cod Crusaders, one of the top club teams in the country...An avid horseback rider who has won various regional and national awards...Will be attending University of New Hampshire next year, playing soccer and majoring in equine management...Norwell head coach Bruce Emerson: "Meaghan is the engine of our team; she makes us go. I think she's a leader. She's been our heart and soul, and that is a critical thing we will miss next year."

Jenn Guiney - Sr. Forward - Norwell

Jenn Guiney

Talented forward who scored 11 goals and had nine assists this season...South Shore League and Eastern Mass. All-Star this season...A great overall athlete who is also an excellent gymnast, earning an honorable mention for Mariner All-Scholastic in that sport last year...A physical presence from her center forward position...Very good speed; often runs past her marker to get to a loose ball... Developed into an adept passer, as her assist totals increased each year she played varsity...Has expressed interest in a future related to athletics, whether it be sports management, business, or medicine...Norwell head coach Bruce Emerson: "In addition to scoring 11 goals, Jenn was a really great leader for me this year. She was the free spirit of the team. She also worked very hard, and just came to play every game."

Jackie Vickers - Jr. Forward - Norwell

Simply blew away the competition for the EMass scoring title... Notched 59 points (39 goals, 20 assists) this season...Has already broken the school's girls soccer scoring record with 103 points (70 goals, 33 assists), with one year to go...Previous record had been 79 points...Improved immensely from 2003, when she was still good enough to make that year's Mariner All-Scholastic team...Possesses remarkable speed and dribbling ability, which she showed off throughout the year, routinely beating double teams for goals...Scored five goals in a game twice this year...Had four goals in the team's first-round playoff win over Carver...A very tough athlete who has battled a few injuries over the last two years...Has been elected co-captain for next year's team...Will be playing varsity basketball this winter...Norwell head coach Bruce Emerson: "Jackie is just a true weapon. It is rare for her to get control of the ball in the box and not score. Her work ethic is phenomenal. She is a very hard worker."

Kacey Weafer - Sr. (Capt.) Midfield - Scituate

Kacey Weafer

A great athlete who also runs track for Scituate High School... Among the Patriot League leaders in scoring this year with 18 points (12 goals, six assists)...A three-time Patriot League All-Star...Also lead her team in scoring for all three of those years...Plays for the Cape Cod Crusaders club team...A Mariner All-Scholastic last year as well... A sprinter for the SHS track team; qualified last year for the national high school competition in the 55m race...Interested in studying early childhood education and becoming a teacher...Looking at various colleges, for either soccer or track

Amy Caldwell - So. Forward - Braintree

For second year in a row, runner-up for the Bay State League MVP award (both times finishing behind Weymouth's Catie Whelan)... An obvious favorite for the award in 2005...League and Eastern Mass. All-Star...Had 38 points (22 goals, 16 assists) this season to put her among the EMass leaders...Contributed to all three goals in team's 4-3 first-round tournament loss to Notre Dame, scoring two and assisting on the other...A magnificent dribbler who also defends, passes, and shoots extremely well...Recently tried out for the national U-16 team...With 70 career points, already holds the BHS all-time girls soccer scoring record, with two years to go...Braintree head coach Fred Marks: "Amy is the motor of our team. She never stops playing and is really fun to watch. She's a great kid and a really hard worker. Her instincts are amazing, and you can't get any more tenacious than she is."

Kara Ruggiero - So. Defender - Braintree

Completed her second year as a star in the middle of Braintree's defense...A Bay State League All-Star... Member of the South Coast Scorpions U-16 club team...Very talented with great stamina...Also did her share of scoring, notching six goals this season from her defender position...scored in critical league games against Weymouth, Wellesley, Newton North and Needham...Braintree head coach Fred Marks: "Kara is just as good as any player I've had. She is a very skillful player. She plays every minute of every game, and is a very smart soccer player."

COASTAL STARS REPORT

Mite C1

The Mite C1 team played to a 3-3 tie against Weymouth on Saturday. Goal tender Joe Deyeso played a great game, saving many tough shots.

Daniel Cronin, Ben Swim and Jake Moore moved the puck and kept the pressure on the Weymouth defense. Davis Cronin and Sean Feeney were excellent on defense, helping to deflect some tough Weymouth shooters.

Weymouth scored first and the Stars came back with a great effort led by Right Wing Tommy Prendergast, he scored on a great breakaway with a great top shelf shot.

Chris Bertone, Tyler McKinnon, and Cameron Mastrangelo were all awesome on offense too, they had many shots, but a tough Weymouth defense held the trio scoreless. Jake Moore and Joe Proctor, who pulled-double shifts, did a great job on defense and held off the Weymouth attack.

Weymouth scored 2 times fast, which got the Stars going and ready to roll. Liam Manning, Jack Conlon and Tommy Prendergast moved the puck into the Weymouth zone, and with a shot and score by Jack Conlon, the Stars were down by 1. Hugh Healey and Jack Shaw kept Weymouth from scoring again. Tommy Prendergast got a hold of the puck and skated past the Defense adding the third and tying goal.

The boys did a great job and kept parents and coaches on the edge of their seats.

Bantam C1

The Coastal Stars Bantam C1 team played a solid game Sunday evening against Milton and skated away with a hard fought 5-3 victory. Skating well in both directions, the Stars controlled the puck through most of the game. Winger Dan Joyce started the scoring for the Stars at 13:50 of the first period. Paul Pozniak fed Joyce with a terrific pass and earned an assist. Also contributing on this line throughout game was Thomas Lemaire.

Brian Meehan put the Stars up 2-0 early in the second period with a nice wrist shot from in front of the net. Connor Mahoney and Josh Archibald earned assists on the Meehan's first goal. Milton scored its first goal near the mid-point of the second period but the Stars kept the pressure on. Meehan collected his second goal of the evening on a beautiful pass from Connor Mahoney.

Archibald set the play up and earned his second assist also. Milton kept the pressure on, however, and scored its second goal with 1:50 remaining in the second period. Not to be outdone, however, the Stars made it 4-2 with one second remaining in the second period when Josh Archibald netted his first goal and third point of the night with a great wrist shot into the top corner of the net. Mahoney earned his third point with an assist on the Stars' fourth goal. With the score 4-2, the Stars defense really went to work, frequently stopping Milton at the blue line. Making key plays on defense throughout the game were the lines of Connor Ofsthun and Gerry Barry, Rob Megnia and Chris Fazzina, and John Glynn and Patrick Barry.

Midway through the third period, the Stars' Andrew Bell collected a loose puck at mid-ice and streaked passed the Milton defender to score an unassisted break-away goal, which put the Stars up 5-2. Wingers Gordan Smith and Cory Barrow also played very well throughout the game. Milton managed a final goal with one second remaining in the game to make the score 5-3. Stars' goalie John Carrigg had another great game in net and collected his sixth win of the season.

Squirt C4

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-4 team continued their four-game winning streak, by defeating the Hawks of Whitman/Hanson/Kinston 5-2 last weekend.

Forward Ryan Melia opened the scoring for the Stars. Melia took a centering pass from line mate Andrew Tautkus and fired a quick shot that snuck past the Hawks netminder's stick. The Hawks tied it up at 14:00 into the first period by lifting one up over the shoulder of Stars goalie Max Hemingway. The Stars regained their lead when defensemen Jonathan Gardner pushed the puck into the Hawks' zone from inside the blue line. Andrew Tautkus gathered the puck, turned and fired one between the Hawks' goalie's legs, making it 2-1 Stars at the end of the 1st period.

Early in the second period, Stars leading scorer James Daley broke away into the Hawks zone and fired an unstoppable wrist shot into the Hawks net, widening the Stars lead to 3-1. Defenseman Gardner came up big again in the second when he brought the puck into the Hawks zone and put the puck up in the air, sailing past the Hawks' netminder. The Hawks retaliated with five minutes left in the second period. The Hawks forward blasted one at the Stars net. Hemingway made the save and shoved the puck out to the right side. A Hawk, stalking the crease, gathered the puck and slid it past Hemingway, making the score 4-2 at the end of the second period.

During the third period, the Stars held onto their lead by winning the battles on both ends of the ice and by some stunning saves by Hemingway. Defenders RJ Neuls, Thomas Coyne, Liam Rose and Jonathan Gardner shut the Hawks down on repeated drives to the net. Forwards Michael McPartlin, Nicholas Craig, Seamus Feeney and Tristan Wiggin kept the pressure on, controlling the puck in the Hawks zone.

Matthew Tautkus concluded the scoring for the Stars at the end of the third period when Daley fed him a pass from behind the Hawks net. Tautkus' goal secured the 5-2 win for the Stars.

Mite A

The Coastal Stars Mite A team gave all of those in the stands last Saturday a lesson in how it takes an entire team to win a game when they faced a tough Brockton team and an even tougher set of referees. All of the boys came to play hard on Saturday and more than a few of them had to spend time in the penalty box for there aggressive style of play.

The defensemen of Matt Burchill, Garrett Leahy, Martin Buckley, Kenny Parnell and Charlie Blackington were successful in killing eight Brockton power plays throughout the game. All three lines of offense were involved in keeping the puck in the Brockton end during these power plays and a player from each offensive line scored a goal in this 3-2 victory. The Stars got on the board first when five minutes into the game Colin MacDonald hit the rebound off of a Patrick Holway shot past a solid Brockton goalie. Just two minutes later Brockton answered with its first goal and with just 25 seconds left in the first period scored again to go up 2-1.

David Cataldo scored the tying goal three minutes into the second period by sneaking one low between the goalie's pads. The game became a real nail biter at this point, with both teams skating harder and hustling after the puck, yet neither one scoring. Stars' goalie Jeff Nagle robbed a Brockton player of a hat trick with an excellent glove save halfway through the second period. The Brockton defense and goalie were able to shut down the Stars' offense for the remainder of the second period and most of the third.

With only 2:30 left in the game, Sam Topham skated back on the ice after serving the sixth penalty of the game for the Stars and quickly got back into position just in time to lift a rebound off of a Kenny Parnell shot over the goalie's shoulder. The Stars were ahead 3-2. However, just thirty seconds later, the Stars were handed there seventh and eighth penalties simultaneously. Brockton had a 5 on 3 advantage for one and a half minutes of the final two minutes of the game. Despite this disadvantage, not only did the Stars keep Brockton from scoring, they managed to keep the puck in the Brockton's end for more than half the penalty. This is just one of the examples of how defense can win games. All of the friends and family in the stands were relieved to hear the final buzzer of the game. The Mite A's are now 6-1-1 overall and face a competitive Canton Mite A team on Sunday in Canton.

Squirt C1

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-1 team continued their winning ways Saturday beating WHK-3, 9-0, to improve to 6-1-1 on the season.

Max Montgomery got things started early when he buried the first of his 4 goals on a nice pass from Adam Cowie-Haskell. Five minutes later Jack Condon got into the action when he scored off a pass from defenseman Chris Lund. Jason Tolman made it 3-0 with an absolute rocket of a wrist shot off a feed from Tucker Welch. Mark McGoldrick had a huge game scoring the 4th goal early in the second period and adding three assists while playing great defense with partner Jack Sullivan.

Robbie Bertone and Chris Lund made up the other pair of solid defensemen helping goalie Michael Soucy to his second shut-out of the season. Brian Craig scored on a nice hustle play when McGoldrick sent him in on a breakaway late in the second period. Kevin Friedland and Sam Asnault added solid efforts playing great two-way hockey on the second line. Chase Sheldon finished out the scoring on a nice bang - bang play halfway through the third period. The game puck went to center Jason Tolman for his great hustle up and down the ice, making several great plays back-checking and scoring a goal on a shot that had the whole bench buzzing. Next up for the Squirt C-1 team is Weymouth-1 on Friday morning. GO STARS!

Mite C2

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 Hockey team skated to a 0 - 0 tie versus the Weymouth Mite C3 team Saturday at the Devine Rink in Dorchester. The Stars were led by Goalie Chris Phillips who recorded his second straight shutout and Shaelyn Tobin who played an outstanding defensive game.

Although no goals were scored, the Stars had several good scoring chances. JoJo Carbone hit the post on scoring chances in the first and second period while Kyle Bowman's breakaway chance in the second period was thwarted as time expired.

Gunner Mackenzie, Mats Nelson, Derek Benson, and Russel Santos kept the pressure on Weymouth in the third period with Gunner and Derek each having shots on net. Evan Antonuccio, Seamus Ryan, Harrison Sheldon, and Mathew Johnson played an aggressive game with Harrison making two good plays at center ice to keep Weymouth out of the Stars zone. Robert Bothwell and Brian Mathews both had strong games as well playing double shifts throughout most of the game.

PeeWee C3

The Coastal Stars PeeWee C-3 team soared to new heights scoring another victory against Duxbury. The Stars won 3-0. While the pressure was on, goalkeeper Pat Healey kept his cool. Healey had great defense Carter Denton, Tanner Dailey, Mike O'Halloran, and Jack Nelson.

In the first period, the 1st goal was scored by Joe Fitzsimmons with 2 minutes left with help from Chris Roberts. Kevin Thomas and Connor Queenan had many attempts to score.

In the second period there were many attempts to score by Austin Hale. Connor Queenan scored with 5 minutes left on the clock.

In the third and most aggressive period, Eric Bartucca and Sam Labo stopped Duxbury dead in their tracks. Kevin Thomas scored the 3rd and final goal with help from Connor Queenan. The Stars play again next Saturday in Pembroke.

The Coastal Stars PeeWee C-3 team posted another victory this weekend against W/H/K. The Stars won 5-2.

While the pressure was on goaltender Pat Healey, he had a lot of help from defense Carter Denton, Tanner Dailey, Jack Nelson, and Mike O'Hallorn.

The first goal was made by Joe Fitzsimmons with a pass from Eric Bartucca. The 2nd goal came from Sam Leahy with a pass from Connor Queenan. The 3rd goal was made by Kevin Thomas with help from Sam Leahy. After another try Kevin Thomas scored the 4th goal. Austin Hale who was left wing and Chris Roberts who was right wing also had many attempts to make goals.

In the 3rd period, the Stars had 2 goals scored against them but that didn't stop them. Eric Bartucca with help from Sam Leahy scored the 5th and final goal.

The Stars play again this Saturday in Pembroke.

FROM STARS, PAGE 21

take advantage of any mistake. EJ Culhane was a defensive stalwart for the Stars, forcing an early 3-on-1 break to the outside and playing solidly throughout.

Alec Hurd was strong in net with 19 saves, several of them on breakaway attempts or in close shots. The Stars struck first at 7. Chris Carpenter stole the puck at the left circle and flipped it to Neil Conway. Conway carried to the front of the net and tucked the puck under the pads. But the lead was short-lived, as the Seahawks scored on a breakaway a half minute later, and took the lead on a rebound with three minutes left in the period.

The Stars knotted the score with forty seconds left. Kevin McDougall blocked a clearing attempt at the right point and fired a pass to Conway in the center slot. Conway found an open spot between the pads. The goal carried the Stars into the second. Jonathan Spitz bolted off the bench on a shift change and dove to bust a Seahawk break. Patrick Burchill passed from the boards to Chris Carpenter, who found Steven Harrington on the right side of the net, but Harrington was robbed.

The Seahawks then tallied four unanswered goals, scoring on breakaways and rebounds for a 6-2 lead midway through the second. The Stars worked hard to get back. DJ Evans kept the puck in to Mike Carbone, who passed to Patrick Burchill in front, but the backhander was saved. Chris Carpenter passed cross ice to Jake Durkin, but his shot was stopped.

Kevin McDougall found John Ryan at the right post, but he was denied. Early in the third, Durkin snaked his way through traffic from the Seahawk blue line and scored inside the right post. Sensing a comeback, the Stars pressed the attack. Mike Carbone fed Neil Conway in front, but he was robbed. Trevor Salmon's break was saved. The Seahawks scored on another break with 3:12 left, and the Stars were denied one last time when Neil Conway's break was saved.

Mite B

After seven weeks of near flawless perfection, the undefeated Costal Stars Mite B team suffered their first loss of the season to a feisty Norwood Mohawk team.

The final score of 5-1 was not indicative of this contest. Declan Lahey set the tone early with a center ice collision that would make Rodney Harrison proud. This clean hit left the puck for Robert Reidy who didn't waste any time gaining the blue line and then feathering a pass to the speedy Bryan Bowman. Bowman seized the opportunity and clanged a one timer off the right post. Norwood was quick to claim the rebound and started a rush on Stars goalie Patrick Graham. Graham, making his debut between the pipes, made an incredible kick save. The rebound took a fortuitous Norwood bounce and the puck landed in the slot where the Norwood center zipped a shot over the out stretched glove of Graham. Tucker Ambrose won the ensuing face off and sent a lead pass to James (The Crusher) Hussey. Hussey carried the puck into the offensive zone and whistled a pass to Curtis Golden. The "Golden Boy" rifled a wrist shot that found the glove of the Norwood goalie. At the close of the first period, the Norwood Mohawks swarmed the Stars and at 2:09 they took a 2-0 advantage.

The Stars coaching staff gave an inspirational speech at the intermission and they woke a sleeping giant - a giant named Jeffrey Powers! Powers had been sidelined with a broken wing and he missed the first 7 weeks of the season. Powers didn't show any signs of rust when at 11:05 of the 2nd period he carried the puck coast to coast and roofed a riser past the Mohawk goalie.

The 3rd period displayed awesome two way hockey from Joey Redfearn and Kal Maier (team leaders on and off the ice). Both players exhibited "smart hockey" in the defensive end and created tremendous offensive opportunities. With 5 minutes remaining in the game, the Stars leading scorer, Matt Doyle, transitioned from defense to offense and had several scoring bids. Unfortunately, these were rejected by the "Red Hot" Mohawk goalie. With 3:09 left in the 3rd, Sam Rice tried to erase his father's (Circa 1970's) nightmarish losses to Norwood, only to be denied a score, despite his multiple shots on net. And speaking of the 70's, Jack Evitts and Brendan Evitts aggressive "old style hockey" effort was reminiscent of the Hull brothers tenacious play of that era. The brothers had several scoring bids but could not score on the young Ken Dryden in the Mohawk net.

With 1:45 remaining in the contest, Aidan Beresford made a magical back hand pass to his wing man Michael Lund. Lund battled two defenders in the crease and sent a shot "5 hole" that found the back of the net, only to be waved off by a delayed whistle. Aiden Beresford was awarded the game puck for his hustle and unselfish passing efforts.

Counting on the kids

Bryant said after his second practice last week that he would have a young team, and he wasn't kidding: there are no seniors.

And while the coach acknowledges there will be a growing and learning process with his team, he is confident it will work out in the end.

"I think these kids fit my style of play," Bryant said. "We want to get up and down the court, we want to fast break a lot, and we're going to run a lot of motion on offense."

Juniors Will Pinkus, Zach Etkind and Dan McCarthy, and sophomores Nick Zappalo, Dan Trendowitz and John McCarthy comprise the rest of the roster.

Dan McCarthy, Etkind and Pinkus are all big men whom Bryant is relying on to provide depth up front, rebounding and interior defense. Trendowitz will see time at the point guard position, while Zappalo and John McCarthy are both swing men who can hit the jumper and handle the basketball.

The boys season starts on Tuesday with the South Shore Voke Tech tournament against Avon at 3:30, at SSVT in Hanover.

of team."

Following the loss of Faber, the Lady Skippers face serious rebuilding in the center position. Many observers hope junior Mia Leib-Lappen will establish a strong presence in the paint.

Salerno also holds senior co-captains Casey Anderson and Nicole Whitney in high regard.

"They provide good leadership and serve as excellent role models," he said.

When asked to compare last year's record to this season, Captain Casey Anderson replied, "No question. Last year our record proved exceptional. I see the pressure as somewhat of a burden. However, I feel it will only make us work harder."

In the first week of practice, the squad worked on the basics, including defense and conditioning.

"We are not a muscle team," Salerno said. "If we can't mix it up in the paint, we need to take control with our fast breaks and constant defensive pressure."

Levangie and Salerno have also pointed to juniors Chelsea Grossman and Katie James as key players. Sophomores to watch this year include Lacey Richardson, Michelle Madge, and Lara Novak.

The 2004-05 Skippers will start their season off with a scrimmage today versus Notre Dame in the Cohasset High School gym. The following week, the South Shore Voke Tech Tournament will mark the official beginning of what is hopefully another successful season.

Travel basketball report update

FROM BASKETBALL, PAGE 19

Doonan each contributed four points in the 34-20 loss. Valentine was a presence on the defensive boards. In their next outing, the 7th graders faced the run 'n gun Taunton squad. With exceptional speed and strong shooting, the Taunton squad took the lead in the game and never relinquished it. Scoring was balanced for Cohasset from Davis, Doonan, Charles and Maher.

In Sunday's action, the boys faced Whitman. The game was a give and go, trading basket for basket.

Cohasset had great fast break opportunities; however, the basketball gods were not with them, as many a ball did not sink through the net. Will Wise had the hot hand for Cohasset, scoring on both fastbreaks and open 12 foot jumpers. Dana Valentine controlled the boards and shared the low post with Taylor McQuade, Dean Driscoll and Chris Brown.

The 6th grade team is coached by Ed Seksay, with Jay Monaco and Joe Campbell assisting. Robert Jones, Derek Youngman, Ben "Tuggy" Campbell, Gabe Seksay, Sam Richardson, Robbie Hill, Jack Carrier, Drew Cobin, Anders Goetz , Eric Wasel and Mike Monaco played for the blue & white.

The 6th graders came out strong against Abington and led throughout most of the game, giving up the lead late in the second half for the first time. All players played with heart and hustle, diving on the floor for loose balls. Seksay dominated the boards, both offensively and defensively, providing many second shot opportunities for Cohasset. Cohasset moved the ball up court effectively in the first half, scoring many fast break points.

In the second half, Abington adjusted and slowly got back into the game. Jones led all scorers with 17 points, scoring from the inside and the outside. Cohasset eventually lost, 41-38.

In exciting action versus Taunton, the boys applied early defensive pressure, preventing Taunton from scoring for the first eleven minutes of the game. Quick hands and strong defensive pressure by guards Anders Goetz, Robbie Hill, Mike Monaco and Derek Youngman forced several Taunton turnovers. Cohasset scored in great team fashion. A Jones drive and dump to Carrier produced two points, a Cohen feed to Wasel down low converted to two points. Wasel and Carrier dominated the boards on both ends of the court.

After the win, Coach Seksay commented that "this was a great, really great team effort."

That team effort carried over to Sunday's action versus Whitman, where the bigger and faster Cohasset boys earned a decisive win. Once again all team members contributed. Big men Seksay and Wasel controlled the boards and the rotating team of guards kept the pressure on the Whitman ball handlers. Jones, Campbell, Richardson and Youngman kept feeding the ball to the big men down low who converted to baskets. Jones' passes can only be described as poetry in motion, selflessly passing the ball to the open man.

Cohasset finished the weekend at 2-1.

Check out www.cohasset-basketball.com for all Cohasset basketball information.

Cohasset swimmers and divers enjoy role as champs!

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

Towns bask in the glow of recently played Thanksgiving football rivalries. Wrestling, gymnastics, basketball and indoor activities are ongoing as winter approaches. But nothing has diminished the glow and excitement of the Cohasset Swim and Diving Team which won the championship of the South Shore Swim League held last summer at Wheaton College.

Members of the team and their parents gathered recently to chat about the winning experience and what it has meant to those who participated. Gathered in a restaurant sharing pizzas, the team members graciously accepted words of congratulations from other patrons who spotted their impressive silver trophy on the table. Being the "pride of Cohasset" is a role these young athletes accepted with gratitude, delight and true sportsmanship.

Jillian Crawford, 10, said of her beginnings in the diving world, "I really just wanted to try it. I found out I liked it and wanted to work to get better and better." Carly Salerno, 13, added, "When it's done right, diving looks easy, but it takes so much practice to get to that point." She continued," Things like timing, distance, coordination, even little things like pointing toes right are all important."

"Practice makes perfect" is only one of the mottoes of this group of accomplished youngsters. They offered other positive ideas that help them to perform exceptionally. "Try it again", "support each other", and "have fun" are only a few of the common themes to which the teammates referred as they discussed their success.

"It's really fun to be part of this group. We have a great time together and we are competing in a sport we love."
— Betsy Crawford, 12

"It's really fun to be part of this group", shared Betsy Crawford, 12. "We have a great time together and we are competing in a sport we love."

Sean Mc Kenna, 10, addressed the potential dangers in diving and how he and his team have learned to overcome jitters before or during a competition. "Diving is 'mind over matter'. You just concentrate on each part of the dive and you're OK."

Much work is necessary to achieve the precision and skill to win a championship. The divers practice several days a week during the eight-week summer program. Andy Mc Kenna, 12 said he deals with the short diving season without difficulty. "It's easy to pick up again. You know where you left off and once your muscles are used to working in certain ways, you can continue with the different dives."

Winning this title is no small feat. Decisions are made by certified judges and scoring is calculated like that of adult competitions. Although performances are individual, they are all an important contribution to the team's capture of the title.

There can be pain, discomfort and disappointment as youngsters learn this sport and train for competition. Landing in the water on the face or back can cause a stinging soreness. Malfunctions of the diving board or errors in timing can cause injuries and aches. Determination and perseverance are necessary to reach the competitive level.

Mentioned by the entire team was the unfailing support of coaches, Haley Wojtasiski and Charlotte Sida. The divers said these leaders motivate them to keep trying, to encourage each other and to remember to have a great time.

Reliving the victorious moment, the teammates described their feelings when they learned they were the champs. "We waited for the announcement, and when we knew we won, we all jumped and screamed!" said Michela Valente, 12. Carly and Jillian happily described the elation of the members. "Andy (Mc Kenna) went over and kissed the trophy," they exclaimed. "Then we all passed it around to share the win with each other."

Michela spoke with enthusiasm about the attitude and character of the group. "We have Team Spirit!" she said with a big smile. "We cheer for each other, we try to laugh about things and we care about how everyone performs. If someone fails a dive, we are all supportive. We also congratulate other teams for good performances and we are concerned if someone is having a hard time or has an injury."

Participation in this competitive sport will have lasting significance in life according to the youngsters. Wes Medwid, 13 said, "Diving gives us a chance to take risks, but in a safe way." He continued, "We learn to be confident, determined and to handle pressure."

In addition to these traits that can influence attitudes and avenues of a lifetime, some diving athletes will list achievements in the sport on scholarship applications for advanced education.

The prized silver trophy will be on display in the Middle School, Deer Hill School for periods throughout the academic year. Upon viewing the trophy, fellow students and residents will be reminded to compliment this exceptionally talented group of young people and thank them for bringing this prestigious honor to town. Their hard work, determination and spirit of good sportsmanship have represented the community in a manner to make Cohasset proud.

AP Scholar awards

Twenty-one students at Cohasset High School have earned the designation of AP Scholar by the College Board in recognition of their exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement Program (AP) Exams.

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program offers students the opportunity to take challenging college-level courses while still in high school, and to receive college credit, advanced placement, or both for successful performance on the AP Exams. About 17 percent of the more than one million high school students in almost 15,000 secondary schools worldwide who took AP Exams performed at a sufficiently high level to merit the recognition of AP Scholar.

Students took AP Exams in May 2004 after completing challenging college-level courses at their high schools. The College Board recognizes several levels of achievement based on student's performance on AP exams.

- Six students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.5 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams. These students are Erik Belz, Allison Earon, Tess Foley, Jessie Guild, Brittany Novak and Dan Tarpey.
- Six students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on four or more of these exams. These students are Christopher Bilodeau, Andrew Busk, Rachel Doyle, Andrew Musto, Elisa Ninde-Jerome and Sarah Noble.
- Nine students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Examinations, with grades of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are Jennifer Buckley, Jonathan Downing, Jonathan Grimm, Elizabeth Meilkleham, Toby Norman, Christen Reardon, Elizabeth Stone, Domenic Strazzulla, and Phillip Strazzulla.

Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit, advanced placement, or both based on successful performance on the AP Exams. More than 1,400 institutions award a full year's credit (sophomore standing) to students presenting a sufficient number of qualifying grades. Thirty-four AP Exams are offered in a wide variety of subject areas, each consisting of multiple-choice and free-response (essay or problem-solving) questions (except for the Studio Art exam which evaluates students' original artwork).

IT'S HAPPENING

Hear holiday carols of the season

The Unicorn Singers directed by Margo Euler presents "WASSAIL! A Concert of Christmas Carols," Friday, Dec. 10 at 8 p.m. at St. John's in Hingham and Sunday, Dec. 12 at 4 p.m. at First Parish in Cohasset. Included will be carols from long ago, as set by modern composers; carols from the pop, jazz and gospel tradition; carols by talented soloists and carols for everyone to sing together.

Hear them perform together as a chamber choir in exquisite choral arrangements. Hear them in trios and quartets in costume, serenading you from the four corners of the room. Hear them bring to life the much-loved music of this joyful time of year. Come to listen and to sing, and to get in the spirit of the season.

First Parish is holding a special reception in their newly renovated Parish House following the concert so that the musicians and concert-goers can visit and enjoy the festive nature of the event together.

Members of the Unicorn Singers, now in its 26th season of making music on the South Shore, come from 10 surrounding communities, meeting weekly at House of Prayer in Hingham. Tickets are $15 at the door and $12 in advance at First Parish's office by calling (781) 383-1100.

Christmas Concert

St. Paul's Church of Hingham will present a Christmas Concert on Sunday evening, Dec. 12, at 7 p.m. in the upper sanctuary. The "Joyous Sounds of Christmas" will feature an hour of both traditional and non traditional carols. In concert will be the adult choir and life team musicians. The public is cordially invited to attend, admission is free.

Alzheimer's support group meets Dec. 15

On Wednesday, Dec. 15, the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore will host a talk by Eugene I. Brennan, president of Senior Care Financial on "Understanding your Options". The meeting will be held at 7:30 in the Hingham senior Center, 220 Central St.

Brennan specializes in assisting elders in making informed decisions on managing Medicaid application for long-term care. A question and answer time will follow his presentation. Bring your questions or concerns about applying for Masshealth (Medicaid) benefits or the nursing home application process.

ADSGSS monthly meetings are free and open to the anyone interested in learning more about Alzheimer's disease. For more information, call JoAnn Mitchell at 781-749-5417 or Ruth Scully at 781-740-2426.

Respite care for your patient is available for this meeting date Dec. 15, at Harbor House Day Health Center of Hingham. Call Pat Levy, director for details and to make a reservation at 781-749-4774.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 04E0105-PP1

To Dane Williams of Marblehead in the County of Essex, respondent; and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Eleanor Herrmann, General Partner of Hermann Associates, Limited Partnership, a limited partnership established under the laws of the State of California of San Mateo in the State of California representing that she holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows:
A certain parcel of land together with the buildings thereon situated on King Street in said Cohasset and containing about a half (1/2) acre of land, more or less, and being shown as Calvin's Orchard, and bounded
Northeasterly by said King Street;
Southwesterly by land formerly of John Burbank, Jr.;
Southwesterly by a stone wall separating the premises from property belonging formerly to John Bubank;
Northwesterly by other land formerly of John Burbank.
Containing approximately 22,850 square feet of land, more or less.

setting forth that she desires that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than four hundred ten thousand ($410,000.00) dollars, and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate & Family Court, 35 Shawmut Road, Canton, MA 02021 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the nineteenth day of January 2005, the return day of this citation.

OBITUARIES

Dr. William A. Corriveau, D.M.D.

Dr. William A. Corriveau, D.M.D.

Dr. William Arthur Corriveau, 79, of Cohasset, formerly of Springfield, died suddenly Dec. 1, 2004, at Milton Hospital.

Dr. Corriveau graduated from Classical High School in Springfield, and Tufts Dental School, Tufts University, Phi Beta Kappa.

He served in the U.S. Army during World War II throughout the European Theatre Operations. Sergeant Corriveau fought in the Battle of the Bulge with the 87th Infantry Division earning the Combat Infantrymen's Badge and the Bronze Star medal. He entered Paris, France on VE Day. Active duty tours following the war included service at Washington DC and Fort Benning, GA. He continued serving in the U.S. Army Reserve, retiring in 1985 at the rank of Colonel with 33 years total service.

He operated his dental practice in Springfield, from 1954 to 1987.

Dr. Corriveau's volunteer activities included the Boy Scouts of America, Scoutmaster, Troop 18, in Springfield, the Lions Club and the Springfield Board of Health.

He was an active member of Catholic Church, at St. Anthony's, Cohasset.

He enjoyed all professional sports, played tennis, enjoyed gardening and regular travel to Europe, Florida, the Western United States, Canada, and Alaska.

Dr. Corriveau leaves his wife, Elizabeth Steele Corriveau, Cohasset; two sons James, of Watertown, N.Y. and Richard, of Chicopee; a daughter Caroline, Watertown, N,Y,; three stepsons Matt Steele and Dan Steele, both of Cohasset, and Jack Steele, of Swampscott; a brother Joseph V. of South Carolina.; 12 grandchildren and a great-grandson. His first wife Ramona Lopez Corriveau died in 1975.

A grave side service was held Dec. 6, at Bourne National Cemetery, Cape Cod.

Arrangements were handled by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Boy Scouts of America and any Veteran's Organization.

Lucille F. McLoughlin

Lucille Fusz (O'Malley) McLoughlin, 96, of Cohasset, and formerly of Brooklyn, NY. died Dec. 1, 2004 at home.

A 1929 graduate of Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, Mrs. McLoughlin was a daily communicant at St. Saviour in Brooklyn and St. Anthony, Cohasset.

She was the Regent of the Fort Greene Chapter of the DAR and National Chairwoman of the Motion Picture Committee of the DAR.

She enjoyed bridge, traveling, reading, golf, her many deep friendships and her faithful dachshunds. A tree she planted on First Street in park Slope still thrives.

Widow of Maurice E. McLoughlin, she leaves two daughters, Lucille Hornby of Sergeantsville, N.J., Elizabeth of San Francisco; two sisters, Genevieve Good of Cohasset and Celeste Wilhelmy of Bethesda, Md., eight grandchildren and many nieces and nephews. She was the mother of the late Martha, Maurice E. Jr. of London, and Paul T. of New York

She was the sister of the late Patricia Tirrell.

A Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

The Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, Scituate, handled the arrangements.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Norwell Visiting Nurses Association 320 Washington St., Norwell MA 02601.

Holiday decorating with fresh greens and plants

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

Eastern red cedars, actually members of the Juniper family, are a personal favorite for holiday decorations. Their dense branches, featuring scaly green leaves or needles that may be tinged with blue, copper, or gold, provide marvelous texture and maintain their appearance throughout the holiday season even without moisture. Female members of the species often bear clusters of small icy blue berries that further enhance arrangements. Birds disperse these berries enabling the hardy evergreens to quickly colonize disturbed ground throughout our area.

Eastern white pines, with their long, soft green needles, boasting tints of blue and silver, are abundant in our woodlands and their long branches make them ideal for wiring together as the basis for garlands and swags to adorn fences, doorways and mantels. Enduring foliage, delightful fragrance, and decorative cones are additional benefits to pine boughs but their tendency to ooze sap may be a drawback. Wear gloves during the collection process, place cuttings in a separate bag, and take care to protect surfaces from the pitch.

Stunning stands of brilliant red winterberry, our native deciduous holly, are easy to spot in swampy locales and add a festive touch to arrangements of mixed greens. Clusters of ruby-tinted wild rose hips produced by the omnipresent invasive multiflora rose bushes are another source of vibrant color. These thorny fruits make elegant wreaths when wired in bunches on a circular frame or add colorful highlights to decorations. Queen Anne's Lace, milkweed pods and finely-textured branches may be gathered, sprayed gold, silver or white and sprinkled with glitter, while tacky, to add a little sparkle to holiday designs.

A mature landscape can offer a wealth of materials suitable for holiday decorating. Each year, I plant new trees and shrubs which serve the dual purpose of providing multiple seasons of interest in the landscape and excellent cut foliage or berries for interior designs. Although the month of December may not be the ideal month for pruning, I delay clipping many of these evergreens until the holiday season and fill several bags with branches for use in wreaths, swags and arrangements. None of the trees or shrubs I regularly snip for the holidays seems to have suffered over the years, and nearly all are thicker and fuller once new growth commences the following season.

Stunning stands of brilliant red winterberry, our native deciduous holly, are easy to spot in swampy locales and add a festive touch to arrangements of mixed greens.

A traditional foundation shrub, the family of yews (Taxus) ranks high among the most durable and useful shrubs for both landscaping and decorating needs. Available in both prostrate and upright forms, their narrow, flat deep green needles last for weeks once cut and provide excellent contrast to other greens. Shade tolerant, these shrubs respond to regular shearing and shaping. Unfortunate-ly, yews are often a magnet for foraging deer. Several years ago, I watched several of these elegant but destructive beasts dismantle an entire arrangement of mixed greens in my whiskey barrel in their quest for the yew branches that were part of the display.

Members of the false cypress family (Chamaecyparis) are personal favorites for landscaping. Similar in appearance to members of the Arborvitae (Thuja) family, false cypress display flattened scaled needles and provide an oriental flare to designs. Hinoki and fern-spray cypresses offer rich, deep green foliage. Several yellow-tinted varieties are also available and provide stunning contrast to green or blue-green foliage thereby brightening the dullest winter landscape and adding pizzazz to an all green wreath. Another member of this family, the thread-leaf cypress, forms graceful, mop-like mounds of delicate foliage in green, blue-green or tipped with yellow, which contributes a wispy, cascading texture to both a landscape and floral design. Somewhat slower growing than other evergreens in my landscape, I snip newer specimens sparingly.

My first project each holiday season is the creation of a wreath for my front door. I recycle a "pocket wreath" year after year. A double-ringed wire frame wrapped with overlapping, 3-inch strips of fabric can be quickly stuffed with mixed greens to produce a handsome, welcoming centerpiece. Needled greens, some tinged with silvery blue or yellow, are mixed with a variety of lustrous, shiny, broad-leafed evergreens including Leucothoe, Japanese holly, boxwood, PJM rhododendron, and mountain laurel to provide contrast of color and texture. I avoid hemlock boughs as they tend to drop their small needles shortly after being cut.

As the holidays approach, additional arrangements of mixed greens will adorn tables, mantels, and doorways. Clippings of arborvitae, juniper, spruce, blue hollies, euonymus, and berries added to designs will provide a wealth of color and contrast to last throughout the holiday season.

Kate on Kate

Mulgrew plays Hepburn in 'Tea at Five'

These days, Kate Mulgrew is delivering a pitch-perfect portrayal of Katharine Hepburn in the one-woman show "Tea at Five" — now at Boston's Shubert Theatre — but there was a time when Mulgrew steered clear of anything to do with the screen legend.

"I was never a fan of Katharine Hepburn. I had been likened to her so often early in my career, and I came to resent all the comparisons," says Mulgrew who high cheekbones and throaty voice have long fueled comparisons with the elder Kate. "Early on, I developed a real antipathy for her. One wants to be an actress in one's own right, after all."

Mulgrew's opinion of the four-time Academy Award winner changed in 2002 when she began work on the play Matthew Lombardo wrote with her in mind.

"I always admired her work as an actress, of course, but it was only when I started doing the play that I became a real devotee of Katharine Hepburn, the person. She had such courage to lead a life of remarkable career achievement against a backdrop of such personal sadness of mostly self-imposed loneliness. She could be one tough Yankee. As I play it, I'm given the experience of suffering along with her. It's almost as if she visits me every time I play the role. It's a sort of alchemy. There is a kind of inexpressible union between the two of us, which can happen when you're married this closely to a character."

Under the direction of John Tillinger, "Tea at Five" is set in Fenwick, Hepburn's beloved Connecticut home. The first act depicts Hepburn at 31, just before she did "The Philadelphia Story," and the second shows her at 76, reflecting on personal matters like the childhood suicide of her brother, Tom, and her long affair with Spencer Tracy. Mulgrew — who first gained fame as the young heroine Mary Ryan on the now-defunct soap opera "Ryan's Hope" and later as Captain Kathryn Janeway on "Star Trek: Voyager" — finds the older Hepburn easier to play.

"I'm 48, and I've almost always played older. I was playing "Mrs. Columbo, who was supposed to be 37, when I was 23. With the older Hepburn, it just seems like a more natural fit. My personality and disposition just match well to her reflections," says Mulgrew who is the mother of three and wife to Ohio politician Tim Hagan. "It's difficult to explain why, but the younger Kate is really harder work for me."

After seven years as the first female captain in Star Trek history, Mulgrew knows about hard work. "I'm so grateful to have had the 'Voyager' experience. It was the hardest and most meaningful work I have ever done. I'm very grateful to the viewers, too. They've been the best fan base in the world. They've been coming to see me from all over the world since the play's inception."

"Tea at Five" will be at the Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont Street, Boston, through Dec. 19. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.wangcenter.org.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

KEEPING AN EAR OPEN

You may have heard it said that a person only hears what he or she wants to hear. Either consciously or subconsciously, we may tend to shut out unnecessary noise and keep our ears open for important sounds, such as human voices. Now, it seems there is a hearing instrument that works in much the same way as the brain does. That is to say it constantly monitors the environment for sound and adapts to changes accordingly. This hearing instrument automatically detects the presence of speech by processing incoming sound to give maximum speech understanding. When no speech is detected, the instrument automatically tunes out background noise to save the listener from any unnecessary annoyance and fatigue.

Although more sophisticated and technologically advanced than ever before, today's hearing instruments still keep one simple goal in mind - to help the hearing impaired hear better! Hearing aids may be getting smaller and smaller, but their benefits are getting bigger and broader. At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER we'd like to show you what's new in hearing aid technology. Call us at 781-337-1144 to arrange a hearing evaluation at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, or at our office in Abington. There's never been a better time to enjoy the highest quality, most discreet hearing amplification possible.

P.S. The hearing instrument mentioned above comes with either a non-directional microphone (equally sensitive to sounds from all directions) or a directional microphone (more sensitive to sounds coming from the front.

If Christmas shopping, gift-wrapping — and all the trappings of the season — have you feeling overheated, then you may want to cool off at Quincy's Fox & Hound Wood Grill Dec. 16 when song stylists Jan Peters and Randy Zinkus will serve up a "Cool Yule!"

"This is a show about Christmas memories, miracles and also the manic craziness of the season," explains Peters. "Randy and I have somewhat different view points on the holidays. He's finished his shopping and already has everything beautifully wrapped, and I haven't bought one gift yet. We offer different perspectives on the holidays through song. We do traditional Christmas music, some great Broadway tunes like Jerry Herman's 'We Need A Little Christmas,' and some very contemporary cabaret songs. It's a fun evening, nicely balanced between the solemn and the irreverent."

JM Productions will present Jan Peters and Randy Zinkus in a "Cool Yule!" in The Den at the Fox & Hound Wood Grill and Tavern, 123 Sea Street, Quincy, for two shows at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m., Dec. 16. For tickets and information, call 617-786-7469 or visit www.jmproduction-spresents.com

The idyll life

Flee civilization for laid-back Mexican eco-resort KaiLuum II

By DAN LEETH
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

PLAYA DEL CARMEN, Mexico æ The symptoms should have been obvious. I was lying in an oversize Mayan hammock beneath a canopy of thatched palm fronds. My left hand clutched a book. My right, when it was not turning pages, reached for the icy longneck propped nearby. Digging bare toes into sugary sand, I finally acknowledged the reality of my plight. I had contracted Caribbean lethargy, a mind-muddling condition caused by excessive sun, surf and serenity. For this, I had only one person to blame. It was all my wife's fault. Dianne had picked up word from a colleague about KaiLuum II, a rustic retreat located on the eastern edge of the Yucatan Peninsula. Accommodations, we were advised, are in 31 canvas tents, shaded beneath palm-thatched canopies known as palapas. There are no TVs, phones or faxes at KaiLuum. In fact, there's not even electricity. Meals are cooked using propane and candle lanterns and tiki torches light the night. And the price was right. For less than a Dumpster-view room in nearby Cancun, at KaiLuum you get accommodations, three-course dinners (from a fixed menu), generous breakfasts, taxes and tips. Only lunches and beverages cost extra. We soon were bound for this nonresort resort.

Sunrise over the beach at KaiLuum II in Playa del Carmen, Mexico.

A van met us at the Cancun airport, and 30 minutes later, we were bouncing down a narrow dirt road. Because we were newcomers, employee David Herrera led us on a quick tour of the property. He started in the giant dining palapa, which stood more than two stories tall and looked like it held enough floor space to host a mariachi convention. Eight-person, cloth-covered dining tables stood on one end of the floorless structure. A bar sat at the other. "See, there is no bartender," Herrera said. "It is an honor system. Use pegs to mark what you take." He next took us to one of the two bathhouses, KaiLuum's only brick-and-mortar structures. On the short sides of the white-stucco building were outdoor sinks and mirrors. A painted "XAVE" sign hung overhead. "In Mayan, X is pronounced like Sh," explained our guide. "This is the shaving area." Four individual shower rooms opened on the front of the building. On the opposite side were four individual toilet rooms. Herrera introduced us to our 10-by-14-foot beachfront tentalapa, which had screened windows opening on all sides. It held a double bed with sheets, pillows and blanket. Candle lanterns sat atop night stands, and shelves provided storage space. We even had a throw rug on the canvas floor. With daily housekeeping and nightly turndown included, roughing it has never been so decadent. We stripped to shorts. Tropical torpor quickly set in.

A similar malady might have befallen KaiLuum's founder, Arnold Bilgore. An American who worked as a broadcaster in Mexico City, he headed for the Yucatan in 1976. "I don't know if he got a wild hippie idea, but he decided to leave his career behind and go to the beach," said stepson Clint Ball. "He traveled through southern Mexico and into Belize before settling into the area south of Cancun." At the time, Cancun was new, Playa del Carmen was a sleepy village, and the only resort on this stretch of beach offered little more than a few bungalows. Bilgore persuaded its owners to lease him an empty piece of their beach, where he set up a small eco-resort with tents and a restaurant. It became the precursor to today's KaiLuum II. Another move is planned soon. With a big resort going in to the north, KaiLuum II will close down next July. KaiLuum III will open in December near KaiLuumcito, a mini-KaiLuum (with only 10 tents) located 200 miles to the south near the cruise port of Majahual.

Every night at 6:30, it's cocktail hour at KaiLuum II and a staff member mixed jugs of the day's featured concotion. We mixed and mingled with our fellow KaiLuuminaries. The people who come here are a diverse collection of quietude seekers. Ages ranged from student loan to Social Security recipients, and occupations ran the gamut from insurance secretary to district court judge. About half were frequent returnees, gluttons for contentment. "We discovered the place in 1985 and we've returned every year since," said Denver orthodontist Fred Siersma. "We live a pretty pressured life, but it's impossible to feel pressured here."

For those needing activity, KaiLuum days can be filled with Caribbean fishing, diving and snorkeling trips and all-day excursions to visit Mayan ruins in Chitzen Itza, Tulum or Cob. From its current location, a short taxi ride or a five-mile beach walk leads to Playa del Carmen, where a ferry leaves for the island of Cozumel. On the premises, KaiLuum offers kayaks for paddling into the surf, and masseuses stand ready to kneed the needy. It didn't take Dianne long to invest $50 in an hour-long massage. Instead of the good-hands treatment, I let the cooling sea breeze caress my skin. From my beachside perch, I listened to birds squawking and watched pelicans diving for dinner. Occasionally, I would see a tanker, freighter or cruise ship churn through the channel that separates KaiLuum from Cozumel. Days spent pretending to be Gilligan never felt so good.

If you go

Staying there: Tentalapas at KaiLuum can be reserved for parties of one, two or three, with the choice of a double bed or twins. Oceanfront units have nothing but sand separating them from the water, which means the sea breeze blows in almost constantly. What it costs: Reservations for KaiLuum are made through the Turquoise Reef Group (800-538-6802, www.mexicoholiday.com). Prices vary by season, with nightly two-person rates this winter from $130 to $150 for two.

Shop 'til you drop in swanky Bal Harbour

By RAAKHEE P. MIRCHANDANI
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. æ For true fashionistas, holiday shopping is about outfitting your fashionably challenged family and friends, and showering your couture-carrying clique with presents that will make everyone else jealous. And it also can be about getting a little sunshine. Whip out the plastic, get on a plane and head south. It's time to crank up the class æ Bal Harbour style. Bal Harbour Village, home to the Bal Harbour Shops, is on this barrier island on the northern tip of Miami Beach. It's a 15-minute cab ride away from scene-y South Beach, and equidistant from the airports in Miami and Fort Lauderdale. The village boasts beautiful beaches on the Atlantic Ocean; three gorgeous hotels the Sheraton Bal Harbour Resort, the Sea View Hotel and the Beach House Bal Harbour, and of course, those famous boutiques. The shops, a frequent stomping ground for such celebs as Jay-Z and Beyonce, Shakira, Lenny Kravitz and J. Lo, are as easy on the eyes as they are rough on the wallet. The two-floor, open-air mall is anchored by Saks Fifth Avenue and Neiman Marcus on the ends, and such stores as Chanel, Dolce & Gabbana, Roberto Cavalli, The Art of Shaving, Salvatore Ferragamo, Yves Saint Laurent and Valentino in between.

With sunny, leafy corridors, a pond and "Garden," a free-standing art exhibit made of bronze and stainless steel, the place seems more like a meditation garden than a shopping mall. So don't blame yourself for reaching a higher spiritual plane while trying on the dresses at Escada; it's all about the atmosphere. For a break between trying on shoes at Addict, an upscale sneaker boutique, and jewelry at David Yurman, stop at Lea's Tea Room and Cafe in the mall for some nourishment. This French-style cafe, named for the owner's granddaughter, is way more Parisian than Floridian, and the to-die-for ice coffee and pastries will put a little zing back in your step if the shopping bags seem to be weighing you down. For a quick lunch or early dinner, Carpaccio, also in the mall, is a must. The pastas are homemade, and the restaurant is famous for its celebrity sightings (Kravitz included). Other restaurants in the Bal Harbour Shops include the Bal Harbour Bistro, an indoor/outdoor cafe with everything from sandwiches to fresh seafood; Santa Fe, for coffee; Elia, a Mediterranean restaurant; and the Zodiac Cafe on the third floor of Neiman Marcus, famous for popovers with strawberry butter, a Neiman specialty.

If you're heading down to Florida to escape the December chill but can't stomach the idea of staying in pulsating South Beach, try the Beach House Bal Harbour here. The Beach House feels more like a friend's place in the Hamptons than a Florida hotel, and was decorated by the Ralph Lauren design team. The rooms come with a CD player, cucumber-scented bath products including bathing suit wash (extremely practical) and a minilibrary æ mine was stocked with paperback classics by J.D. Salinger and Ernest Hemingway. The hotel has a private beach, complete with hammocks, a pool with cabanas, the Atlantic restaurant (the chopped salad is delish) and the Seahorse Bar. The extremely motivated can opt for a yoga class on the beach some mornings. Because the idea is "beach house," guests walk around in bathing suits and towels, there's sand everywhere and there's not much in the way of service.

If big, fancy hotels are more your style, check out the massive, 659-room Sheraton, and the breathtaking, 220-room Sea View. Both have particularly impressive pools. The Sheraton's $12 million water park with slides, waterfalls and whirlpool rates high on the fun scale. And the Sea View has a classy outdoor Olympic-size pool and private, full-service cabanas. Sure, this is a swanky destination with expensive boutiques and hotels, but how can you even dream of putting a price tag on a cabana boy?

For more information, go to www.village.bal-harbour.fl.us. Special hotel packages are being offered in December. The Sheraton Bal Harbour (800-325-3535, www.sheratonbalharbourresort.com) has a two-night weekend plan from $118 per night. The Sea View Hotel (305-866-4441, www.seaview-hotel.com, has ocean or bay view rooms from $145 and junior suites with balconies from $200 per night. Beach House Bal Harbour (305-536-8600, www.rubellhotels.com, is offering two-night weekend packages from $189 per night.

Avalon could jump to head of sewer line

Public hearing on issue is Jan. 6

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Did you think sewer capacity issues would take a hiatus following the Dec. 6 Special Town Meeting?

Better think again.

AvalonBay is seeking to hook up to town sewer and believes there is available capacity to accommodate the project.

To that end, the development company that is planning a 200-unit apartment complex off Rte. 3A, will meet with the Zoning Board of Appeals in a public hearing set for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 6.

Avalon is a "40-B" project that was issued a comprehensive permit by the ZBA roughly a year ago. Avalon representatives say Chapter 40B (the state's affordable housing law) can open the door to provide the development access to town sewer.

Cohasset is vulnerable to 40B projects that often include a higher density than zoning bylaws allow because there is so little affordable housing in town. Avalon, which would be located across 3A from Good Sport, is also planned for one of the last remaining stretches of industrially zoned land in town.

Avalon has come to the sewer table, so to speak, after pursuing other options – for which it says the town has shown little support.

"We are willing to sit down with all the stakeholders and find a solution that works for everybody. "But absent that, we must pursue the best option for us."
— Scott Dale, Avalon

"We feel it (town sewer) is an option now that we must pursue," said Scott Dale of Avalon. He noted the Water Commission filed a lawsuit over Avalon's plans to seek a ground-water disposal permit from the state Department of Environmental Protection for its on-site treatment system.

He also said the town has not shown support for plans to hook up to the Hull treatment plant which has excess capacity for sale. Avalon would have to get permission to install the necessary pipes to Hull in Cohasset streets which is unlikely to be forthcoming. [The Sewer Commission has denied Jerusalem Road Estates, another development interested in buying

Harbor seawall repairs

Subject is on Selectmen's agenda

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The seawall on Border Street between the Atlantica Restaurant and the Mill River Marine boatyard will soon be given a facelift. With $600,000 appropriated from Town Meeting for engineering, design, and repair costs, and a plan for renovations in the works — the construction phase is on its way.

In an effort to gain feedback from residents on the proposed changes to the inner harbor area, Town Manager Michael Buckley said the design team which has drafted plans for the improvements will be available to discuss concerns and suggestions with residents at the next meeting of the Board of Selectmen, slated for Tuesday, Dec. 21.

"These are sensitive issues," said Buckley, adding because the project will encompass not only replacing the seawall, but installing a new fence and new sidewalks in the area, he understands residents will want to be a part of the process. He said he knows residents have specific ideas for the project, including being able to see the water through the fencing, and other similar criteria.

Buckley said the town is working with Vine Associates, Inc.,

Spirit of giving bolsters charities

Editor's note: CNC/South's Gifts of Hope campaign this year focuses on raising awareness and funds for several groups helping the military and their families at the holidays.

South Shore residents seem to have embraced the spirit of giving this year, especially if it means helping out someone in need.

Just ask any of our Gifts of Hope recipients who have been overwhelmed by the South Shore community's sense of generosity toward their efforts in helping make brighter the holiday season of hundreds of military personnel and their families.

"People have been very generous with their contributions, both financially as well as with items from our Wish List," said Neal Skorka, from the Weymouth-based Care Packs. "People have easily donated over 1,000 pounds of goods so far, and the pile of items in my basement continues to grow."

All those donations were made this fall, when Care Packs began its efforts a few short months ago. The volunteers who make up Care Packs have put together dozens of parcels for soldiers with local ties that are serving in the war against Iraq. With packages taking anywhere from three to six weeks to be delivered to a soldier in the Middle East, Skorka said the group started sending packages right before Thanksgiving in an effort to have them arrive in time for Christmas.

When the area was hit with an early snowstorm during a mid-November weekend, Skorka and

This week in COHASSET

Look back at Cohasset's year

Tune in to Our Town next Thursdays (Dec. 23 & 30) at 8:30 p.m. on Comcast Channel 10 for a retrospective of Cohasset's year with talk-show hosts, Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo. Also, reporter Rich Ofstun meets with village businesses with details of the merchants' fair this weekend.

N. Main St. paving slated

The Water Commission will smooth out the road surface on North Main Street the week of Dec. 20.

"Our contractor will apply a leveling course to North Main Street," said Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt. "This means that the patch over the trench where we put the new water main will be smoothed off, and any depressions or potholes in the road will be filled in, so the road surface will be smooth and easier to drive over."

North Main Street, from Forest Avenue to Jerusalem Road, will be repaved next Spring, said Pratt, after the trench has had time to settle.

"The Water Commission this year has replaced undersized water mains on North Main Street, Redgate Lane, Jerusalem Road Drive, and Haystack Lane," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission. "This work helps protect public safety by improving the formerly inadequate fire flows on fire hydrants on these streets and will improve water service to our customers in this area."

The Water Commission has rehabilitated more than 16 miles of the towns 36 miles of water mains since 1994, said McNabb, and plans to replace another 11 miles of water mains in the next 6 years in its ongoing long range water system rehabilitation program.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall this week:

Selectmen, Dec. 21, 7:30 p.m.

Sewer Commission, Dec. 29, 6 p.m.

ZBA, Dec. 21, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings are at Town Hall unless indicated otherwise. Call the Town Clerk at 781-383-4100 for updates.

Town Hall closing

Town Hall will be closed for the holiday beginning Thursday, Dec. 23, and will re-open Monday Dec. 27.

TM Buckley commended

The South Shore Community center sent a letter to Board of Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan commending Town Manager Michael Buckley for an outstanding job as interim Town Manager. "Mr. Buckley has consistently responded with great efficiency and professionalism. He is a great asset to the town of Cohasset," it states.

Annual Town Meeting

The Annual Town Meeting has been set for Saturday, April 2, 2005 at 10 a.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Articles should be submitted to the office of the Board of Selectmen no later than Thursday, Jan. 13 at 4:30 p.m. There will be no exceptions to this date.

When submitting an article that requires an appropriation, it shall include the purpose for which the funds will be expended, the anticipated funding source(s), the sponsor of the article, and the best estimate of the amounts required. As has been the board's policy in the past, requests to save a space in the Warrant will not be honored.

At the next meeting of the Board of Selectmen, slated for Tuesday, Dec. 21, the board is expected to open the Warrant for the meeting.

For more information, please contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

ZBA vacancy

Residents who would like to be considered for a vacancy on the Zoning Board of Appeals are asked to send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

Municipal parking lot construction takes a holiday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority's construction in the municipal parking lot continues to progress, and the second phase of excavating, which has uncovered portions of the old South Shore Railroad roundhouse and turntable, is coming to a close.

However, with the holiday season in full swing, phase three of the project — which will result in digging at the portion of the lot closest to the Red Lion Inn — may be delayed for a short time to give business owners a reprieve from construction and encourage holiday shopping.

"This is the busiest time of year," for downtown shop owners, said Town Treasurer/Tax Collector Joe DiVito, who is currently serving as Acting Special Assistant to the Town Manager for MBTA affairs. He said although the lot has been marked for excavation, he would like to see the entire parking lot remain open until the holidays have passed, to give a boost to downtown sales. Although he said people are anxious to have construction in the lot complete, "We're trying to do what's best for the shop-owners." Weather-permitting, the section of the parking lot which is currently under construction and was recently backfilled will be paved over by the end of the week.

This September, the MBTA began excavation of the downtown municipal parking lot as part of the MBTA's environmental impact study. The MBTA is reconstructing the 17-mile Greenbush Line, which when complete will provide train service from Scituate up to South Station. Plans for the train, which have been in the works for 20 years, have been surrounded in much controversy.

The Greenbush Line is the third leg of the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project, and is being built as mitigation for the Central Artery/Tunnel Project in downtown Boston. The project is intended to reduce automobile traffic on the congested highways leading into the city. By diverting South Shore commuter traffic from automobiles to transit, the MBTA says it will not only help keep the roads clear, reduce fuel consumption and air pollution, but will encourage more transit-oriented development and alleviate congestion on other transportation facilities in the area — including the Braintree Red Line. According to the MBTA, the project will cost roughly $479 million including planning, engineering, land and permitting costs, along with the cost of construction and new trains.

Research had been conducted in 1997 to locate the buried turntable and roundhouse, knowing the information would be pertinent in the near future. DiVito said he was part of that excavation, as DiVito Construction, his family's company, was hired to do the excavating. DiVito said after the site was dug up, pictures and measurements were taken to enable it to be thoroughly mapped to be located again in the future. When they were done, "We threw a blue tarp over it and covered it back over," he said, which allowed those digging this time to clearly see when they had found the site.

The digs have brought archaeologists to Cohasset to record any interesting findings, and excavation has been split into three phases to ensure only between 15 and 20 parking spaces are affected at any given time. In addition, George Roukounakis, owner of the Olympic Citgo gas station on South Main Street, has allowed the town to use some of his land behind the gas station for parking to help alleviate the congestion. Alternate parking areas are also available off Pleasant Street.

As construction on the first phase of the project began and the turntable was unearthed, the idea was floated to leave a portion of the site exposed to allow residents to have a piece of history accessible year-round. Similar to what has been done at Plymouth Rock, those involved with the project wondered if it would be possible to have a roughly 15x15-ft. section of the turntable, located in the corner of the lot closest to the Pleasant Street Parfait, left uncovered and fenced off, to serve as not only a tourist destination, but as a reminder of Cohasset's former railroad line, next to the new tracks.

However, DiVito said plans to have a historical site erected in the municipal lot will need thorough discussion before they can be finalized. In addition, because there is currently only temporary fencing around the site, he said it makes the most sense from a safety standpoint to fill the area in and pave it over until a solution is found. "Before we fill it, it will be covered with a tarp," just as it was before, to allow it to be easily spotted when dug up again, he said. "Just because the turntable will be covered, it doesn't mean it will be gone forever."

To find a solution for the portion which may remain uncovered, DiVito said a committee will be formed which will help make design decisions for the area. In addition, the town needs to come up with a design plan for the grade crossing which will be located on Pleasant Street. But DiVito said plans for the future will be on hold until a new contracted MBTA liaison is chosen to take his place. Although DiVito had considered applying for the position, "I need to devote my time to my regular job," he said. The new liaison will sign a contract, to be used on an as-needed basis.

Five résumés

DiVito said five résumés have been submitted for the liaison position so far, and he said a committee will be formed to make a final selection. He added he hopes the interviewing process can begin either by the end of this week or next week.

Once a liaison is chosen, DiVito said the committee to discuss the turntable will then be formed. He said as of right now, it has been discussed to have Selectmen Ronnie McMorris and Ralph Dormitzer on the committee as well as the permanent ombudsman, citizens, the appropriate historical entities in town, as well as the Village Revitalization task force. DiVito said any discussions of the turntable will have to go hand in hand with discussions regarding the parking lot entrance on the Pleasant Street side because a redesign is still being worked out with the MBTA.

"The portion of the lot where the entrance is now won't look like that at the end of the day," DiVito said, adding future improvements could include less asphalt than currently exists. The town will have a four-quad gate at the train crossing at Pleasant Street and Ripley Road, which means median strips will not be necessary. DiVito said in light of that, more greenspace could be added to the roadway, to help break up all the pavement in that area of town. "It would be more aesthetically pleasing," with some landscaping, he said.

ZBA expected to make Dunkin' Donuts decision Tuesday

May be conditioned on 3A improvements

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Proponents for a Dunkin' Donuts drive-through at the KoKo Island site off Rte. 3A didn't need to stop for a cup of the franchise's coffee on their way into the Zoning Board of Appeals hearing Monday.

There was plenty to keep them awake without caffeine.

In what has been literally a marathon permitting process that first wended its way through months of Planning Board hearings seemed to be following the same fate at the feet of the ZBA.

The ZBA, which has concerns about traffic flow especially in light of the 200-unit Avalon apartment project slated for across the street, can be relentlessly tough and detail oriented.

Add to the mix, the Fair Oaks Lane neighbors and their comprehensive report "Accidents Waiting to Happen in a 45/50 MPH Zone" and it appeared the Dunkin' Donuts drive-through plans might have had to go back to the drawing board.

But at the end of the night during its initial deliberations, the ZBA was leaning toward accepting the Planning Board's 2-1 decision endorsing the project citing that board's conditions relating to traffic in its own decision.

The redevelopment of the KoKo Island site that will include the Dunkin' Donuts and a family-style restaurant is largely viewed to be an aesthetic improvement but many residents have expressed concern about traffic safety.

The single, entrance-exit curb cut for the business development is almost directly across the street from the proposed driveway to the Avalon project.

"What concerns me is the fellow coming out of Avalon, watching both ways for his opportunity and he finally sees it. He takes his chance, not looking across the street to Dunkin' Donuts."

— Ben Lacy, ZBA member

The ZBA is considering issuing a special permit for a change of use from the Hair Affair site from a hair salon to a doughnut and coffee shop.

The ZBA could condition its decision to grant a special permit on certain MassHighway improvements to Rte. 3A such as painting left-turn-only lanes in the middle of the highway.

Taking the matter under advisement to allow time to review the traffic reports and mull over Monday's discussion, the ZBA will hold a special meeting at Town Hall Tuesday (Dec. 21) when it is expected to render a decision.

Rizzo Associates, traffic consultants for the developer, incorporated Avalon traffic impacts into its analysis presented Monday that included color-coded posters showing traffic flow.

ZBA member Ben Lacy wanted assurances that Avalon residents won't be put at risk exiting their driveway in the morning.

"What concerns me is the fellow coming out of Avalon, watching both ways for his opportunity and he finally sees it," Lacy said. "He takes his chance, not looking across the street to Dunkin' Donuts."

Richard Bryant of Rizzo Associates, traffic engineers for the developers, didn't describe the combination of busy highway, driveways, and drive-through as ideal. But he said say Massachusetts drivers will manage the situation.

"Massachusetts drivers have to adapt," he said. "They will have to look."

Bruce McKinnon of Fair Oaks Lane who presented an overview of the "Accidents Waiting to Happen" report said the Dunkin' Donuts is planned for the wrong location.

"At morning peak rush hour, 400 vehicles are going to pass through a two-lane 'entrance-exit', proceed up or down a 9 degree incline and merge into traffic in a 45-50 mph stretch of single-lane road without signalization," he said. "In plain speak, a car will be entering and exiting simultaneously on average every 20 seconds from the proposed site without the benefit of signalization."

"This is roughly the same standards for a tollbooth operation," he said.

Rizzo Associates said the Dunkin' Donuts will not add significant new volume to the highway because most of those who will enter the site are passing by anyway. Most of the vehicles in the morning will be headed northbound, therefore entering and exiting the site using right-hand turns. Making left-turns out of the site can also be prohibited during morning rush hours.

But McKinnon said the existing Dunkin Donuts (which will move to the new site) at Stop & Shop is in a far safer location because of the traffic signal there.

Village merchants host holiday celebration Saturday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It's that time of year again when downtown merchants have their storefronts decked with greenery and lights, and will open their doors to the community for a "Cohasset Village Holiday," this Saturday, Dec. 18 from 4-8 p.m.

With the success of last year's holiday festival still fresh in the merchants' minds, the goal was set for as many downtown businesses to participate as possible, not only to be able to provide more activities for the community, but to help build a camaraderie between the shop owners as well. "This year, we really wanted to see all the shops participate," said Sylvia Killion, of Sylvia's By the Sea, and the number has skyrocketed.

"This year, we really wanted to see all the shops participate."
— Sylvia Killion, of Sylvia's By the Sea

This year, shops from the top of South Main Street by the Red Lion Inn, all the way down Depot Court to the new James Brook Crossing building (formerly ABB Optical) will participate. Once again South Main Street will be closed from Cohasset Hardware to Dependable Cleaners, as merchants take to the streets to showcase what they do best with the residents of the town.

Bia Bistro and the Silver Spoon Café will both offer a chef's sampling of goodies during the festivities. There will also be pizza slices available from Goodfella's Pizza, s'mores at the Needlepoint South, Sports Closet and Bead Combers shop, and chowder at Atlantic Bagel.

For those who prefer to play with their food, the Village Butcher Shop and Deli will host a gingerbread decorating station, and French Memories will host cookie decorating.

To wash it all down, there will be wine tasting at Village Wine & Spirits, as well as hot mulled cider and hot chocolate at All the Best natural food shop, hot cider at Sylvia's By the Sea, and hot cider at Ports and Company.

But the night is by no means only about the food. There will be many different entertainers sure to please the whole family. The Rusty Skippers will perform, as will the Cohasset High School Jazz band, and the high school orchestra. In addition, there will be Victorian Carolers, and Fanueil Hall street performers, "Balloon Man," "Boris the stilt walker," and Steven Baird, puppeteer. While the performers will take to the stage (located near Dramatic Kitchens), they will also be entertaining around the Village throughout the night.

A new addition to this year's attractions will be hay rides, given by Brendan St. John. Riders will be picked up by the Red Lion Inn and will be taken past the Windsor Tea Shop in the James Brook Crossing building, which will serve as this year's raffle headquarters, and back again.

Santa Claus will make an appearance at Coldwell Banker, where children can sit on his lap and have one more chance to make their Christmas wishes heard. Photos will also be available. For those whose hearts are two sizes too small and cannot get into the Christmas spirit, the Grinch will be available to commiserate with at the Atlantic Valuation Group.

Although weather predictions currently look good for the weekend, Killion said the event will be held "rain or shine." In the event the weather prevents outdoor activities, she said there are plenty of indoor spaces that can be used, including the South Shore Art Center, which has generously offered up some space if needed. "It's fantastic how many people have been involved and have helped out," she said, adding no matter what the weather, the night will be one to remember.

capacity from Hull, from getting a street opening permit to install sewer pipes. Jerusalem Road Estates sued and lost. A recent Superior Court decision affirmed the Sewer Commission's exclusive authority over sewers in town and its authority to deny connections and reserve capacity for existing homes.]

When ZBA issued the comprehensive permit, Avalon planned to pursue on-site wastewater treatment after being assured by town officials that pursuing a Cohasset municipal sewer connection was not a viable option because of lack of capacity and a court order prohibiting new connections until other areas in town with failing septic systems are brought on line.

The capacity issue is significant in light of the fact the Little Harbor area and two age-restricted complexes for senior citizens, the Cook Estate and Cedarmere, are also seeking sewer connections.

The Water Commission, which is opposed to on-site wastewater treatment because Avalon is in the Lily Pond Watershed, sued Avalon and the ZBA challenging the comprehensive permit. Dale said opposition from the Water Commission is at least in part fueling Avalon's exploration of other sewer alternatives.

"We are willing to sit down with all the stakeholders and find a solution that works for everybody," Dale said. "But absent that, we must pursue the best option for us (Cohasset sewer)."

According to Dale, under Chapter 40B, the ZBA — as the granting authority of all local permits — has the exclusive jurisdiction to grant approval for a municipal sewer connection, in lieu of separate action by the Sewer Commission. In other words, a separate sewer connection permit from the Sewer Commission is not required.

"If sewer capacity is available and we believe it is," Dale said. "Then we believe we are entitled to tie in."

The potential for a sewer connection is also part of the comprehensive permit. After being requested by Avalon, the ZBA modified the comprehensive permit in February 2004 adding language that would allow for a potential Cohasset connection should adequate capacity exist for the project or a tie-in to another municipal sewer system (ie. Hull's) as alternatives to the on-site wastewater treatment facility, Dale said.

Dale stated in a recent letter to the Sewer Commission the determination of capacity must be made without regard to extraneous issues such as whether the site is in the Central Sewer District of whether the Little Harbor area has priority over other developments.

"The sole issue is whether the Cohasset municipal sewer system can accommodate the increased flow from the development (Avalon)," Dale stated.

Avalon's engineers estimate the average flow from the project will be roughly 22,000 gallons per day, with a peak flow of 36,000, based on typical water use and expected occupancy.

The engineers believe there exists roughly 48,000 gallons per day of unused capacity in the Cohasset plant – twice the average flow expected from Avalon. Avalon said that does not include significant upgrades to the plant to accommodate Little Harbor.

Avalon can appeal to the state Housing Appeals Committee if the ZBA denies it a sewer connection.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said Avalon has its facts wrong when it comes to 40B.

"The ZBA cannot grant any sewer connection pursuant to Chapter 40B of the General Laws or any other law, and there is no available sewer connection for Avalon no matter what avenue of attack against the town Avalon chooses to pursue," DeRensis said.

In a related matter, the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, dubbed MassHousing, recently extended the Project Eligibility Letter for Avalon Cohasset for an additional 12 months until Nov. 21, 2005. The MHFA first gave the project site approval back in November 2001, essentially saying the project meets the criteria for a state housing subsidy program. The MHFA letter set the stage for Avalon to apply for a comprehensive permit.

Border Street wall could 'sea' some changes

based out of Hingham, on the project. "This is their specialty," Buckley said of the company, which has much experience with coastal projects of this nature. The firm says it is evident the existing stone seawall and walkway are in very poor condition, and complete reconstruction will be required to restore both the structural integrity of the seawall and improve public safety and access along the inner harbor. The area along Border Street is highly traveled by both pedestrians and vehicular traffic.

The improvements Vine Associates has in mind include working within the footprint of existing structures. Currently, the existing seawall consists of semi-mortared and semi-cut stones, with a height ranging from 5.9 feet to 8.9 feet in certain areas. A bituminous paved pedestrian walkway runs along the full length of the seawall, and varies in width from 5 to 6 feet. There are numerous areas of settlement and cracking, as well as small sinkholes in the walkway.

The proposed reconstruction project involves replacement of the seawall, installation of a new 5-foot wide concrete pedestrian walkway and stone/brick buffer strip along the full length of the seawall.

A pedestrian railing extends along the top of the seawall for approximately 290 feet, and then abuts a chain link fence for the remaining 21 feet of the wall. The railing consists of two 2x6 foot horizontal timbers. Although it is in good condition, it does not meet the minimum height and rail spacing requirements per order of the Massachusetts building codes.

The proposed reconstruction project involves replacement of the seawall, installation of a new 5-foot wide concrete pedestrian walkway and stone/brick buffer strip along the full length of the seawall. Repairs to the roadside edge of the new walkway will include the installation of granite curbing. Two existing outfall pipes and catch basins will be replaced, and a sub-draining system will be installed along the back of the new wall.

In addition, a new ornamental rail fence will be installed along the top of the seawall. Although the type of fence has not yet specifically been chosen, it will need to meet the requirement of being at least 42 inches in height with a spacing of rails that prevent the passage of an object 4 inches or more in diameter. Vine Associates has suggested railings such as those used in Hingham Harbor.

Buckley said he knows residents have a certain vision for the area, and said the design team from Vine Associates looks forward to receiving that input. Buckley added he has already gone before the Planning Board with Project Manager Christine Player for feedback.

This is not the first time the seawall has been worked on. Repairs had previously been made to the seawall in the early 1990s, and at that point, shotcrete was placed over the top 3 or 4 feet of the entire wall. In addition, a mound of stone was dumped at the northern end of the wall for stabilization. However, realizing its fragile state, former Town Manager Mark Haddad began looking into what it would take to reconstruct the entire wall, and revamp the area.

Under Haddad's direction, Town Meeting voted to appropriate $15,000 to hire Vine Associates to complete a preliminary study of the Border Street area, which was completed last January and recommended a complete overhaul of the area including full replacement of the wall.

While Vine Associates was compiling information for its report, Haddad began contacting state agencies for funding opportunities. The town was awarded a $25,000 grant through the Rivers and Harbors Grants Program to cover 50 percent of the preliminary engineering and design costs for the project, and the other $25,000 was appropriated at the Annual Town Meeting last spring. The preliminary phase included updating field conditions, the implementation of a subsurface exploration program, preliminary and final designs, and the preparation of bid documents. The cost for the remaining design and engineering work as well as construction is estimated at roughly $600,000, of which half will be either paid for by the state outright, or reimbursed.

The public hearing regarding the Border Street seawall reconstruction project was slated for Tuesday, Dec. 14, but the Board of Selectmen's meeting was cancelled that night due to a lack of a quorum. At the time the Mariner went to press, the meeting was tentatively rescheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 21. For more information, please contact the Board of Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Tax rate down, tax bills up

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A drop in the tax rate doesn't mean tax bills are going down because home values are up.

The average home value in Cohasset is now $670,000, according to the Assessors Office.

So while the tax rate is decreasing from $11.89 per $1,000 of assessed valuation to $10.44 — tax bills are still going to increase nearly 5 percent over last year.

The tax bills reflect the Board of Selectmen's decision Tuesday to continue with a uniform tax rate for all property classes based on the recommendation of the Board of Assessors.

The town has the option to split that rate but since the town is 93 percent residential, the change would only decrease the property tax bills a small amount for residential taxpayers and send commercial rates soaring. Selectmen have traditionally stuck with the single tax rate.

"A split tax rate often discourages businesses from locating in a community," said Deputy Assessor Mary E. Quill in her recommendation to selectmen.

The owner of the average-valued home will see a tax increase of $319.60 to $6,994.80 for fiscal year 2005, which began July 1.

Selectmen have signed off on a tax rate of $10.44 per $1,000 valuation, which could change slightly after the state Department of Revenue reviews the town's financial information.

Last year (fiscal year 2004), the average Cohasset home was assessed at $560,000 and with a tax rate of $11.89, the homeowner paid roughly $6,675 in property taxes. In FY'03, the average home was assessed at $521,000 and with a tax rate of $11.99, the homeowner paid roughly $6,248 in property taxes.

The tax bills vary depending on their home's assessed value. By taking the assessed value of the home, dividing it by 1,000 and then multiplying it by the tax rate, a homeowner can compute his property taxes.

Taxes on the average home in town have about doubled over the past 14 years along with their values. In 1992, the average home in town was assessed at $300,000 and the tax rate was $12, yielding a tax bill of $3,600.

Municipalities don't generally split their tax rate unless the combined valuation of commercial, industrial, and personal property equals 25 percent or more of the total taxable valuation of the town.

The new tax rate will be reflected in the third quarter tax bills, which will be mailed at the end of this month.

ZBA's 150 N. Main St. discussion on hold

Planning Board review to go first

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A crowd turned up at Monday's Zoning Board of Appeals hearing to discuss plans submitted by Kendall Village Cohasset Builder to demolish the permitted four-apartment house at 150 N. Main St. and rebuild it into four condominiums.

But rather than take the matter up, the ZBA voted unanimously to deny the special permit application without prejudice to allow the Planning Board to review the plans first under the town's new Large Home Review Bylaw.

Chairman Woody Chittick explained in the interest of time, the ZBA wanted the Planning Board to "take a whack at it first." Otherwise the process could go back and forth.

"We might find zoning violations that would have to go back to the Planning Board," Chittick said.

According to the application, plans are to replace the existing, permitted four-apartment dwelling that has eight bedrooms with a building containing four condominium units with a total of eight bedrooms.

Last year, the ZBA granted a special permit allowing the building to be converted from a three apartments with seven parking spaces to four apartments (with eight parking spaces) by converting an existing four-bedroom apartment into two, two-bedroom units. However, the footprint and exterior of the structure were to remain the same. The multi-family dwelling and the parking spaces were both preexisting nonconforming conditions, hence the need for a special permit to make the changes.

With the ZBA denial, the developers now have to file again for a special permit and the public hearing can be scheduled for the first Monday in February, Chittick explained.

In the interim, Steve Bjorkland, one of the developers, said he would make himself available to the neighbors to address any of their concerns.

"I believe we can meet or exceed any requirements in the (zoning) bylaw," he said.

The large house site plan review, adopted at last spring's annual Town Meeting ensures any proposals for construction of residential buildings which exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet are subject to a review process by the Planning Board.

The intention of the bylaw is to insure abutters are notified if a "large house," is going to be built in their neighborhood, and that the Planning Board holds a public hearing to air any concerns on both sides.

Planning Board closes public hearing on Highland Estates

Is slated for Beechwood St.

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Plans to build 14 single-family homes off Beechwood Street are moving forward, as members of the Planning Board voted to close the public hearing process for "Highland Estates" subdivision Wednesday.

Although there are details which still need ironing out, members said they are eager to see the plans move along, and feel all pertinent information has been brought to the table. The close of the public hearing prevents new concerns from being presented by the public, but does not mean the public cannot comment on aspects of the plans which have already been presented.

Property owner Anthony Nader and his development team plan to build shingle-style homes on the 18-acre parcel of land, which is located up the street from the planned Cedarmere senior housing development on the part of Beechwood Street which is north of Route 3A. Members of the board attended a walk-around of the site to get a better feel for what the land could accommodate, and said they like the plans. However, some concerns such as drainage will need to be discussed in detail before approval is considered, as the Planning Board was concerned neighbors could suffer if drainage plans are not sufficient.

The Nader property has water on site which could affect drainage plans. According to the applicant's engineer Neil Murphy, the property contains approximately 2.78 acres of wetlands, which are part of a wetlands system connecting from and running through the northerly side of Pond Street, running through the 100 Pond Street development, and two abutting properties before crossing the site. An unnamed brook also passes through the center of the wetlands system and enters a vernal pool, on locus, above Mealy's Pond. The site also has a "vernal pool," which Murphy said in reality is a man-made pond which was constructed to supply ice. There is also ledge on the property which has caused some sloping of the ground in areas.

The close of the public hearing prevents new concerns from being presented by the public, but does not mean the public cannot comment on aspects of the plans which have already been presented.

The developer's drainage expert Frank Holmes said he understands the concern of the board, and in fact, changes had been made to the plans since the last meeting to help correct some potential problems. He said in some areas the pitch of the road was changed to help the flow, and the size of one of the pipes in Beechwood Street has been increased from 10 inches to 12. While he said there could be additional concerns as the discussion becomes more in depth regarding drainage, "I think we've addressed the major issues," he said.

The board was also concerned with the Greenbush Line grade crossing being located on Beechwood Street roughly 300 feet from the subdivision entrance. Members said the MBTA drainage plans for that area keep changing, and the board hopes changes do not interfere with the development's plans. "They could mess up all your good works," said member Stuart Ivimey.

Engineering consultant for the Planning Board John Modzelewski said they are trying to schedule a meeting to discuss drainage for the area surrounding the Beechwood crossing, but at this point, "there's no information from the MBTA."

Drainage aside, Planning Board members like the proposed development for the site. Architect Jim Sandell, who also designed the buildings for Cedarmere designed the homes to be "tucked in" to its surroundings, which includes a good amount of ledge, a characteristic shared by many other pieces of land in Cohasset. Sandell has proposed a plan which will blast the least amount of ledge and remove the least amount of trees as is possible.

Sandell said in order to build the homes in accordance with the landscape, each will have a slightly different design from the next, to conform to its individual lot. "There will be a variety of shapes, but a similarity to give the neighborhood an identity," he said.

The homes will have two floors with the main living areas located on the first. There will be large dining and family areas as well as outside porches. One master bedroom and three other bedrooms will be located on the second floor.

The Planning Board will tentatively take up discussion on "Highland Estates" at its next meeting, Wednesday, Jan. 5 at 8:30 p.m. For more information, please contact the Planning Board office at (781) 383-3517.

Toys from bygone era are on exhibit at historical society

Open house is Saturday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There's no feeling quite like the excitement felt by a child who has received a new toy, especially during the holiday season. While today children often ask for the latest video game system or DVDs, there was a time not too long ago when train sets and paper dolls provided entertainment for hours.

To help celebrate the delight toys have brought to children over the years, and help bring back some memories for those who are still children at heart, the Cohasset Historical Society has brought out its special toy collection in a new exhibit, "The Alphabet of Toys." Although the Society is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., it has invited residents of all ages to its headquarters in the Paul Pratt Memorial Building on South Main Street for a special open house featuring a special surprise holiday children's activity Saturday, Dec. 18 from 2-4 p.m.

As the exhibit's title would suggest, Lynne DeGiacomo, Executive Administrator for the Society, said virtually every letter of the alphabet is represented by a different toy, whether it be a doll, soldiers, or trains. "We had to get creative with some," she said, adding an "O" toy could not be found, so a bowl of small oranges was added to the exhibit, as oranges used to be placed in stockings for Christmas. "For some it was a stretch," filling the letters, but "we did pretty well," she said. Only six letters of the alphabet are not covered by toys, including "E", "J", "Q", "X", "Y", and "Z". DeGiacomo said some books had titles which began with the letters "U" and "L" which allowed those letters to be covered, but said someday they hope to have true representation of toys for every letter.

Although a good majority of the toys in the display are part of the Society's collection, she said the generosity of friends of the Society who have come forward to lend their toys for the exhibit has really made for a great display.

One of the featured items in the exhibit is a dollhouse, lent by Jeanne Replogle. The dollhouse, which boasts three floors and a shingled roof, is unlike any ordinary dollhouse, as it is an exact replica of a house Replogle and her husband David used to own when they lived in Garden City, Long Island.

Replogle said the house itself, built in 1872 by renowned architect Stanford White, has quite a history. Although White was married, he was known to be having an affair with a teenaged Evelyn Nesbit. Replogle said her home had reputedly been the trysting place of White and Nesbit.

What is even more interesting is a connection the Replogle family has with White and Nesbit. After her affair with White, Nesbit went on to marry a man named Harry Thaw, who after finding out the details of his wife's past and potential lingering contacts, sought White out and killed him in June1906. Replogle said she was told one of the attorneys who was involved with Thaw's murder trial was also a Replogle, and "All Replogles are related," she said. Thaw was eventually set free, and the story of the love triangle inspired the musical, "Ragtime."

Replogle said when she moved out of White's house, "It was the hardest thing I've ever done in my life." She said the dollhouse was a going-away present from a group of friends which had been built by an "off-duty architect," and serves as a constant reminder of the house she loved so much.

With nine bedrooms and 5-1/2 baths, only half of the house has been replicated. Replogle said although the staircase was not included in the smaller version, it was a beautiful winding staircase which went all the way to the third floor from the entryway, which made for quite a view from the entrance.

Replogle said she tried to furnish the doll house the same way the house had been decorated when she lived in it. Not being able to find a small oriental rug for the doll house dining room, Replogle, and artist by trade, painted a rug to match a hand-painted mural on the wall.

Along with the personal touches Replogle had added with the decor, signs of her family life can be seen throughout as well. All five of her boys are represented by porcelain dolls in the house, as well as the housekeeper, Tessie. "I couldn't have lived life with five boys without her," she said. Replogle even put herself in the dollhouse — and gives a giggle at seeing herself with a tray eating breakfast in bed.

"My granddaughters have had a field day with this," Replogle said of the dollhouse, and she is eager to share it with the town.

In addition to the dolls in the dollhouse, antique baby dolls are on display. DeGiacomo said although many have been very loved over the years, "they do survive," and are in good condition. Even more rare to find in good condition are the paper dolls, which have been framed for preservation. "It's amazing these survived uncut," she said.

As always, DeGiacomo said the Society very gratefully accepts any historical donations, and would love to add to its toy collection. However, for those residents who would like to hang on to their treasures, the Society is very appreciative of those toys which are lent only for the display. Members of the public are not allowed to touch the items on display to ensure their preservation.

To help finish the alphabet, "We're looking for a jack-in-the-box or antique jacks," she said, or any other toy which would make the Society's alphabet complete. DeGiacomo said the toys in the display are from the 1920s or earlier, and even with a few letters missing, the collection is very extensive.

A special family open house for the "Alphabet of Toys" exhibit will be held Saturday, Dec. 18 from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Historical Society Headquarters, located in the Paul Pratt Memorial Building, 106 South Main St. The open house is being held in conjunction with the Cohasset Village Holiday festival, which takes place the same day from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. in downtown Cohasset. The Historical Society is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The exhibit will be on display through the end of January.

New year holds a special delivery for Deer Hill teacher

January — a perfect start to the new year.

"It's been an emotional roller coaster," Henry said, as she had hoped to have her baby home for Christmas. However, the wait will soon be over, when she is reunited with 10-month-old Luke, whom she met for the first time this November. A picture of the bubbly, smiling little boy sits on her desk at school.

Henry began the process of looking into adoption even before Luke was born. She said after hearing positive feedback regarding the Wide Horizons agency, she decided it was a perfect fit for her, and she began filling out the paperwork to start the adoption process.

To be considered as an adoptive parent, Henry was required to submit a dossier including roughly 45 pieces of paperwork. The Department of Social Services conducted an investigation, she participated in a Criminal Offender Record Investigation, or CORI check, and the FBI conducted another background check. Henry also submitted letters of recommendation including one from her employer, as well as tax forms. "I've been federally cleared and state police cleared," she said.

When the dossier was submitted, it then needed to be translated into Russian so those at the baby home who received it could understand. She said her papers arrived in Russia Aug. 26, 2004 and she was matched up with her baby boy Sept. 16. "It was only about two weeks," she said, but it would be much longer until they would meet face to face.

Once she had been matched, representatives from the agency invited Henry to have a meeting where she would be given the first pictures of her son. "I was thrilled," she said, when she saw his face for the first time, and couldn't wait to meet him. However, because it usually takes between one to three months for adoptive parents to be given permission to make the trip to meet their babies, Henry had to wait until November to see Luke in person.

Henry made her first trip to Russia Nov. 15 and was there roughly one week. "That was quite an experience," she said, which was filled with traveling every single day. Because none of her family members were able to make the trip over to Russia with her, her friend Marjorie Murphy, a longtime Cohasset resident and former Deer Hill librarian who had just entered into retirement, said she would not let Henry make the trip alone.

"I was off and running," said Murphy grinning, to which Henry joked, "She just wants to fill every page of her passport."

However, the trip was anything but a restful vacation.

The town of Beloretsk where the baby home is located, is very remote, and the first leg of their journey landed them in Moscow. Although they had booked a hotel room in advance, a visit from Russian President Vladimir Putin resulted in an immediate cancellation of their reservations. Suddenly Murphy and Henry needed to find a place to stay for the night.

But with the help of their driver, an employee of the adoption agency, they were able to find a place to stay. He "took really good care of us," and wouldn't leave until he was sure they were all set for the night, said Murphy. Being in a country where they didn't speak the language, his assistance was immeasurable, she said.

The following day, Murphy and Henry, along with a couple from New Hampshire who were also working with the agency to adopt a baby, flew from Moscow to the town of Ufa, which Henry said was roughly a three-hour trip. The flight was followed by a four hour drive through the Ural Mountains.

After such a lengthy trip, the two were ecstatic to reach the baby's home — but there was still more to be done before Henry could meet her new son. First she met with the chief doctor who is also the director, and was briefed on Luke's personal and medical history. From there, she and Murphy were given lunch, then finally taken to a room where they had their first introduction.

"They just bring them in and plop them in your arms," Henry said, and for 1-1/2 hours, she and baby Luke played on a blanket on the floor, both smiling all the while. The same smile comes across Henry's face as she tells the story.

"He's such a happy baby," Henry said, and Murphy agreed. As the designated photographer, Murphy had no trouble getting anyone to smile for the camera. Murphy joked during the time they spent with Luke, she was reprimanded if she wasn't either taking pictures or videos of him non-stop.

"I can't even put into words how lucky I am she went with me," Henry said of Murphy.

Henry has shared her experience with the children in her class, and she said the day she told her students she would be leaving to meet Luke for the first time, they all clapped their hands and cheered. She has been able to share her story to teach them about geography, as well as empathy and being grateful for everything they have in the USA.

In a town which is as far removed as Beloretsk, amenities do not exist. Murphy said in the baby home, right away she noticed the children's toys had all been handmade by those who worked there. However, she said it was evident they were made "with such love."

In the towns surrounding Beloretsk, even some restaurants do not have plumbing, and patrons must use an outhouse, which is essentially a hole in the ground. In addition, they suffer from bitterly cold winters, which Henry and Murphy can attest to, as there were blizzard conditions when they began their journey home, delaying their flight three hours.

Knit hats

Knowing the kind of weather they experience in Russia, many of Henry's students have been working hard to knit hats for children in the home. Every year since 1997, Deer Hill art teacher Ann Berman has taught her students how to knit hats, which they then donate to area homeless shelters. However, this year, some students had another idea.

On Henry's first trip to meet Luke, she brought along five hats, made especially by her students for some of the children in the baby home. When she returned, after hearing the tale of the bitter cold weather, one student in particular stepped up her efforts.

After hearing Henry's story, Kaye Slanp said she realized even more how important it is for the children to have the hats, because they "don't have a lot of warm clothing." She immediately set out making more hats and one scarf for the children, which Henry will bring back with her when she takes Luke home for good in January. "She's been non-stop knitting since I came back," said Henry of Kaye, adding she is very proud of her efforts.

But the hats are not the only philanthropic venture to come out of Henry's adoption process. She said after visiting the baby home, she realized the only car the workers have access to is the one used by the driver who brings adoptive families out to the home once a month. If the employees need supplies, they must wait to go into town until that driver comes back, and complete their errands while he fills out paperwork and helps the adoption process progress smoothly.

However, Henry and Murphy said their goal is to raise enough money to cover the cost of purchasing a car, so the baby home will have transportation available at all times. Henry estimates it will take between $3,000 and $4,000 to make their dream come true.

To make a contribution to help purchase a car for the baby home in Beloretsk Russia, please make checks payable to the Wide Horizons for Children adoption agency. Checks in any amount can be sent to Marjie Murphy, 33 Cedar Acres Lane, Cohasset, who will compile them and bring them to the agency.

HOLIDAY THOUGHTS

Hello Cohasset! I hope that everyone is getting into the spirit of the holidays and are remembering to enjoy them as each day passes. Whether you celebrate Hanukkah, Christmas, Kwanzaa or something else, take the time to enjoy what each day brings and the small events and memories that are happening. It really gets overwhelming at times with the shopping, school events and all that I know that I really need to remind myself what it really is all about. Family and friends getting together to sing some carols, enjoy each other, make a craft or whatever it is that will become those memories and traditions, that is what the focus should be on. Because of so many outside influences however, it is very difficult to remember that. I am determined to somehow try and hope that you can too. Enjoy!

'GREASE' WAS GREAT

I want to congratulate the whole cast and crew of this past weekend's performance of Grease at CHS. Mr. Bryan Marks and so many others all came together and performed a wonderful rendition with so many people coming to help and show their support. It was a fantastic night out and truly was enjoyed by all.

FOR GARDENERS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset has just published a very wonderful gardener's handbook. It's in a custom made binder, colorful with an original JoAnne Chittick watercolor, is divided into months with colorful artwork from local artists on the tabs, and is FULL (250 pgs) of great info culled from the amazing know-how of the ladies of this garden club. Gardening info month by month, as well as a chapter on arranging flowers that is pretty interesting. As well as a garden journal for you to input your own notes.

All proceeds from this go to scholarship funds to Cohasset kids, as well as different gardening projects done around town. (For ex, they do the Lightkeeper's Garden, etc.) This beautiful book makes a great gift for $25. There is an order form online www.communitygardenclubofcohasset.org

INDOOR LAX SIGNUPS

Just a quick reminder that the sign-ups for the last session of indoor lacrosse are now open, but that spots are filling up very quickly so if any of you want to get a head start on getting ready for the Spring season — by either playing in the leagues or joining the instructional programs — now is the time to get registered.

All programs are hosted at the new indoor facility in Pembroke at the ProShots Athletic Center and meet once a week for an hour. The "Pre-Season" league starts the weekend of Jan 7 for boys and girls of all ages and skill levels (grades 2 - 8) and for those of you that are just getting started, the Learn2Lax program is ideally suited to get you up to speed before the next outdoor season starts in March. For more information, or to register for any of these programs, please visit: www.maxlax.net or www.proshotscenter.com or you can call directly during normal business hours at 781/829-2060.

ST. SEBASTIAN'S HONORS

The following students from St. Sebastian's School in Needham were named as recipients on the Honor Roll for the first quarter of 2004-2005 and are residents of Cohasset. Paul Cotter, the son of Dr. Paul and Margaret Cotter, received Honors with Distinction. Paul is a senior who also was named a Scholar with Honor for receiving an average grade of at least 3.25 on all Advanced Placement (AP) exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on four or more of these exams. Dominic Jancaterino, whose parents are Dr. Jon and Patricia Jancaterino, received Honors with Distinction and is in Grade 8. Keep up the great work.

Who's the top citizen?

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In keeping with an 11-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Marjorie "Marjie" Murphy as Citizen of the Year. The mother of three and grandmother of two touched countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill.

The deadline for nominations for the 2004 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 7. Please see the nomination form on page 8.

The deadline for nominations for the 2004 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 7. Please see the nomination form on page 8. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Nominations may also be sent by email to mford@cnc.com.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2004 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2005.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the11th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

The late Gerard T. Keating, Joseph D. Buckley, Dr. Robert T. Sceery, The Rev. Gary Ritts, Anna Abbruzzese, Katherine Stanton, the late Clark Chatterton, former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Glenn Pratt, Arthur Lehr, and Marjorie Murphy.

Town receives gift of rare Minot Light letterpress prints

Imagine the delight of Marion Douglas, town clerk, opening a package of beautiful Minot Light prints last spring. She had no idea why they were sent to the town or their value.

Wig Person, chairman of the Committee on Town History, just happened to be in her office that day and said he'd look into it. After several phone calls to print collectors and members of the Society of Printers in Boston, Pierson learned the town was indeed the recipient of a rare treasure, one of a series of 29 color, woodblock prints of distinguished buildings and sites around Boston by the renowned New England graphic artist Rudolph Ruzicka.

Pierson discovered the series was produced starting in 1911 by the Merrymount Press in Boston as Christmas keepsakes and that of 29 different subjects, Minot Light was the last subject printed in 1942.

The Committee on Town History is making 130 limited edition prints available for sale at $60 each during this holiday season.

Prints of Minot Light by New England graphic artist Rudolph Ruzicka are available through the Committee on Town History.

Shortly after that time the press was closed. The complete set of original wood blocks are in the collection of the Boston Athenaeum and reproduced in an out-of-print book titled "Boston, Engravings on Wood" by Rudolph Ruzicka with text by Walter Muir Whitehill published by David R. Godine, Publisher, Boston. The book is available at the Cohasset library.

Pierson also learned Selma Ordewer of Southbury, Conn. was executrix of the estate of Daniel Berkeley Bianchi and decided it was appropriate for the Town of Cohasset to be the recipient of the prints rather than print dealers. Now Cohasset townspeople may enjoy a unique original graphic reproduction of the lighthouse on the dangerous ledge that the New England historian Samuel Eliot Morison characterized as "more difficult even than the famous Eddystone".

The Committee on Town History is making 130 limited edition prints available for sale at $60 each during this holiday season. Each 3-1/2 x 5 inch print is mounted in a bevel edge acid-free matte and is numbered from one to 130 with a description of the print. The matte will fit any 8 x 10 frame suitable for hanging or displaying on a table top. Proceeds from sales are returned to the town to help fund historical publications.

Checks may be made out to the Town of Cohasset and mailed to Committee on Town History c/o Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Avenue, Boston, MA 02025. Telephone 781-383-6940 to arrange with Pierson how to pick up the print.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own com

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 13 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Cohassett Mariner in supporting The South Shore Womens Center in supporting the effort to help local military families this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Please make your tax deductible check or money order payable to:
102nd FA
Family Readiness Group
(Quincy National Guard)
or Pembroke Military Support Group

Mail to:
Gifts of Hope,
c/o Anne Rodwell,
16 Enterprise Drive,
Marshfield, MA 02050

(Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

LIBRARY CORNER

Holiday Hours

The library will be closed Friday, Dec. 24, Saturday, Dec. 25, and Saturday, Jan. 1.

New Web site

The library has a new look. Visit at www.cohassetlibrary.org. Check out the list of new books in the library by going to "New Arrivals" from the Good Books page, from the Children's page (for new children's titles) and from the Young Adult page (for new Young Adult titles). Click on a title or book jacket and place a hold on the book.

Find out what's happening at the library and sign up for programs from your home or office computer. Go to "News/Events" on the Web site and click on "Events Calendar."

Museum passes

Reserve Museum Passes online, whenever it's convenient for you. Choose the option "Using the Library" and click on "Museum Passes." The system displays a list of passes, the dates that are available for each pass and the specific guidelines of each pass (number of people admitted and discounted price). If you provide the library with your e-mail address, you will receive an e-mail reminding you when to pick up your pass. The Friends of the Cohasset Library have generously provided funding for the Museum Passes and the Library Insight program, which provides the Events Calendar and the online Museum Pass booking system.

Book talk

Book Discussion Group — Join the group Friday, Jan. 28, at 10 a.m. for the first meeting. For discussion will be the New York Times bestseller, "Reading Lolita in Tehran: a Memoir in Books," by Azar Nafisi. Signup in advance is required. Call Judy Simons at 781-383-1348 or sign-up online. Click on the January Events Calendar on the Web site: www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Film series

Independent Film Series — The film "Morlang" will be shown Jan. 6 at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room. Based loosely on a true story, "Morlang" is a chilling, psychological drama about jealousy, betrayal and revenge.

Book bags

Book Bags are on sale at the circulation desk for $15. These attractive, sturdy bags are a great holiday gift idea. All proceeds go to the Friends of the Cohasset Library to fund programs for the library.

Artist exhibit

Jeanne L. Replogle's recent paintings will be on display in the Meeting Room through Dec. 31.

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is located at 35 Ripley Road.

Christmas tree pickup is offered

Project Safeguard, the Cohasset community initiative that offers information to local youth and their parents around the issues of adolescent-related health and wellbeing, announces its annual Christmas tree pickup fund-raiser.

Tired of strained backs, scratched car roofs and cleaning up pine needles and tree sap? Why deal with the hassle? Call Project Safeguard and it will have a representative pick up your tree at your home after the holidays. For a small donation, it will make sure your tree is transported to the transfer station. It's as easy as that and you'll be helping to support an important local service organization in the process.

Tired of strained backs, scratched car roofs and cleaning up pine needles and tree sap? Why deal with the hassle?

Don't wait until after Christmas. Call now to schedule a pickup. The pickup dates are Sunday, Jan. 2, and Saturday, Jan. 8. The fee is $15 per tree and $25 for two trees. The fee for seniors is $10 per tree. All checks should be made payable to "Project Safeguard." To schedule a pickup, call the Info Line at "The Garage" at 781-383-2492. Leave your name, address and phone number, and any unusual instructions. Be sure to specify a pickup date. On pickup day, leave your tree by your driveway by 8 a.m. and tape your check (in an envelope) to your door. If you'd like to leave the check in a different location, you should indicate this on your Info Line message.

If you have any questions, call Sally Sisson (781-383-6190) or Coleman Nee (781-383-6958), Project Safeguard community reps.

Also, volunteers are needed to help with this year's pickup. If you own a pickup truck and can spare a couple of hours on either or both pickup dates, your help would be appreciated. Give them a call.

First Parish invites carolers to join in

First Parish, Cohasset's Unitarian Universalist church, is reviving an old and well-loved Cohasset tradition — Caroling on the Common — Saturday, Dec. 18.

This is a community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; caroling books will be available, but you may bring your own.

This is a community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children

Participants will assemble at the First Parish's Parish House (23 North Main St.) between 4 and 4:30 p.m. Carolers will circuit the Common, serenading all homes as weather permits. At approximately 5:30, everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies (cookie donations are appreciated).

For further information call Sandy Bailey at First Parish (781-383-1100) or Woody Chittick (781-383-3215).

Care Packs volunteers capitalized on an opportunity. With many people at home because of the snow, the volunteers went around to homes in Weymouth looking for donations. They collected nearly 800 pounds of goods that weekend.

"We couldn't believe how much we collected that day," Skorka said. "We had tons of stuff by the end of the day."

He said that in addition to the generosity of residents, local businesses and churches were key contributors to their success.

Along with volunteers asking for donations, Skorka said they have found many donations to be unsolicited.

"People go out of their way to drop things off at my house and to call us up with names and addresses of their soldiers," he said.

Three years ago, a military support group in Pembroke was ready to ship 20 care packages to soldiers who had deployed overseas in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks when the volunteers realized they had no money to pay for the shipping of the gifts.

"A few people here chipped in and that's how we got those boxes out," said Julie Caruso of the Pembroke Military Support Group.

What started with a few group members donating some money to mail out packages has since blossomed into a town-wide effort. When the PMSG needs something or is having an affair, be it a fund-raiser or a welcome home event for a soldier, residents offer their help, local businesses donate their services without being asked and restaurants provide food and space.

"Usually someone seeks us out and asks how they can help," said Elaine Crudup, a member of the Pembroke Military Support Group whose son was in the Middle East for 16 months.

The Pembroke Fire Department did just that. Caruso said during a group meeting last year that a new face arrived.

"We thought he was a new member," she said.

The man in the room didn't want to be a member, but he did want to help. The Pembroke firefighter was there on behalf of the department to offer a check to pay for the group's shipping costs that year. And the PFD did it again this year.

GIFTS of HOPE
YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

And for PMSG, the list of community contributions goes on and on. When a local female soldier returned home, the group organized a welcome home party as well as a day of beauty for her at Macy's department store, which also donated a new outfit. Caruso cited another example of the community's generosity in a local landscaping company shoveling out the homes of deployed soldiers during the winters.

Even three years after they started, donations for the Pembroke Military Support Group continue to pour in, whether it is goods to send to troops or financial support. But the group also helps other organizations like it, Caruso said, sharing any abundance of goods it may have or just lending a hand to groups as they start up.

"Other towns have reached out to us to ask for help," said Mary Hurney, whose son Patrick is a Marine stationed in Iraq when the war began last year.

Earlier this month, the Quincy National Guard unit's Family Readiness Group held its annual holiday party for the families of its soldiers and felt fortunate for the contributions it received.

"Ninety-nine percent of the party is donated, including Christmas presents for the children," said Gail Linehan, co-chairwoman of the Quincy FRG. About 150 soldiers based in the Quincy unit are being deployed to the Middle East sometime this month and have been training in New Jersey for weeks.

Local college students also donated gingerbread cookies for the soldiers' children to decorate at the party and Santa Claus volunteered his time to arrive on a Quincy Fire Department truck.

The FRG counts on the generosity of local residents in order to help the families of deployed soldiers the best they can, whether it be giving some holiday cheer to the children or to assist with serious problems a family left behind may encounter.

"As part of the FRG, our job is to help the families if they are having financial difficulties or problems related to a family member being deployed, such as the loss of a paycheck," Linehan said. "They're now living on a military salary, which isn't as much as someone could earn in the private sector. We help with the financials to keep people on their feet. The donations started to come in once we learned that the troops were being deployed."

Maura Yanosic, co-leader of the FRG for the Braintree unit of the National Guard, is also a reading specialist in the Abington Public School system. With a 20-year-old son serving overseas in the war, she wears a yellow ribbon and American flag pin every day.

That small feature has encouraged students, teachers and administrators to support the soldiers with tons of donations. Elementary and junior high school students have donated gum, candy, granola bars, powder drink mixes and numerous other items for the Braintree FRG to send to the troops.

"It's so wonderful to feel the spirit the community has," Yanosic said. "The support in this community is tremendous."

Because they can't be with their loved ones during this holiday season, the Braintree FRG wants to ensure that their troops aren't forgotten. They've sent out care packages filled with all the contributions people heave made, including personal care items, goodies and hand-sewn stockings, that will be delivered to the soldiers on Christmas Eve.

Yanosic's role in the school system has inspired students to donate more than just food, candy and personal items. They've also sent letters, notes and pictures to the troops.

"Justin says they love to get stuff from the kids," she said of her son. "A hometown connection is so meaningful because these soldiers are just so far away."

Yanosic said while her son and his fellow troops were training in Wisconsin they taped up the letters and pictures the children had sent and some soldiers even wrote back to the students. "The kids don't about politics, they just know that someone is over there making sure they're safe back here," she said.

William Griffin outside Town Hall after his interview with selectmen last month.

New TM, William Griffin, signs contract

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset will have a new Town Manager as of Jan. 31, as William Griffin signed a three-year contract with the town Monday.

Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley said he is "ecstatic" to hear Griffin will be coming on board, adding "I can't believe someone of his caliber and experience is coming on board. Ordinarily, small towns don't get people like that. We're very fortunate," he said.

Griffin who is currently the Bourne Town Administrator, has served in the top administrative post in Dedham and Plymouth as well. In Dedham and Bourne, he was the first Town Administrator. In Plymouth, he was the first Town Manager after serving as that town's Executive Secretary. In Cohasset, he will follow Town Manager Mark Haddad who served in the post for seven years.

"I can't believe someone of his caliber and experience is coming on board. Ordinarily, small towns don't get people like that. We're very fortunate."
— Michael Buckley, acting Town Manager

During interviews, Griffin said he would need to provide Bourne with a two-month notice before coming on board in Cohasset. "I always honor (agreements) with the communities I'm working for," he said.

Griffin also said during interviews that if picked for the post and until he comes on board, he said he would try to attend some government meetings. He has made good on his promise, and sat through all 3-1/2 hours of the first session of Town Meeting.

Griffin has signed the three year contract to the tune of $115,000 per year. Griffin's current salary in Bourne is about $107,000. Haddad's salary was roughly $110,000 when he resigned in May.

Beechwood train crossing changes

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority has evaluated the design of the driveway at 39 Beechwood St., and after meeting with representatives and the residents of the property in both September and October, it has agreed to some changes.

Residents of 39 Beechwood St., a Victorian home which has been converted into condominiums, have been very concerned plans to reconfigure their driveway in light of the Beechwood Street grade crossing will not allow enough space for fire engines to be able to make the turn up to their complex. Currently, viewing the property from the street, the driveway for the condominiums runs from the back of the house and along the right side of the property, virtually straight down toward the street. The rail bed runs almost parallel with the driveway, which needs to be relocated as it is too close to the crossing.

Because only two gates will be implemented, median barriers will be installed on either side of the crossing as a safety measure, which is required by the MBTA for whistle-free train corridors.

Plans have changed from implementing four-quad gates to standard crossings at Beechwood Street because the fire department has been told it will help with delays as the gates will be down for a shorter amount of time. Because only two gates will be implemented, median barriers will be installed on either side of the crossing as a safety measure, which is required by the MBTA for whistle-free train corridors. Median barriers are a little higher than a standard curb and are roughly four feet wide.

A 100-foot barrier will run from the crossing up Beechwood Street toward South Main Street, and residents had thought they would receive a 60-foot median barrier running toward the house. However, recent developments have further reduced that median strip to 40 feet, to allow the driveway, once reconfigured, to better accommodate the turning requirements of the Cohasset Fire Department's ladder truck.

Sit down with Avalon

Issues never really go away in Cohasset – they just circle around and resurface.

AvalonBay – the company that has a comprehensive permit to construct a 200-unit apartment complex off Rte. 3A – now wants to hook up to the town sewer.

Avalon officials stress they want to sit down with all the stakeholders and work out a solution that is best for everyone, but that doesn't appear likely.

The developer is coming to the "town sewer table" after spending many months pursuing other options where it has run into roadblocks.

The Water Commission is suing to stop Avalon from obtaining a ground-water disposal permit from the state Department of Environmental Protection for an on-site system.

As an alternative to an on-site system, Avalon is also willing to pay for the infrastructure to hook up to the Hull Treatment Plant. However, Avalon needs permission from the Sewer Commission to do so. The commission denied another proposed development, Jerusalem Road Estates, permission to do just that. Jerusalem Road Estates sued and lost.

Avalon has spent a ton of money on its Cohasset project and isn't going to go away quietly, nor should it.

After an exhaustive public hearing process, the Zoning Board of Appeals issued Avalon a comprehensive permit last year under Chapter 40B the state's affordable housing law.

While it's easy to point fingers at the ZBA for issuing the permit and at Avalon for wanting to come to town – we need to step back and remember why Cohasset is subjected to 40B in the first place.

Simply stated, Cohasset has only a tiny amount of affordable housing by state standards – just the 76 units off Elm Street. That's way less than the 10 percent threshold of the town's total housing stock set by the state to allow towns to get out from under the threat of 40B projects.

40B projects – which tend to be higher density than local bylaws allow – can put a strain on neighborhoods, public safety services and schools. They are often out of character with their surroundings.

However, with the average home in town valued at upwards of $600,000 – Cohasset is becoming less, not more affordable.

We don't think the Avalon project is going to destroy the quality of life in Cohasset; in fact, there are some benefits – not the least of which is providing affordable rental housing.

As a condition of its comprehensive permit, Avalon cannot have any three-bedroom units, so there aren't going to be throngs of families with children moving in.

Also, the state counts all units in 40B rental projects – not just the 25 percent that are actually affordable – towards the 10 percent requirement because there is so little rental housing around. Therefore, Avalon alone would get the town out from under 40B.

Avalon is also required to give local preference to Cohasset residents for affordable units. And typically 25-25 percent of Avalon residents are 55 and older, so it is going to provide alternative housing for area seniors.

We also think Avalon's location is ideal for a large apartment complex with its easy access to Rte. 3A. The former Norfolk-Conveyor site is not in a residential neighborhood.

The old English saying – better to work with the devil you know – may be apropos here. After months of hearings and a thorough airing of the project, Avalon doesn't sound that bad.

We think the "stakeholders" should work with Avalon to help solve the wastewater disposal issues – in particular the potential for hooking up to the Hull plant. The resulting infrastructure coupled with the excess capacity that town wants to sell could benefit more than just the Avalon project here in Cohasset.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cell phone user

TO THE EDITOR:

On a recent morning, a well dressed, articulate and apparently otherwise considerate and thoughtful man sat down across from me at one of the little tables on the 8:45 high speed ferry to Boston, and proceeded to engage in serial cell phone conversations, one of which had to do with very sensitive information about the termination of an employee.

While speaking in a well modulated, cultivated tone, the proximity of the phone compelled me to listen. There is something about one way conversations that have this effect, at least on me. I find it less intrusive if two people are talking face to face.

Harvard's Howard Gardner writes of eight intelligences, one of which is "interpersonal", the awareness of one's relationship to others. I invite this individual to consider where he might rank himself in this regard.

Many of us on the boat to Boston in the morning like to sit quietly and read the paper, or work at the little tables. Cell phone users have the option of going out on deck, or finding a space unoccupied by others. In this instance, I finally had to get up and leave.

Hats for homeless project reaches goal

TO THE EDITOR:

Students at the Deer Hill School are very excited to have reached their goal of knitting more than 140 hats for the Boston homeless shelter, Rosie's Place. We will deliver those hats along with boxes of donated children's books, on Wednesday, Dec. 22. I would like to thank all the students for their dedication to this project. It would not have been possible without their wonderful enthusiasm and their desire to help others less fortunate. Our Deer Hill students are a remarkable bunch and they should be very proud of their accomplishments.

Thank you to all the parents for their assistance and encouragement, and to the Deer Hill teachers and staff who helped knit and support the children's efforts. Even Keith Gauley, our dedicated principal, is still hard at work on his hat and may even finish it this year (we hope).

I would also like to thank the Cohasset community who called with yarn donations and offers of assistance; this truly was a community effort and without all this support we definitely would not have accomplished our goal. To all who helped make this idea a reality, thank you.

The need for safety booths and lifejackets

TO THE EDITOR:

Realizing that the current problem with the new tunnel or sieve is causing drivers to look and find other routes around the tunnel thereby causing the usage of the tunnel to become light or almost to the point of being an unused tunnel I'm here to offer a solution which may allay the concerns and worries about using the tunnel.

Here's my idea. Erect a kiosk similar to a toll booth at each end of the tunnel, both North and South. At these points sell at a nominal fee a lifejacket for each occupant of the vehicle entering the tunnel. With the technology that we have today this transaction can be done in moments. The "Safety Booths" can be located maybe a half a mile from each end of the tunnel entrance and the "jacket" transaction can be done on the fly with little or no holdup. This operation will promote confidence in the minds of the drivers and passengers and the tunnel usage and confidence will be restored.

I realize that there will be new requirements for cash to make the corrections required to the tunnel. These will be helped immensely with income from the sale of lifejackets. Also there probably will be a change in tolls on the Mystic Bridge and both the Callahan and Sumner Tunnels from their current tolls to perhaps $8 to $10 for perhaps a 10 to 15 year period.

The general public will be glad to help — they will feel useful in these moments of stress. They will feel good to be able to assist in the correction of these thousands of leaks that now exist as well as others that are developing.

HEALTH NOTES

Time to chill out when thermometer dips

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Well, the cold weather is on us and it's time for warnings about exposure to the cold. Here's a review of the problems and some of the ways we can deal with them according to the CDC and others.

• Clothing for Cold Weather

Make sure to protect the ears, face, hands and feet in extremely cold weather. Mittens are warmer than gloves.

Wear several layers of loose clothing. Layering provides better insulation. Layers can also be removed if you become too hot. Be sure the outer layer of your clothing is tightly woven, preferably wind resistant, to reduce body-heat loss caused by wind. Wool, silk, or polypropylene inner layers of clothing will hold more body heat than cotton.

Stay dry — wet clothing chills the body rapidly. Tight clothing reduces blood circulation. It's OK to wear sleeves that are snug at the wrist but, remember, warm blood needs to be circulated to the extremities. Footwear should be waterproof and insulated. By wearing a hat, you will keep your whole body warmer. It reduces the amount of body heat that escapes from your head. Excess perspiration will increase heat loss, so remove extra layers of clothing whenever you feel too warm.

Also, avoid getting gasoline or alcohol on your skin while de-icing and fueling your car or using a snow blower. These materials in contact with the skin greatly increase heat loss from the body. When working, avoid touching cold metal surfaces with bare skin. Move into warm locations periodically. Limit the amount of time outside on extremely cold days. It's a good idea to include a thermometer and chemical hot packs in your first aid kit.

Do not ignore shivering. It's an important first sign that the body is losing heat. Persistent shivering is a signal to return indoors.

Frostnip is the freezing of the top layers of skin tissue and is normally reversible. It mostly affects the cheeks, earlobes, fingers, and toes. Symptoms include: numbness; top layer of skin becomes white and waxy; feels hard and rubbery, but deeper tissue is soft.

• Frostbite and Hypothermia

Frostbite is caused by freezing. A victim is often unaware of frostbite until someone else points it out because the frozen tissues become numb. Frostbite causes a loss of feeling and color in affected areas, white or grayish-yellow skin area, skin that feels unusually firm or waxy, numbness. It most often affects the nose, ears, cheeks, chin, fingers, or toes. Frostbite can permanently damage the body, and severe cases may require amputation. At first signs of redness or pain in any skin area, get out of the cold or protect any exposed skin. If you detect symptoms of frostbite, seek medical care. If immediate medical care is not available, proceed as follows: Get warm as soon as possible.

Unless absolutely necessary, do not walk on frostbitten feet or toes — this increases the damage. Immerse the affected area in warm — not hot — water (the temperature should be comfortable to the touch for unaffected parts of the body). Or, warm the affected area using body heat. For example, the heat of an armpit can be used to warm frostbitten fingers. Do not rub the frostbitten area with snow or massage it at all. This can cause more damage. Don't use a heating pad, heat lamp, or the heat of a stove, fireplace, or radiator for warming. Affected areas are numb and can be easily burned.

High price of tomatoes

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Tomato prices hit $3.99 a pound at Shaw's supermarkets the other day, leading me to wonder why the heck I ever got out of the business.

I used to raise tomatoes, you know, sometimes two or three square feet of them in the backyard, right over the place where they filled in the old cesspool when we were connected to the town's sewer system, which made it seem like such a likely place to grow things.

Each year, along about May or June, I'd buy the little green trays of seedlings from That Bloomin' Place and transplant them into my tomato patch and tie them to sticks so that they wouldn't fall over, as gentleman farmers have done for generations.

I bring this up at this time because, if present trends continue, I'll be able to raise a crop of tomatoes at a cost of $19.95 a pound and still make a tidy profit...

I'd water them tenderly whenever they looked thirsty, adding Miracle-Gro when I noticed their little tongues hanging out, and when they were big enough, I'd trade in the little sticks for sturdier poles to help them stand tall.

Sometimes, along about August and September, I got tomatoes as big as ping pong balls.

I figured the native tomatoes grown in my own backyard cost me at least $19.95 a pound and that doesn't include the nights I sat up defending them from aphids, gypsy moths and the neighbors' dogs. At least I didn't have to pay the outrageous supermarket prices.

Why, sometimes they were then as high as 75 or 80 cents a pound.

I bring this up at this time because, if present trends continue, I'll be able to raise a crop of tomatoes at a cost of $19.95 a pound and still make a tidy profit selling them to restaurants that would shut up shop if tomatoes weren't available.

And have you ever eaten in an Italian restaurant where every pasta dish wasn't drowned in tomato sauce? Or eaten nachos in a Mexican restaurant where a bowl of salsa didn't come along with the dish of chips? Or a fast food shop that didn't make BLTs, the T standing for tomatoes.

Already, some shops that used to put lettuce and tomatoes on hamburgers and tuna salad sandwiches are withholding that little extra unless the customer specifically asks for them. Iceberg lettuce was up to $1.79 a head at Roche Brothers supermarket the other day.

The waiters in one Tex-Mex restaurant in Boston were asking customers if they wanted salsa with their chips and charging them $2 if they said they did, which is a little like charging extra for the ham to put on rye or the mustard to put on a hot dog.

The reason for this shortage, I am told, is that hurricanes raised cain with the tomato crops in Florida, insects got into them in Mexico and heavy rains washed out the fields in California, leaving backyard tomato patches to supply the 18 pounds that each of us eats in a year.

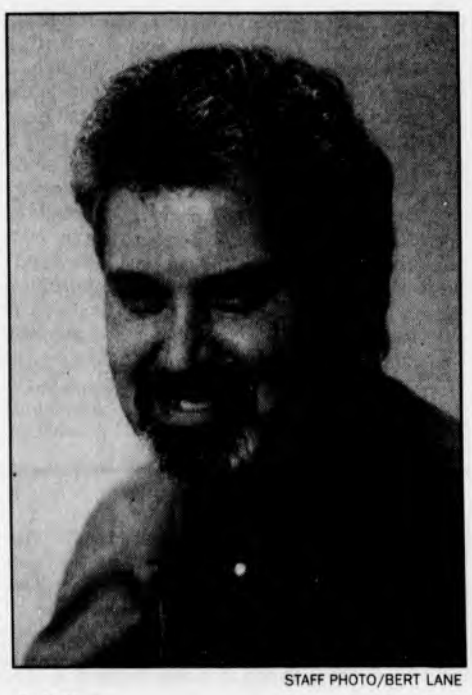
And the problem seems to be spreading.

My friend who does the shopping for our house came home the other day to report that red peppers were selling for $4.99 a pound at Roche Brothers, but green peppers were only $2.99. Let's see now, a can of red paint . . .

Mark Goodman is named sports editor

Slager also on board

Rob Slager and Mark Goodman have joined Julie Nevero in the sports department at CNC/South newspapers.



Slager is the sports editor for the Kingston Mariner, Pembroke Mariner, Weymouth News and Holbrook Sun. Goodman takes over as sports editor for the Braintree Forum, Scituate Mariner, Norwell Mariner and Cohasset Mariner. Nevero continues to oversee sports coverage for the Hingham Journal, Hanover Mariner, Marshfield Mariner and Abington-Rockland Mariner.

Goodman was most recently reporter for the Weymouth News. He is a graduate of the University of Rhode Island. He grew up in Quincy and said he always wanted to write about sports.

"I have wanted to be a sports reporter since I was middle school, and am looking forward to covering all the teams in our area," he said.

Slager most recently was the regional editor at MPG Newspapers. The father of twin 4-year-old girls, he and his wife make their home in Halifax. Previous to MPG, was an editor and writer for the Boston Herald and San Francisco Examiner. Slager was recently nominated for his second award by the New England Press Association, this time in the sports-writing category.

"We're excited to have both Rob and Mark working with us to continue to bring our readers compelling and interesting sports coverage," said Mark Skala, editor in chief. "Their efforts will only enhance what have already become strong sports sections."

Spellman is named circulation manager

Mike Spellman, formerly a sports editor with CNC/South, has been promoted to circulation manager for CNC's South Shore and Cape Cod publication.

During this tenure, Spellman was nominated for three New England Press Association awards

Spellman served as a sports editor for nearly four and a half years in the Marshfield office, overseeing the sports sections in the Braintree Forum, Holbrook Sun, Norwell Mariner, Cohasset Mariner, Scituate Mariner, Kingston Mariner and Pembroke Mariner.

During this tenure, Spellman was nominated for three New England Press Association awards. The Scituate Mariner took home first place for Best Sports Section in 2001. Spellman also twice received Honorable Mentions from NEPA for Best Sports Columns.

Previous to coming to CNC, he worked as a reporter for the Brockton Enterprise newspaper and Celtics Pride magazine.

Spellman, 41, lives in Plymouth with his wife and four sons. He is active year round in youth athletics and Special Olympics in Plymouth.

"I'm looking forward to this new opportunity in our newspaper operations," Spellman said. "I know my experiences in the editorial department will serve me well in this new role."

Spellman will be working with CNC's entire circulation team, headed by vice president Al Getler, to continue to meet the ever-changing needs of the marketplace and readers.

Being paid to listen to David Brudnoy was a labor of love

OVER THE FENCE

CINDY MCMANUS

I got paid to listen to David Brudnoy.

I'm involved in an interesting line of work. My other job (other than working from time to time for the Hingham Journal) is my work as a "news monitor" for a large company based in New York. I crank out—literally—5,000 words of text daily, five days a week for a company I have never visited and a boss whom I have never met.

I guess you could call this work life in the 21st century.

My job is to listen to radio programming, writing quick stories on the fly about what I have heard on a given program. I take that copy and dump it via a computer modem that feeds my work into a huge computer in Kentucky, which in turn churns my text and shoots it out to news organizations, public relations firms and corporations across the country, all of them hungry to hear "the news" and how a particular story gets spun in a particular market.

I offer this little bit of insight into my line of work so as not to sound totally nuts when I say that from 7 p.m. to 10:00pm, five nights a week for the last 7 years I have turned on my radio to listen to David Brudnoy and report to that far away company on what is being said.

I got paid to listen to David Brudnoy and last Wednesday's show was, sadly, the final time.

The man who was and still is arguably the best talk show host in America revealed to listeners (many of them from the town of Hingham and who gladly listened for free) announced that he was tying up loose ends, preparing to die.

One of those loose ends was of course to help bring closure for his listeners, many of whom have listened for his entire 29-year career in Boston talk radio.

Less than a day after telling his listeners that the cancer he had fought had now traveled throughout his body, Brudnoy did indeed pass away, orchestrating his final program and his last day on earth, just as he orchestrated every other day of his life: On his terms.

I think what I liked best about the program, and by extension the mind of Brudnoy, is that the debate was always about ideas, never about personalities.

As one of his regular listeners, I was familiar with many of his little quirks, some annoying (his ongoing rant about Michael Moore's Fahrenheit 9/11) others thoroughly charming. (His grasp of the nuances of the English language gave weight to the phrase, 'why use a penny word when a dollar word will do?')

I was also very familiar with his life with AIDS and then last year, a life with cancer, illnesses he defied with a toughness that would make a US Marine proud.

He never let mere disease define who he was.

After he returned to the airwaves this past February, I and his millions of listeners in 38 states thought he had whipped the rare form of cancer from which he suffered. Although I grumbled at the time to my husband that I would now have to return to writing text with the kind of depth and clarity of thought that his substitute hosts lacked, I was secretly pretty glad for the change. I may have gotten paid to listen but the compensation wasn't simply monetary. One night I might be writing about what was being said about Iraq, another night copy about a show on his guilty pleasure, The Sopranos.

As a dyed-in-the-wool Massachusetts liberal (with a requisite bleeding heart) his libertarian views on such subjects as the war in Iraq and affirmative action would often send my blood pressure into the stratosphere, hollering down to my husband 'you aren't going to believe what he's saying now' as I fought the urge not to join the debate by picking up the telephone and dialing 254-5678.

But I loved the diversity of the subject matter and I can say that I always learned something new, finding myself often forced to examine a point of view from another perspective just by listening to the probing, insightful questioning of a man who could dissect a liberal argument with surgical precision and then eviscerate it with one or two carefully uttered sentences.

I think what I liked best about the program, and by extension the mind of Brudnoy, is that the debate was always about ideas, never about personalities. In a radio culture that encourages cheap shots and petty attacks on those who hold opposing points of view, his program was all about leaving the listener thoroughly informed—and too bad that you might not like hearing all sides, you're going to anyway.

I liked that about The David Brudnoy show. I liked that about the man himself.

There are people you are sorry you didn't get to know better, sad that you never will, regretful that you didn't drop a line saying 'I can't stand what you say but I'll be damned if you don't have a point sometimes.'

David Brudnoy is one of those people.

I might be paid to listen — but no amount of money in the world can force me to enjoy listening just for the sheer fun of it.

It was always fun to listen to Bruds.

'How much government can Santa afford next year?'

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

MICHAEL P. NORTON

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

As many a shopper can attest these days, the holiday season in this age of round-the-clock commerce boils down to reconciling two main competing interests: wish lists and money.

The dynamic is in play in a different respect on Beacon Hill, where December seems to be about which public policies might be landing under the proverbial tree, and how much state government Santa can afford next year. This was a week when money, more than usual, was in the news in a political sense.

Department of Conservation and Recreation Commissioner Katherine Abbott told lawmakers the state is facing a backlog of park and rec maintenance projects worth $800 million and has "thin" resources to make a dent in the wish list. "We're working hard, but it's going to take us some time to get to that point of having a world class parks system," she said. Of particular concern is the "terrible condition" of several pools, she said, estimating overall pool repair costs at $100 million.

An independent team of attorneys seeking to recover payments on the $14.6 billion Big Dig has secured $3.4 million to date, a sum praised by the team's supporters and considered paltry by the project's detractors. Last week, the "cost recovery" team led by former Judge Edward M. Ginsburg made it known that it will cite management oversight failures by project overseers Bechtel/Parsons Brinckerhoff (BPB) in a suit seeking at least $100 million in damages. That suit would add to one filed in March seeking $150 million from BPB for "failure to disclose accurate and truthful estimates" of project costs and another $14 million sought in 10 other cases. None of those suits address damages or remediation for tunnel leaks, which continue to be evaluated.

This was a week when money, more than usual, was in the news in a political sense.

The Massachusetts Human Services Coalition announced that its advocacy group membership has risen from 100 to 190 and the larger coalition plans a grass roots lobbying approach to build support for tax reform and higher taxes in the year ahead. Coalition leaders say new revenues are needed to erase waiting lists, bring back programs that help the needy and prevent larger budgetary problems.

Gov. Mitt Romney announced the 200 members of the Legislature will receive a 4.1 percent increase in their base pay come January. Under the constitution, the governor is required to adjust the salaries of lawmakers every two years based on fluctuations in median household income. The raise works out to just over 2 percent a year for the 2005-2006 session.

State Department of Revenue officials announced they're pretty certain that personal income tax exemptions will rise in January, as economic growth is about to trigger a tax cut included as part of a $1.2 billion package of tax increases in 2002. Individuals will be able to exempt an additional $275 in 2005 and married couples filing jointly an additional $550. That's a savings of $15 a year for individuals and $29 for married couples. If economic growth continues to exceed 2.5 percent a year, exemptions would return to their pre-tax hike levels in 2008, and the income tax would fall back to 5 percent in 2014, at which time voter-approved charitable contribution tax deductions would resume. Republicans want larger tax cuts sooner.

Charitable organizations received an average of 29 percent of the money raised through telemarketing campaigns last year, up from 26 percent in 2002, according to a report released by Attorney General Thomas Reilly. The state cannot limit the amount of contributions fundraisers can retain, but the independent Better Business Bureau's Wise Giving Alliance, which advises potential donors, recommends that charitable organizations spend 65 percent of all contributions on program activities.

During a forum at the Parker House, education experts agreed that funding will always play a major role in delivering adequate public education to all children. But there's widespread disagreement over whether the emphasis should be on additional monies, or management, accountability and best practices reforms, as the state seeks to see all of its students achieve academic proficiency. The state awaits a court ruling on education adequacy that may leave it on the hook for $2 billion in new costs.

The state inched down the road toward universal early childhood education by airing a legislative report that endorses the policy as a top priority while cautioning that it may cost $1 billion to implement over 10 years. There's widespread agreement that getting more kids enrolled in preschools will boost academic achievement later and eventually shore up the state's economic strength. There's no agreement about where the funds will come from to pay for the expansion.

A year after delivering tax revenue projections that were off by more than $700 million, economists and state budget writers huddled for their annual estimating exercises. Economists predicted tax revenue growth over the next 18 months of between 3.5 percent and 5.4 percent. That's less than half the rates of annual growth the state enjoyed in the mid to late-1990s. And budget writers worried that current and potential spending pressures may well consume the likely new revenues, and then some.

The Board of Higher Education dismissed warnings from the Corner Office about unrealistic budget requests and recommended a 9.5 percent boost in fiscal 2006. Like health care and K-12 education proponents, supporters of public higher education believe that momentum, after years of cuts and stalled progress, is building for their initiatives and spending requests next year. UMass submitted a separate budget request seeking $423 million from the state next year, a 7.7 percent increase. All the news was not about budgets and cents.

Hypothermia — Since frostbite and hypothermia both result from exposure, it's important to determine whether someone also shows signs of hypothermia. Hypothermia is a more serious medical condition involving abnormally low body temperature and requires emergency medical assistance. Body temperature that is too low affects the brain, making the victim unable to think clearly or move well. Thus, hypothermia is particularly dangerous because a person may not know it is happening and won't be able to do anything about it.

Hypothermia occurs most commonly at very cold environmental temperatures, but can occur even at cool temperatures (above 40 F) if a person becomes chilled from rain, sweat, or submersion in cold water. Warning signs for hypothermia in adults are shivering/exhaustion, confusion/fumbling hands, memory loss/slurred speech, drowsiness. Hypothermia in infants is manifested by bright red, cold skin or very low energy. If you notice signs of hypothermia, call 911; it's an emergency.

• Wind Chill

As the speed of the wind increases, it can carry heat away from your body much more quickly. When there are high winds, serious weather-related health problems are more likely, even when temperatures are only cool. For a Wind Chill Chart (shows the difference between air temperature and perceived temperature and amount of time until frostbite occurs), Wind Chill Calculator, and information on the updated Wind Chill Temperature Index, see www.nws.noaa.gov/om/windchill.

Knowing what's wrong and what to do is an important part of protecting your health and the health of others. Awareness counts.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on two roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$2.6 MILLION FOR DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTION (S 2400)

Senate 8-30, rejected an amendment increasing funding for the Department of Correction by $2.6 million (from $429.6 million to $432.2 million). Amendment supporters said the $2.6 million is needed in order to hire 100 correction officers to begin to fill some 300 vacancies and noted that the current staffing levels are insufficient. They argued that the additional funding would help implement reforms suggested by a correction reform commission and ensure that prisons are run properly and that the public is protected. Some amendment opponents said the funding is already $1.8 million more than last year's funding and is sufficient. Others said that the Legislature should not simply throw more money at prisons but should take more time to read the details of the report of the reform commission prior to taking action. Some said that the additional $2.6 million does not reform anything and argued that the Legislature should be looking at ways to reduce the prison population through rehabilitation of prisoners. (A "Yea" vote is for the $2.6 million. A "Nay" vote is against the $2.6 million).

UNCAP LOTTERY LOCAL AID (S 2400)

Senate 39-0, approved an amendment to a provision that removes the cap on the amount of Lottery revenue that is distributed as local aid to cities and towns. The provision removes the cap over a five-year period beginning in fiscal year 2008. The amendment accelerates the process by beginning the five-year phase-in two years earlier in fiscal year 2006. Amendment supporters said that the Lottery was established in 1971 with the promise that all revenue would go to cities and towns. They noted that the Legislature has capped and reduced Lottery aid to communities since fiscal 2002 and diverted it to the General Fund in order to help balance the state budget during the fiscal crisis. They said it is time to restore these million of dollars to cities and towns and noted the proposed amendment would do so two years earlier than the original provision. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ELDERLY AND DISABLED ABUSE (S 1083)- The House gave near final approval to a Senate-approved bill increasing the amount of civil penalties the Attorney General may seek against anyone that abuses an elderly or disabled person in a long term care facility. Other provisions include allowing the AG to prosecute not just the offender but the owners if their actions or inaction lead to the abuse; expanding the law to include the elderly and disabled in all long term care facilities rather than just nursing homes and creating a new crime of indecent assault and battery on a person over 60 or a disabled person. Supporters said this would protect the elderly and disabled and get tough with offenders that harm them. They argued it sends a message that the state will not tolerate the abuse of these most vulnerable citizens. The measure needs only final House and Senate approval prior to going to Gov. Romney.

WRONGFUL FELONY CONVICTIONS (H 5148)- The House approved a bill establishing a system allowing a person that has served time in prison to seek compensation of up to $500,000 for damages against the state for a wrongful felony conviction and imprisonment. The measure also allows the court to order the state to provide services to address any emotional or physical damages to a claimant caused by the conviction and prison sentence and to give him or her a 50 percent reduction on tuition fees at any state colleges. Supporters said that current law presents many obstacles to filing and collecting these damages. They noted that there are currently at least 22 men who have been released from jail over the past several years after serving extensive jail time for crimes they did not commit. They argued that these men would never be given back the years that they lost but noted it is time for the state to step forward and ensure that they are given at least some small measure of compensation. The Senate has approved a different version of the proposal and the House version now goes to the Senate for consideration.

WHEELCHAIRS (H 2650)- The House gave initial approval to legislation requiring that a wheelchair face forward when a vehicle is transporting a person in a wheelchair. Supporters said that some transport vans are equipped for the wheelchairs to face sideways— a position that offers the least amount of protection from crash forces. They noted that crash tests prove that a person is less prone to injury when his or her wheelchair faces forward. The measure imposes a $100 fine on anyone who violates the provision.

AUTOMATIC PAY HIKE FOR LEGISLATORS- Gov. Romney announced that the state's 200 legislators would receive an automatic 4.1 percent annual pay raise for the years 2005 and 2006. The hike will increase current rank and file members' $53,380.80 annual salaries to $55,569.41. All 40 senators and many representatives also receive additional stipends mostly ranging from $7500 to $15,000 if they serve as committee chairs or in other leadership positions. Romney is required to establish the raise under the terms of a constitutional amendment approved by the voters in 1998. The amendment requires legislative salaries to be increased or decreased biennially at the same rate as the state's median household income for the preceding two-year period— as ascertained by the governor. The median income for the applicable years 2003 and 2004 cannot yet be definitively determined because 2004 has not yet ended. The governor's office acknowledges that the median income figure on which the hike is based is actually an informed estimate. The new $55,569.41 salary represents an increase of $9159.41 or almost 20 percent over the $46,410 salary that legislators received when the constitutional amendment was approved in 1998.

The Memory Tree at the South Shore Community Center

Each week the Cohasset Mariner will run a list of contributors to The Memory Tree.

This holiday season will be enriched by remembering, in a tangible way, the joy our loved ones have shared with us in seasons past.

Commemorative lights will shine on The Memory Tree on the lawn of the South Shore Community Center. As contributions are received, bulbs will be illuminated throughout the season and the names of the donors will be published in the Cohasset Mariner. Your tax-deductible contribution will help continue quality programs at SSCC. The star atop the 2004 Memory Tree will shine in honor of our departed loved ones whom you wish to honor. Participation options are:

Individual: Forget me not white lights for a gift of $5;

Angel: Individuals, businesses or professionals giving $15 or more, forget me not white lights;

Archangel: Individuals, businesses, professionals giving $50 or more, forget me not white lights.

Generosity will be acknowledged by white lights on The Memory Tree and on the scroll published weekly.

Please make checks payable to The South Shore Community Center, P.O. Box, 631, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

There are now more than 20 lights shining on the Memory Tree. They have room for lots more. They will be adding lights to the tree each week through the month of December.

SCIENCE CENTER

The following activities are taking place at the South Shore Natural Science Center off Jacobs Lane in Norwell. For more information, or to register, call the Center at (781) 659-2559.

Winter Solstice Celebration

On Friday, Dec. 17 from 6-8 p.m., the science center will host a number of activities to celebrate the arrival of the winter solstice. Festivities will include watching the night sky, telling stories around the campfire, sipping hot cocoa and eating delicious munchies.

Come light a colorful lantern on the darkest day of the year and together we'll end the evening with a brilliant parade. Participants are asked to bring a recycled plastic bottle (2 liter) for lantern-making.

The cost of the event is $10 for members and $12 for non-members. The cost for a family of four is $30 for members, $36 for non-members.

Winter Vacation Week: Home is Where the Science Is!

During winter vacation week, — Dec. 27 – 31 — the science center will have a number of activities planned for young science enthusiasts, grades 1-5.

Topics for the classes will include: Bathtub Science (12/27), Cupboard Chemistry (12/28), Where the Wild Things Are (12/29), Leftover Science (12/30) and Lunchbox Plants (12/31)

Costs for each half day — 9:30am-12:30pm — are $28 for members and $32 for non-members. To come for a full day — 9:30am-3:30pm — the cost is $45 for members, $50 for non-members.

There will also be separate morning classes for kindergartners at the center, at a cost of $28 for members and $32 for non-members, for each half day.

Youth movement for CHS hockey

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

If the Skippers hockey team is to return to the state tournament this season, a number of underclassmen will be counted on to step up into big roles.

Cohasset has five seniors leading the way: captains Ted Straughn and Joe Durkin, assistant captains Crandon Leahy and Tim Pilczak, along with Mark Donovan and Brendan Michaud.

Beyond that, it is a host of juniors, sophomores and freshmen, including a sophomore and two freshmen who will be centering the second through fourth lines.

Head coach Ben Virga says he will be counting on his seniors to set a good example, and thinks he has enough talent qualify for postseason play.

"I would be extremely disappointed if we didn't make the tournament," Virga said Wednesday. "With the senior leadership and the talent we have, if we did not finish second in the league and qualify, I'd be disappointed."

Straughn will center the Skippers' first line, with his brother, Brian, to his left and Durkin on the right wing. Virga says that line will likely play close to half of each game, adding that he thinks Straughn will once again lead the team in scoring. He had 12 goals and 13 assists last season.

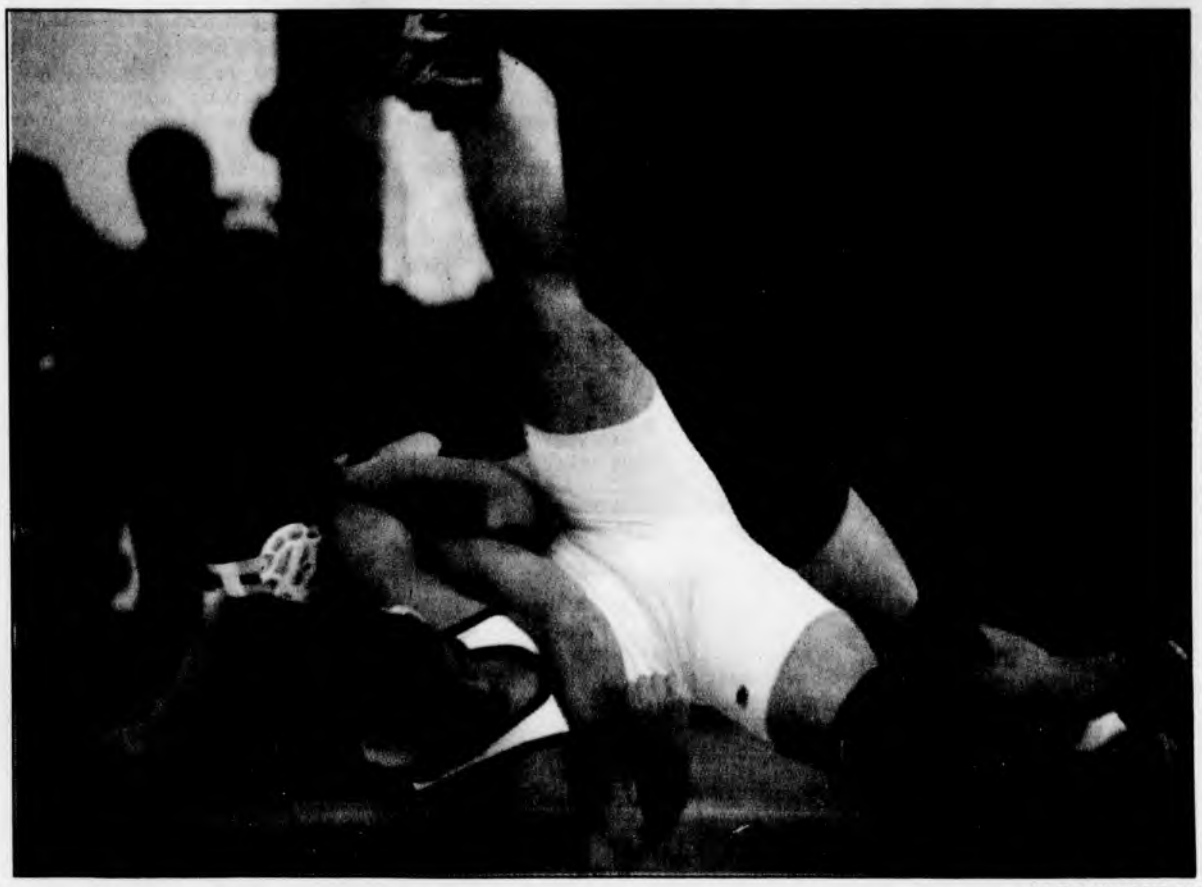
Leahy and Pilczak will lead a defense crew that their coach is counting on to improve its performance from last season.

"Last year, we gave up way too many second, third and fourth shots," Virga said. "I think we'll be able to do a better job of protecting the blue line this season."

Junior Brandon Smith, who converted from forward to defenseman last year, will also see his share of ice time. Junior Zack Murray and sophomore Conor Holway round out the group.

One of the more interesting subplots that could develop during the season is at the goaltending position. Michaud returns to the program after a year away, and will be competing with returning junior net-minder Stefan Parnell.

Should Cohasset make the tournament, who plays in net will depend which goalie gets hot at the right time.



"It's a competition between the two of them," Virga said. "It gives us depth at the position. I think we have two good goalies who will push each other to get better."

The coach said each will play at least seven games, and then a decision will likely be made on who gets the call down the stretch.

After that, there are three lines that could vary in order as the year goes on.

"The only thing I know is that Ted's line is the first line. For all three lines after that, it's up to the players," Virga said. "It's almost going to be like a year-long tryout with the other three lines, and there could be some Cohasset's Matt Casey drops his Mansfield opponent to the mat during the Skippers' exciting win on Saturday.

Grapplers off to 4-0 start

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

After a fifth-place finish in the state last year, Cohasset wrestling may be in for bigger and better things this season.

That would appear to be the message the Skippers are sending from their opening matches, which include a 42-33 victory over Mansfield on Saturday and a 39-30 win at B.C. High on Wednesday.

In both instances, the overall team result came down to the final match. And, again in both cases, it was sophomore Nick Cambi who came through in that last match to finish the win for Cohasset.

Wrestling in the 189-pound weight class, Cambi came from behind on Saturday and defeated his Mansfield opponent with a third-period pin.

It was a pretty similar story on Wednesday. With his teammates getting into it and cheering him on, Cambi scored another third-period pin against his B.C. High opponent to seal the deal for his team.

The accomplishment was not lost on Cohasset wrestling coach Torin Sweeney.

"Nick clinched two big matches for us with two big pins," he said after Wednesday's match.

Saturday's contest with Mansfield, a match-up of the current second-ranked (Mansfield) and third-ranked (Cohasset) Div. 3 programs in the state, was part of a quad meet at Cohasset High School. The Skippers also defeated Tri-County 54-12 and an undermanned Silver Lake team, 30-6.

It has been an encouraging start for a team that returns two state champions in their individual weight classes. Senior Joe Kehoe, who won it all at the 145-pound class last year, has been wrestling at 152 this season. He's undefeated in his matches and appears to be in similar form to last year.

"He's wrestled four good kids, and no one has been close yet," Sweeney said.

The other state champ is Matt Baroudi, who is currently out with an injury but could be back within the next month, according to his coach. The senior wrestled at 215 last year, but Sweeney says his weight is down to the 165-170 range this season.

That won't stop Baroudi from getting a spot in the lineup once he gets healthy.

"I think we'll find a place for a state champ," Sweeney said.

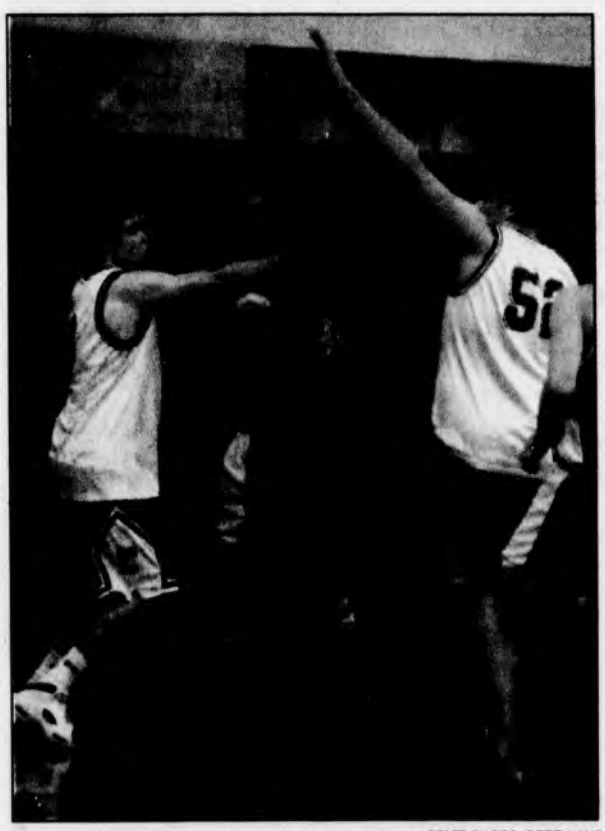
Cohasset has a wealth of talent at other weight classes as well, including (with comments from Sweeney):

Jonathan Littauer, senior (captain), 125: "He was fourth in the state two years ago, and he's 2-0 so far this year. We bumped him up to 130 against B.C. High. Experience is his biggest asset; he's wrestled so many big matches in his career."

Kevin Dinsmore, senior, 135: "Kevin is a really dynamic wrestler. Speed is probably his biggest asset. He's 4-0 against some good competition."

Shane Dorian, junior, 140: "He moved from Duxbury and should be a very good addition for us. He's 4-0 so far with four pins."

John Keniley, junior, 145: "John recorded two pins on Saturday; he's done a good job of battling and not getting pinned himself."



Colin Regan, senior, 152: "He's 3-0 and has beaten some good kids, too. He's really wrestling well."

Matt Casey, senior (captain), 171: "Matt was fourth in the sectionals last year at 160. He beat a really good kid [Wednesday] in Grant Keller."

Rounding out Sweeney's top wrestlers so far are junior George Miller (215), sophomore Ryan Mclellan (112) and junior Jake Watts (103). Watts recorded a couple big wins via pin against Mansfield and B.C. High.

Competition for Dinsmore has included his Wednesday match against B.C. High's Cohasset's Jake Cuneo (52) and Pat McCarthy defend Avon's Kevin Miranda during the first half of Tuesday's game at South Shore Voke Tech in Hanover.

Boys hoops lose nail-biter

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Chalk it up to youth and inexperience.

Down by two with five seconds to go, Cohasset had a chance to pull off a memorable season-opening victory.

Instead, they did not get a shot off before the buzzer, and the Skippers took a 52-50 loss against Avon in the first round of the South Shore Voke Tech tournament.

Junior guard Trevor Brady led the Skippers with 15 points, followed by 12 from Chris Bryan and nine from sophomore big man Justin Alexander.

Alexander and Bryan also contributed nine and eight rebounds, respectively.

Cohasset head coach Dorian Bryant said after the game his team will learn from its mistake.

"That was a little bit of inexperience," said the coach of the game's final seconds. "I think that halfway through the season, we don't make that mistake."

Overall, Bryant said he liked what he saw.

"For a young group, they played well," he said. "This was their first game together as a varsity team, and they played ver well."

After a low-scoring first half (Avon was ahead, 21-20), the action was back and forth in the second frame and featured an impressive comeback by Cohasset.

Avon has a group of quick guards and athletic big men who

Cohasset's Dinsmore, Buick honored

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 19, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top boys soccer players in Marinerland for this honor:

Kevin Dinsmore - Senior
Midfielder - Cohasset

Kevin Dinsmore

South Shore League All-Star, missed Eastern Mass. All-Star honors by one vote...Had to make the adjustment from winger to center-mid this season, and excelled at his new position...A very tough player with great stamina...Highlights include a two-goal performance against league rival Norwell, both being clutch goals...Against Scituate, scored the equalizer with less than 20 seconds remaining in the game...A former BC High student who returned to CHS last year...Also wrestles and plays lacrosse for the Skippers...Hopes to play soccer in college, and is looking at several schools in the Northeast region...Cohasset coach Rob Leary: "It probably took him six games to make the [position] adjustment; once he got comfortable in his position, he was awesome. He was the heart and soul of this team. He played 80 minutes a game, and ran through people if he had to."

Aidan Buick - Junior Forward - Cohasset

Aidan Buick

A South Shore League and Eastern Mass. All-Star...One of the league's leading scorers this season with 17 goals and 17 assists...A very skilled player with good footwork and an excellent shot...Created many goals this season with his specialty: the long throw-in...The latest in a long line of talented Buick brothers to don the blue and white for the Skippers...Cohasset coach Rob Leary: "All of our offense went through Aiden. He was often double-teamed because he was the best scoring threat on our team."

Gaston Kelly - Sophomore Forward - Hingham

Gaston Kelly

Just a sophomore, Kelly is already flirting with Hingham's scoring records...The Patriot League, Eastern Mass. and All-State All-star put up 32 points on 22 goals, 10 assists this season, pacing the Harbormen to a 16-0-2 year...His speed and skills on the front line helped Hingham trounce its PL competition, winning the East Div. crown at 6-0-2 (11-0-2 overall)...His play on the front line helped Hingham notch the top seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where it was stunned in the first round by King Phillip, 1-0...A two-year starter and PL All-star, Kelly still has a lot of soccer to play at HHS. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "Gaston is the best All-Around player we have. He gives 100 percent the whole game on both sides of the ball."

Kayne Ryan - Senior (Capt.)
Sweeper - Hingham

As the last line of defense, Ryan was just about as good as it got...A three year varsity player, Ryan has played just about every position on the field, but clicked most at sweeper this year...Ryan was a key part of a defense that allowed only 12 regular season goals, never more than one in a game...The Patriot League and Eastern Mass. All-star's play in the backfield helped his team win the Patriot League East Div. crown (6-0-2, 11-0-2 in all of PL) and earn the top seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional (16-0-2)…There, the Harbormen were upset in the first round, 1-0, by King Phillip…Was a forward/midfielder last season, putting up a number of goals…From his sweeper position this season, Ryan contributed two goals and an assist…Ryan plans to continue his soccer career in college next fall. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "He was our leader in the back and was a very strong player. Whatever the team needed, he was our guy. He was the heart of the team."

Tom Beauregard - Senior (Capt.)
Fullback - Hingham

Tom Beauregard

A four-year starter for the Harbormen, Beauregard helped the team capture the Patriot League East title at 6-0-2 (11-0-2 in all of PL)…Part of a key defense that allowed only 12 goals during the regular season, this two-time Patriot League All-star paced his team to an unbeaten season at 16-0-2, earning the top seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional…There, a Cinderella King Phillip team stunned Hingham, 1-0, in the first round…Notched two goals, one assist from the backfield…Also won the PL Sportsmanship Award…A member of the HHS hockey and lacrosse teams, Beauregard also plays with the school band…He plans to continue playing soccer in college, Providence being his top pick. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "Tom played just about every minute of every game in four years. He really stepped up. He's a good, well-rounded kid and his experience and leadership will be missed."

Joe Albert - Junior
Goalie - Hingham

Joe Albert

No. 3 in the Eastern Mass. All-star voting, it's easy to see why when you see numbers Albert put up this season …Allowed just 12 goals in 18 regular season games for an untouchable 0.67 goals against average…With his offense putting up 73 goals, Albert notched 16 wins, and five shutouts, while not allowing more than a single goal per game…The only blemishes on the Harbormen slate were a pair of 1-1 ties with Patriot League rival Silver Lake…As the backbone of the Hingham defense, Albert helped the team capture the PL East Div. title (6-0-2, 11-0-2 overall in the PL)…At 16-0-2, Hingham entered the Div. 2 South Sectional as the top seed, but were stunned in the first round by King Phillip, 1-0…Just a junior, Albert still has another year in the net at HHS. Hingham coach Ken Carlin: "He's not a big, tall guy, but he's very strong and athletic. He way he jumps, he seems a lot taller than he looks."

Willie Foreman - Junior Forward/Midfielder - Marshfield

One of the most athletic and versatile players on a Massachusetts soccer field this season, Foreman's amazing skills are almost unmatched… Routinely played up to four different positions for the Rams, but made his presence felt the most at center midfield as the main distributor…While drawing loads of attention from the opposition, Foreman was still the Rams' leading scorer, tallying 22 points on 10 goals, 12 assists, making the Old Colony League and Eastern Mass. All-star teams…Paced his team to a 11-4-3 record, while going 5-0-1 in the OCL to win the title…Foreman and Co. earned the No. 6 seed in the Div. 1 South Sectional and made a run to the to the quarterfinals, where they dropped a heartbreaking 2-1 decision to Weymouth…Plays on a trio of Club teams and will return to MHS next fall. Marshfield coach Kip Lewis: "We ran the ball through him and he gave us a lot of scoring opportunities. He was generally marked by two guys, so he had a pretty good eye for finding the open man. He's in unbelievable shape."

Willie Foreman

Paul Kilday - Junior
Sweeper - Marshfield

Paul Kilday

A two-year starter on the Rams team, Kilday spent last year in the midfield, but graciously moved to the backfield this season and was a stalwart as the last line of defense…The Old Colony and Eastern Mass. All-star was a key part of a defense that allowed just 21 goals this season, while shutting out eight opponents…Speed, strength, and solid skills were among Kilday's greatest assets and his ability to distribute the ball with uncanny accuracy made him an essential part to the Marshfield offense as well…Has an extremely strong foot and can use either his right or left to move the ball…His play in the backfield helped Marshfield notch an OCL title at 5-0-1 and draw a No. 6 seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney and appearance in the quarterfinals…A member of the Crusaders Club team since the age of 10, Kilday has captained that squad for 4 years…He has also been selected to play in the U-17 Super Y League for 2005…Kilday returns to MHS next year. Marshfield coach Kip Lewis: "Paul was a rock in the back. He has unbelievable skill and is extremely quick."

Ryan Shea/Matt Shea - Sophomores - Forwards - Hanover

As their coach stated, you can't talk about one of the Shea's without talking about the other…This dynamic twin duo's presence on the Hanover team was overwhelming…Both Patriot League All-star forwards, Ryan and Matt were the leading scorers on the Indians squad this year…Ryan tallied 34 points on 18 goals, 16 assists, while Matt followed closely with 32 points on 14 goals, 18 assists…The pair helped Hanover capture the PL West Div. title with a 7-1 mark (10-2-1 in all of the PL) and 13-4-1 overall record, drawing the No. 6 seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional, there the team reached the quarterfinals, falling to King Phillip…Matt scored a pair of goals in a first round win over Blue Hills, while Ryan added another…Just sophomores, both will return to HHS next fall. Hanover coach Jim Sylvia: "Their greatest asset is their field sense. They both know where the other is going to be and look for each other a lot. They had a great deal of success and scored a number of game winners."

Steve Virta - Senior (Capt.)
Midfielder - Hanover

Steve Virta

This four-year varsity player had a solid season at center mid and was an essential part of Hanover's three-pronged offensive attack…Finished third on the team in scoring behind the Shea twins, tallying 29 points on 14 goals, 15 assists…Much of the offense went through Virta in the middle and the results were immeasurable as Hanover trounced the competition in the Patriot League West Div., winning the crown with a 7-1 mark (10-2-1 in all of PL)…The squad was 13-4-1 overall, good for the No. 6 seed in the Div. 2 South Sectional…A three-time PL All-star, Virta scored a goal in a 6-0 first round win over Blue Hills before falling to King Phillip in the quarters, 1-0…Virta hopes to continue his soccer career in college next fall. Hanover coach Jim Sylvia: "Steve was instrumental to our scoring attack. He had great speed at a very tough position. He's well respected by the players and coaches and gave his all game in and game out."

Scott Cluff - Junior Forward - Silver Lake

Scott Cluff

Great Scott ... If that moniker's a bit over the top, how's about "Black Jack?" After scoring a school-record 21 goals, that seems to fit ... Goalies in the Patriot League still have nightmares about the "Cluff bluff," a move where his eyes go one way and the ball goes the other ... Everybody knew this Patriot League all-star was the primary scoring threat but nobody could stop him ... Led the Lakers into the Div. 2 South Section tournament with a 10-4-6 record ... Silver Lake fell to Sandwich in the first round, but not before Cluff tallied another goal, giving him 21 in 21 games. ... Combined power with a deft touch ... Scored his 20th goal just 26 seconds into the Lakers' last regular-season game, a perfect example of his explosiveness. ... Coach Jeff Doyle: "Scott was the attack for us almost all season, and he just kept getting better." ... With Cluff returning for another season, opposing goalies should prepare for more sleepless nights.

Marty Galvin - Junior
Striker - Weymouth

Marty Galvin

Only beginning to scratch the surface of his awesome potential, and that surface ran 21 goals deep this season ... Led the Wildcats to the Div. 1 South Sectional semifinals, where Weymouth fell to eventual state co-champion BC High ... Scored a remarkable four goals in only 40 minutes of play against Dedham ... Bay-State All-Star earned All-EMass honors as well ... All-New England could be right around the corner ... Big and strong, Galvin learned the art of the give-and-go this year, leaving poor goalies helpless in one-on-one situations ... Uses his head, literally, to great advantage, making him deadly in the middle on corner kicks ... Power in both feet earned him a spot on the varsity as a freshman. ... Coach Scott Shoff: "His ability to pass and get the ball back in great position has made him even more effective." ... Added seven assists in his spare time. ... If he continues to improve, heaven help the Bay State League.

Kris Hickey - Senior Defensive Midfielder - Weymouth

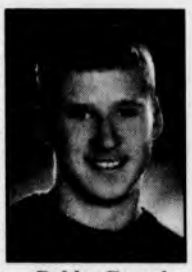
Started the season as an outside left halfback, but selflessly moved inside to solidify the defense ... Still wound up with eight goals and nine assists ... co-captain earned Bay State League all-star honor because of his tremendous all-around contribution ... May be only 5-foot-8, but built like a tank ... Ridiculous power with both feet and nice dribbling skills allowed him to jump-start the attack from deep in opposing territory. .. Completely dominated against Braintree, thwarting a goal-line shot and earning an assist on the game's only tally ... A great tackler and one-on-one defender ... Coach Steve Shoff: "He's one of those kids who can do all the things it takes for you to win." ... His leadership will be missed.



Kris Hickey

Jarred Goldstein - Junior
Offensive Midfielder - Weymouth

On a Wildcats squad dripping with talent, he earned the respect of his teammates. They voted him MVP ... Tallied eight goals and dished 13 assists to earn Bay State League all-star honors ... Just call him the quarterback ... Maybe traffic cop would be more appropriate, given the way he directs everything in the middle ... Took corner kicks as well ... His tremendous physical condition was evident by his sprints up and down the field ... The soccer equivalent of a switch hitter, striking the ball with equal effectiveness off either foot ... Many of his assists came of re-starts, where his terrific anticipation could be maximized ... His tremendous fake of a shot against Marshfield in the tournament was a thing of pure beauty and led to an assist and the decisive goal ... Coach Steve Shoff: "He was the one player on this team we just couldn't have won without." Will team up again with Marty Galvin next season, a pairing that could take Weymouth a long, long way.

Bobby Cusack - Senior Forward - Braintree

Bobby Cusack

An honorable mention for this honor last season, Cusack this year was a Bay State Conference and Eastern Mass. All-Star…The impetus behind the Wamps' midseason turnaround that vaulted them from a 2-6-1 record to the state tournament…For the year, had 19 goals and five assists…Had 13 goals in the team's 7-1-1 run down the stretch, including two hat tricks in that span…Had the game-winning goal against Newton North…Braintree's go-to guy offensively…Still deciding on college plans…An excellent all-around athlete, looking to play hockey at the next level…Braintree coach Bill MacEachern: "He was such a strong player; he was able to create offense for himself one-on-one. He was a big reason why we made the tournament."

Conor Kelly - Senior
Midfielder - Braintree

Conor Kelly

Second straight year as a Marjner All-Scholastic…Also repeated this year as a first-team Bay State Conference All-Star…Had played forward up until this year, when he was moved back to midfield because of his passing skills and overall ability to control the game from that position…Goal-scoring dropped from last season as a result (nine to five), but assists doubled, as he had 12 this year… A solid player and person with no ego, as his position change would attest…Member of the Cape Cod Crusaders club team…Looking at a number of colleges in New England area, where he will continue his soccer career…A painter who is interested in studying art…Braintree coach Bill MacEachern: "Conor assisted on a lot of Bobby's goals, and just did a great job creating on offense. He's very unselfish; he's been a great leader and a great team player for us."

Brian Zona- Senior
Sweeper- Scituate

An exceptional defender who kept his Sailors team in a lot of close, low-scoring games this year…Once again a Patriot League All-Star this season (as he was last year), the only member of the Sciutate team to earn that honor …Very strong and physical presence that is difficult to move off the ball…Great on 50-50 balls…a very good customer in his own end who rarely makes bad decisions…also a good hockey player for the SHS team, along with twin brother Tim... Scituate coach Jim Willis: "For us to have the records we have the last two years and for opposing coaches to still vote for Brian as one of the league's top five players these two years, I think, says everything you need to know about him."

Ben Healey - Junior
Midfielder - Norwell

A very good two-way player from his midfield position…South Shore League All-Star this season, along with teammate Andrew Caldwell…,A very though and aggressive player…Just solid all-around skills and athleticism…Had to step into an even bigger role as the season progressed, as the Clippers were without a couple of their top players down the stretch…Put on a strong display in team's season finale with undefeated Hingham, which Norwell lost by a goal…One of three captain-elects for next season

Honorable Mention:

Alex Hill - Sr. - Forward - Abington
Steve Atardo - Defensive midfield - Braintree
Trevor Brady - Defender - Cohasset
Sam MacDonald - Defender - Cohasset
Dan Hegerich - Sr. - Sweeper - Hanover
Sean Fitzmaurice - Jr. - Forward - Hingham
James Wilson - Jr. - Midfield - Hingham
Bill Maddock - Sr. - Midfield - Marshfield
Tom Travers - Sr. (Capt.) - Goalie - Marshfield
Andrew Caldwell - Goalkeeper - Norwell
Alex Piche - Striker - Pembroke
Filipe Faria - Sr. - Midfield - Rockland
Jon Nutting - Sr. - Midfield - Rockland

crashed the boards, and the Skippers at times had trouble coping. Turnovers and missed shots led to a scoring drought in the middle of the second half, and Cohasset found themselves down 41-34 with 7:30 remaining.

The Skippers came back with a 10-0 run, however, to take a three-point lead with 4:27 left.

Alexander picked up a couple baskets in that stretch, showing some range with an 18-footer from the top of the key. Freshman point guard Mike Bilodeau had an outside jumper of his own in that run, which was capped by a Brady three off a nice pick from Alexander.

Quickly after that, however, Avon's press - which they had been running unsuccessfully throughout the game - suddenly became effective for a two-minute stretch. They took the lead right back with a 10-3 run of their own.

An Alexander free throw and steal and lay up by freshman Pat McCarthy brought the Skippers within one, 51-50, with two minutes left. That would be, however, the last points Cohasset would score.

It was a commendable effort, but one that will have to be improved on if the Skippers are to compete in the South Shore League.

"This loss is something I think we'll get through," Bryant said. "Midway through the season, these guys will be veterans."

Cohasset squares off tonight at home against Mashpee in their first league game of the season. Saturday, the boys take on Holbrook in the consolation game of the SSVT tourney.

position switches."

For now, the second line is centered by sophomore T.J. Kennedy, with classmate Austin Lanzilotti and junior Mark Bouchard. Bouchard registered double-digits in goals last year.

Kennedy and Lanzilotti were fourth liners last season, and Virga says they will be able to step up into a bigger role.

"I think T.J. and Austin will get better and better with more confidence," he said.

The checking line consists of freshman center Charlie Czerkawski and wings Donovan and Dan Sullivan.

Last year's team went 12-7-3 and won a tourney game before losing to Bourne, and Virga says he and his team are primed to do more.

"The deeper you go in the tournament, the more fun it is," he said. "They are very motivated."

Girls hoops win season opener

Led by Casey Anderson and Chelsea Grossman, the Cohasset girls basketball team started their season on the right path with a 50-44 win over South Shore Voke Tech in the SSVT tournament.

Anderson and Grossman both scored in the high teens; Anderson doing so despite fouling out with five minutes left in the game.

Head coach John Levangie also praised Mia Leib-Lappen and Nicole Whitney for their performances on the defensive end.

These four, along with Katie James and Lacey Richardson, were the only players used by Levangie as the coach allows some of the younger kids to develop.

"We had six players, and they did a great job," Levangie said.

The short bench could be a problem the next few days, and the girls play Friday (at Mashpee), Saturday (SSVT tournament) and Monday (at Hopedale).

Levangie said he will know a lot more about his team after seeing how they cope with that schedule.

Peewee, Midget cheerleaders win big in recent competition

A big congratulations to the Scituate/Cohasset Youth Cheerleaders, Peewees (grades 5 and 6) and Midgets (grade 7).

Both teams went to two competitions last month.

The first was at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston. There, the Peewees came in first place and the Midgets in third.

The second competition was the Old Colony Youth Cheerleading Association competition at Brockton High School. Both teams finished in first place.

Both towns can be proud of the success of both teams. The cheerleaders practiced countless hours after school, and their hard work and commitment showed during their performance.

Thanks go out to all the coaches for their dedication and time they invested in the competition cheerleaders.

The cheerleaders would like to thank the following coaches:

Peewee - Sheila Mahoney, Linda Harris, and Barbara Lemire

Peewee junior - Michelle Mahoney, Nicole Dias, Liz Burns, Sheila Harris, Brittany Brown and Caitlin Chase

Midget - Maria Connolly, Terri Pelletier, and Laurie Palmer

Midget junior - Andrea Skane

A very special thanks to Cindy Harrington, the teams' choreographer, whose talent provided the teams with winning routines.

Thanks are also in order for the Sciutate/Cohasset Youth Football and Cheerleading board members for supporting the cheerleaders throughout the season.

Middle School hoop takes it to Weymouth

Exciting basketball took place Sunday in Sullivan gym. The boys Patriot League squads took on Weymouth and showed the crowd some great basketball.

The 6th graders took to the floor first and scored on their first three possessions. Gabe Seksay won the opening tip and Robert Jones went in for an easy layup. On Weymouth's next possession, Jones stole the ball and fed Mike Monaco for two. Monaco returned the favor, stole the ball and fed Jones for 2. Cohasset held Weymouth scoreless for the first three and half minutes of action.

Derek Youngman, Anders Goetz, Robbie Hill and Ben Campbell came in and kept Weymouth at bay. Campbell was a force under the boards, denying Weymouth any second chance scoring opportunities. Late in the first half, Weymouth made a run at Cohasset, closing the score to 20-17.

Weymouth brought on their "big man" who was a presence, forcing turnovers and challenging Cohasset's lightening pace. Cohasset regrouped and pressured Weymouth, finishing the half up by 5. In the second half, Cohasset played strong defensively, with the quick hands of Goetz and Youngman forcing turnovers.

Offensively, Cohasset capitalized on great passing. Tuggy Campbell fed Seksay twice under the basket for scores before their opponent caught on. Sam Richardson, and Drew Cobin kept the ball moving on offense forcing defensive shifts that Cohasset took advantage of. Eric Wasel continues to be a force under the boards, playing the low post with great confidence. Cohasset easily won the game, improving to 3-1 on the season. Jones and Youngman were the high scorers for Cohasset.

The 7th grade squad took to the floor next, looking for their first win. It was a defensive struggle early on, with the scoring low. A 12-foot jumper by John Kearney was the lift the Cohasset squad needed to get the momentum going. Johnny Maher converted a steal to a fast two points, followed by a Brendan Doonan steal for 2 and Maher again for 2. At the six-minute mark, Weymouth was up by 4.

Dana Valentine let Weymouth know that Cohasset was here to play as his sheer physical presence intimidated them. Valentine controlled the boards, offensively and defensively, registering double digit rebounds. Cohasset was up by one at the half.

In the second half frequent rotations kept fresh legs on the court. Jeff Charles was an aggressive predator, diving after every loose ball in sight. Cohasset worked a strong transition game, wearing down Weymouth with their fast break prowess.

Playing aggressive man-to-man defense and then quickly confusing Weymouth with zone defensive, the Cohasset team kept Weymouth to 11 points in the second half. Cohasset ball distribution was strong in the second half, as everyone scored.

Cohasset easily took the lead and kept it. In addition to Valentine in the low post, Taylor McQuade and Chris Brown used their size to keep Weymouth at bay. Eamon Davis, Will Wise and Kearney ran the offense. Kevin O'Connell was flagrantly fouled late in the game, and confidently sank both free throws and gave Cohasset the ball back. Eamon Davis wrapped it up for Cohasset with a last-second layup, giving Cohasset the win. Maher and Valentine were the high scorers for Cohasset.

Coming off a strong win against Whitman, the 8th graders were looking to continue with the trend. Weymouth had something else planned though. The matchup started with a defensive battle as the ball exchanged hands with little scoring. Cohasset's starting five of Danny Brady, Marcus Charles, Ryan Daley, Nick Simonds and Mike Fithian ran the floor with Weymouth. Brady's quick hands led to Weymouth turnovers.

Weymouth regrouped, however, and began to dump the ball in the basket. The second rotation included Evan Richardson, Nick Savage, Dan Martin, John Sturino and Adam Berger.

As usual Savage was strong under the boards and Richardson created many scoring opportunities for the team, but the ball didn't drop for the Blue & White. Cohasset lost to Weymouth.

Coach Richardson is confident that the "team will pull together for a cohesive team effort. Each game, each practice brings more positives to build on".

Check out the boys Patriot League Sunday at CMHS. The action begins at 1 pm.

COASTAL STARS REPORT

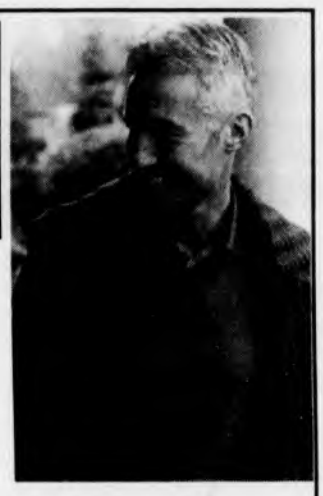
Coastal Star Mite B

After winning a non-league Thanksgiving Tournament, you might have thought this team would come out flat for their regularly scheduled game vs. Canton.

Coach Joe Redfearn won't allow that; he is hockey's version of Bill Belichick's "One game at a time" mantra. Just ninety seconds into the 1st frame, Robert Reidy dug the puck out of the offensive corner and feathered a pass to Michael Lund in the slot. Lund didn't waste anytime sending an "Espo" like back hand 5-hole. Well, that was just the beginning. At 10:59 Kal Maier stole the puck from Canton, rushed the net and connected with a streaking Aidan Beresford. Beresford roofed a blistering shot to make the score 2-0. Canton won the face off but quickly lost the puck to a hustling Patrick Graham. Graham made a back-handed pass to Sam Rice who then sent a wrist shot to the back of the net in a hurry. With two minutes to play in the first period, Declan Leahy collided with three Canton players and as usual, he came out of the corner with the puck. Leahy went coast to coast and fired a shot "glove side" to make the score 4-0.

The 2nd period mirrored the 1st, just 65 seconds after the puck dropped, Curtis Golden dug the puck out of the corner, split two canton defenders, fired a shot off the cross bar and when the streaking puck passed by Tucker Ambrose, he quickly buried the rebound. This gave the Stars a comfortable 5-0 lead. Canton started to rally, but Stars goalie Matt Doyle was intent on preserving his shut out and made several key stick saves. With 1:09 remaining in the second period, Stars left winger Jeffrey Powers passed to Bryan Bowman. Bowman gained the blue line and fed a lead pass back to Powers who then rifled a shot top left corner ending the 2nd period, 6-0.

The 3rd period began with outstanding defensive efforts from Joey Redfearn and James Hussey. Both players exemplified two way hockey from buzzer to buzzer. With five minutes to play in the third frame, the Evitts brothers both made great assists. Brendan Evitts fed Sam Rice for his 2nd goal and Jack Evitts got the helper for Jeffrey Power's 2nd goal.



The Stars won the game 8-0, and are now 7-1-1 on the season.

Coastal Stars Mite C2 Game Recap December 12, 2004

The Coastal Stars Mite C2 team lost a hard fought game on Sunday to a very strong Hanover Mite C team 7 to 2 at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham. The two teams skated to a scoreless tie in the first period with the Coastal Stars applying good offensive pressure for most the period. The Star's line of Kyle Bowman, Brian, Mathews, Jo Jo Carbone, Seamus Ryan, and Shaelyn Tobin had several scoring chances during the period. Chris Phillips made several great saves in goal while Robert Bothwell and Derek Benson stood out on their shifts during the period.

Hanover got off to a fast start in the second period scoring two quick goals with in the first minute and netting a third goal at the 7 minute mark.. The stars fought back however, with Gunner Mckenzie scoring a goal on a rebound from a Mats Nelson shot cutting the deficit to just two goals going into the final period. The Stars line of Tucker Antico, Evan Antonuccio, Andrew Kuppens, Mathew Johnson, and Harrison Sheldon played aggressive during the period with Harrison making several key plays in the neutral zone to keep Hanover on the defensive.

After a quick Hanover goal to start the third period, Shaelyn Tobin scored a nice goal with a blistering shot from the blue line bringing the Stars back to within just two goals. However, Hanover scored the final three goals to put the game away.

MaxLax wins tournament

The ProShots Select team, a regional boys lacrosse program featuring top players from the South Shore, successfully defended their title in the season ending Bruno Turkey Shoot, an invitational for youth and high school level lacrosse teams sponsored by Brown University.

For the second year in a row, this high school level lacrosse juggernaut produced an impressive sweep of the competition from other towns around New England to easily advance to the finals where they completely dominated the play from the opening whistle. Anchored by the goaltending prowess of Roly St. Claire-Barre (who allowed only 14 goals total) and the relentless defense of the "Gray Bros" (Zach and Jake), the ProShots shut down their opponents in several lopsided victories that had opposing coaches shaking their heads in disbelief.

The transition game was controlled by a veteran core of middies, including Peter Ernst, Sean Silvia, Drew Wagner, Mike Grimm, and Mark Flibotte who made it almost impossible for the opposing teams to gain any momentum. The "Finishers" included attack sharpshooters Taylor Sears, Chris Mills, Teddy Galligan, and Matt Burgess that routinely put on a scoring/passing exhibition that would make most college programs green with envy.

In the end, the ProShots took home the championship hardware for the second straight year and they are anxiously looking forward to their Spring season for more of the same.

The ProShots are youth and high school level select teams sponsored by MaxLax Lacrosse, New England's premier lacrosse provider for boys and girls of all ages. Registrations for the next session of indoor league, instruction, and tournaments play is currently underway and teams and individuals can reserve their space on-line at www.maxlax.net or by calling 781-829-2060. Information can also be found by visiting our new indoor sports facility the ProShots Athletic Center conveniently located in Pembroke, MA featuring the area's largest, and only, non-boarded playing arena to give our athletes the real game experience.

Jared Kinch, the younger brother of a former B.C. High wrestling captain and teammate of Dinsmore's. The CHS senior attended B.C. High his first two years of high school.

Dinsmore won via a first-period pin and said it was just another match despite his connections to Kinch and the B.C. High program.

"I know their family, but it wasn't weird or anything like that," Dinsmore said. "It was all good."

As for the team, when all is said and done, Sweeney expects to be in the mix with other state wrestling powers, including Burlington, Mansfield, Foxboro and Quabbin Regional.

"It's probably going to be one of the closest state meets in a long time," Sweeney said. "It's going to come down to who is the healthiest and who comes through in the big matches."

Cohasset has a big regular season match Thursday against Duxbury, another powerful squad. And, of course, there is the annual Marshfield tournament the week after Christmas.

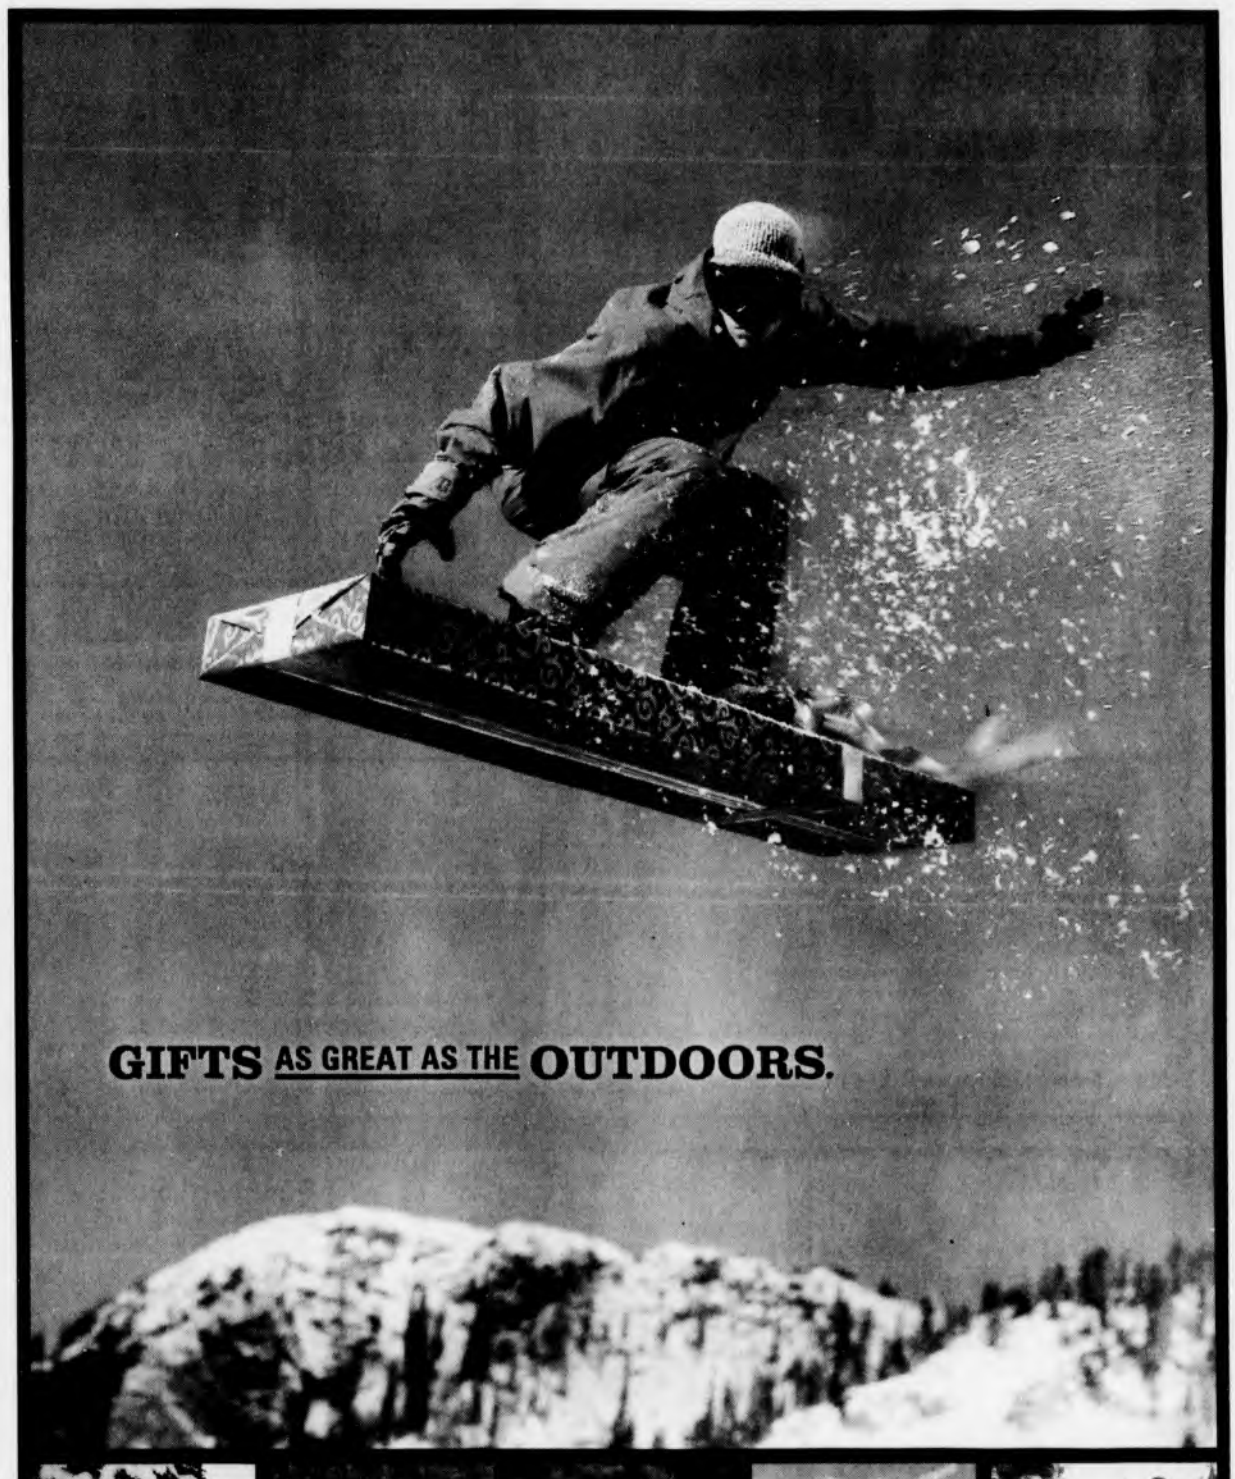
Docket No. 04E0105-PP1

To Dane Williams of Marblehead in the County of Essex, respondent; and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Eleanor Herrmann, General Partner of Hermann Associates, Limited Partnership, a limited partnership established under the laws of the State of California of San Mateo in the State of California representing that she holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows:
A certain parcel of land together with the buildings thereon situated on King Street in said Cohasset and containing about a half (1/2) acre of land, more or less, and being shown as Calvin's Orchard, and bounded
Northeasterly by said King Street;
Southwesterly by land formerly of John Burbank, Jr.;
Southwesterly by a stone wall separating the premises from property belonging formerly to John Bubank;
Northwesterly by other land formerly of John Burbank.
Containing approximately 22,850 square feet of land, more or less.

setting forth that she desires that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than four hundred ten thousand ($410,000.00) dollars, and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate & Family Court, 35 Shawmut Road, Canton, MA 02021 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the nineteenth day of January 2005, the return day of this citation.



Witness, DAVID H. KOPELMAN, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this thirtieth day of November, 2004.

Fifth-graders get lesson in colonial life

Sarah Evans 10, gapes in horror as she sees what her headmistress would use if she was really bad in class as Carol Neville-Greene of the Bay Colony Educators shows fifth-graders a whispering stick to be put in a student's mouth.

Fifth-graders Dana Childs and Vinny Calorio, raise their hands hoping their questions will be answered by living historians, the Bay Colony Educators, during a special program Tuesday at Deer Hill. The event was sponsored by the PSO.

Tim Greene struggles as he laces up his wife's undergarment from 1750, which could be so restrictive that it could break a woman's ribs.

Fifth-graders Caitlin DeAngelis and Stephanie Brierly plug their ears as Tim Greene of the Bay Colony Educators fires off his musket during the PSO sponsored program.

Tim Greene lights tinder using flint to show the students how early colonists started a fire.

Financing higher education

Interested in learning about financing a higher education and the financial aid process? South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School would like to extend an open invitation to all residents to attend a college financial seminar on Tuesday, Jan. 11, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The seminar, presented by a representative from the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority (MEFA), will discuss various aspects of financial aid and the process parents and students go through when applying to college. Topics will include how to fill out financial aid application forms, the process of filing the appropriate forms, how financial aid is calculated and awarded, how to compare financial aid award letters, and making alternative financing decisions.

Admission if free and further information/directions may be obtained by calling Kate Schwabe at 781-871-4153. Any family interested in receiving an application for a low cost college loan or more information can also call MEFA at 800-449-MEFA (6332).

Language-Based Learning Disabilities - Isabel Phillips, Ed.D. Dr. Phillips has an extensive background in reading and language-based learning disabilities, assessment and intervention. Starts promptly at 7:30 p.m. at The Osgood School Library, 210 Sohier St., Cohasset.

Tim Greene of Scituate takes a bow and puts his best foot forward for his wife, Carol Neville Greene, as he would have if he had met a woman he fancied on the street in 1750. In those days a man's calf was considered the most attractive part of his body.

Deer Hill fifth-grader Carly Schwantner, 11, is shocked to hear they used to tie their left hands behind their backs at school in 1750 to prevent them from writing lefty. There was a practical reason for this as they would smudge the ink with their left arm while writing across the paper.

Right: Carol Neville-Greene of the Bay Colony Educators demonstrates how a teacher would discipline a disruptive student with a ferule stick, as E.J. Culhane serves as a model.

New Year's Eve Party at the Teen Garage

The Cohasset Teen Garage will offer for grades 6-8, a New Year's Eve Party at the Teen Garage, on Friday evening, Dec. 31, from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Pre-registration is necessary for this special event which includes dancing, pizza party and a movie during the evening. The cost for this is $50 per person and checks should be made payable to: Town of Cohasset. Once checked in, children cannot leave until they are picked up by 2 a.m. Children may leave at any time, however, they will not be readmitted that evening.

Registration material and more detailed information are available on the table in the foyer of Town Hall, right by the recreation office.

Parents will need to complete and sign permission forms and registration will conclude at 4 p.m., on Wednesday, Dec. 22.

Kate Daley, Youth Resources coordinator and Jason Trask will supervise this activity which will be limited in number. Information and registration material will also be available at CHS or the Teen Garage.

Registration open for Summer Arts at Derby

Applications are now available for Summer Arts at Derby 2005 at Derby Academy in Hingham. Dates of the program are June 27 to July 29. Summer Arts is a five-week comprehensive arts program for students, ages eight to 15, that serves students from over 25 Massachusetts communities.

Students at Summer Arts select their own schedules from over one hundred courses. Classes are taught by professional artists and include offerings in visual arts, drama, dance, music, sports, gymnastics, writing, media, and photography. There is a full-scale musical production and a daily newspaper. The program culminates with an Arts Festival at which students demonstrate and share their talents through theatre, gymnastics, music, and dance. There will also be exhibits of pottery, painting, photography, 3-D art, and sewing projects. Original film and video projects will be shown.

Don't miss out on a creative and dynamic summer. For brochures and more information about Summer Arts, call 781-740-4766.

Sometimes the best art comes in the smallest packages

South St. Gallery hosts annual show

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Thinking of a unique or unusual sort of gift for the holidays? How about original fine art, while at the same time supporting local and New England region independent artists? Sounds good, but perhaps artworks of the smaller variety might make a better choice for gift-giving purposes. Some artworks of human size or larger might be masterpieces, but they sure wouldn't fit in a stocking or under a Christmas tree.

The South Street Gallery in Hingham is now in its third year of presenting the Small Paintings Show, which the gallery exhibits each holiday season to offer customers and collectors an opportunity to purchase original, easily portable and wrappable works of art at affordable prices. With all works for sale, the show is on view through the end of the year at the gallery.

More than 30 regional painters participate each year in the Small Painting Show. Each artist is invited to submit up to four small paintings of local scenes, landscapes and still-lifes no larger than 9 inches by 12 inches, with always a total of up to 100 to choose from. Note to potential customers, however, is that South Street Gallery specializes in works painted in the plein air style, meaning fresh air. Similar to Impressionists, plein air painters work outdoors, quickly, capturing the light and experience of the landscape. The resulting paintings are meant to portray a scene through the sensation it produces rather than its exact likeness.

"The idea for the show is to offer small works at affordable prices for Christmas gifts," said Gallery manager Kate Sotolova. "Any artist interested who works in plein air painting can participate. The small works approach has proven to be very popular, since many people like small paintings as items for holiday gifts. In last year's show we sold more than 30 of them."

Sotolova handles management operations during weekdays at the gallery, while owner and Hingham architect Jack Hobbs is busy at his job as executive vice president of RF Walsh, a Boston construction management firm. Hobbs opened South Street Gallery two years ago in the building that had housed his mother-in-law's business of 40 years, Hingham Upholstery, to offer an outlet for the arts in town. He's usually at the Gallery on weekends.

"Open" by Vcevy Strekalovsky.

South Street Gallery's convenient location in Hingham has drawn a number of the town's residents among local area artists to this year's show. They include painters Joan Brancale, Vcevy Strekalovsky, Diane Scott, Marjorie Whorf and Bonnie Hobbs. Other local participants include Dianne Panarelli-Miller, of Abington, Nancy Colella, of Norwell, and Susan Charles, of Marshfield, plus others from further around New England such as Ronald Tinney, of Barnstable, and Yves Parent, of Connecticut.

The show offers a plentiful choice for those who would like to take home, or make gifts of, a piece of Hingham scenery. Lots of views from World's End by Parent and other artists, most of them highlighting various shades of foliage greens and Hingham bay blues. Other scenes attempt to capture the charm of the Square, such as Scott's vividly self-descriptive "Rainy Night, Hingham Square" and Brancale's instantly recognizable Loring Hall portrait in "Morning Matinee."

But the overall collection covers scenes from much of the South Shore and indeed Southeastern Massachusetts, from Scituate, Duxbury, Cohasset and Marshfield to Cape Cod and Nantucket. Most notable perhaps is the consistent high quality all-around, representing a healthy plein air painting school in the local and New England areas.

Southern Rail at Coffeehouse off Square

Hingham's Coffeehouse off the Square presents Southern Rail on Sunday, Dec. 19, at 2 p.m.

This Boston-based, Appalachia-rooted band presents a program of Glorious Bluegrass Christmas Gospel music. These Boston First Night favorites continue to stir their audiences with fine musicianship, spirit, energy, and good will.

Note that this afternoon concert is on a Sunday, a departure from the usual Saturday coffeehouses. There will be no open microphone.

The Coffeehouse off the Square is at the Old Ship Parish House at 107 Main St., Hingham Square, just up from the Loring Hall Theatre. Admission is $10 at the door. A variety of coffees, teas, and desserts are available for 50 cents. Net proceeds benefit the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee. For further information, call Jim Watson at781-749-1767.

Plans for Cabaret!

Plans have been finalized for the 43rd Annual Production of "Cabaret," sponsored by the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St. The Meet The Director Party will be held at the Center on Jan. 2, at 1 p.m. Following that will be auditions for soloists (must bring own music)will begin at 2 p.m.

Everyone is encouraged to become a part of Cabaret. There will be dancing, singing, skits and even tambourine numbers. If performing is not your cup of tea, why not volunteer for backstage crew, lighting, set decorating and even costume creations. There is a place for everyone. No one is ever turned away from Cabaret. Please contact the General Chairmen if you would like to participate.

Show Chairmen, Lorri Costello and Jinnie Walsh have announced that "Come For A Ride In 2005" will contain many of the successful themes of the past years, coupled with new events and numbers. A group of very dedicated volunteers have put together, once again, a unique show that you will definitely want to be a part of and not want to miss.

Patron invitations have been sent to last year's subscribers, giving them the opportunity to purchase tickets in advance on Jan. 6, 7 a.m. to noon and 7 to 9 p.m. and on Jan. 7, from 9 a.m. to noon and 7 to 9 p.m.

Patron information can be obtained by calling Jeanne Murphy at 781-749-9031. Tickets will go on sale to the general public on Jan. 10, at the Community Center

Kendall D. Doble, Jr.

Kendall D. Doble, Jr.

Kendall D. Doble, Jr., 76, a Hingham resident for 50 years, died at his home on Dec. 11, 2004, after a brief illness.

Born in Boston, Mr. Doble spent his early life in Cohasset. He was educated at Derby Academy in Hingham, was a 1946 graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy in Exeter, N.H. and was a 1950 graduate of Yale University.

He then served with the United States Army from 1950 to 1956.

Mr. Doble was the President and Chief Executive Officer of Pneumatic Scale Corporation in Quincy from 1960 until his retirement in 1991.

He was a Charter Trustee of Quincy Junior College, a member of the Board of Directors of the Packaging Machinery Manufacturers Institute, a member of the Hingham Advisory Committee from 1985 to 1990, serving as chairman in 1990, a member of the Hingham Personnel Board from 1990 to 1996 and was Commodore of the Hingham Yacht Club from 1992-1994.

Mr. Doble was an avid sailor and enjoyed sailing the Maine Coast, Massachusetts Bay and the Caribbean.

Husband of the late Barbara (Howard) Doble, he leaves his wife Jean (Macdonald) Doble of Hingham; a daughter, Nancy E. Doble of Pownal, Maine; two sons, Kendall D. Doble, III and his wife Elizabeth, of Hingham and James H. Doble and his wife Mimi, of Union, Maine; stepchildren, Cai C. Wichert of Hingham, Kimberly W. Douglas of Milford, N.H. and Elizabeth K. Reed of Kittery, Maine; a sister Margaret D. Ingersol of West Lebanon, N.H.; five grandchildren and two step-grandchildren. He was the brother of the late Jean D. Sweeney.

A Memorial Service will be conducted on Thursday, Dec. 16, at 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset. Visiting hours are to be omitted.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in his memory to the Affiliated Community Visiting Nurse Assoc., 200 Ledgewood Place, Rockland, MA 02370 or to Thompson Island Outward Bound, P.O. Box 127, Boston, MA 02127

The interment was private.

Arrangements were handled by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, Hingham.

Winter Solstice Poetry Circle

The Ninth Annual Winter Solstice Poetry Circle will be held Dec. 21, at 7:30 p.m. at Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main St., Hingham.

Each seasonal crossing time at Old Ship, they spend an evening with poetry to honor gifts of the season and of time's passing.

It has been said that poetry holds the power to lend us courage and to give us vision. In this darkening time, let us come together to nurture and sustain vital and life-giving voices in poems.

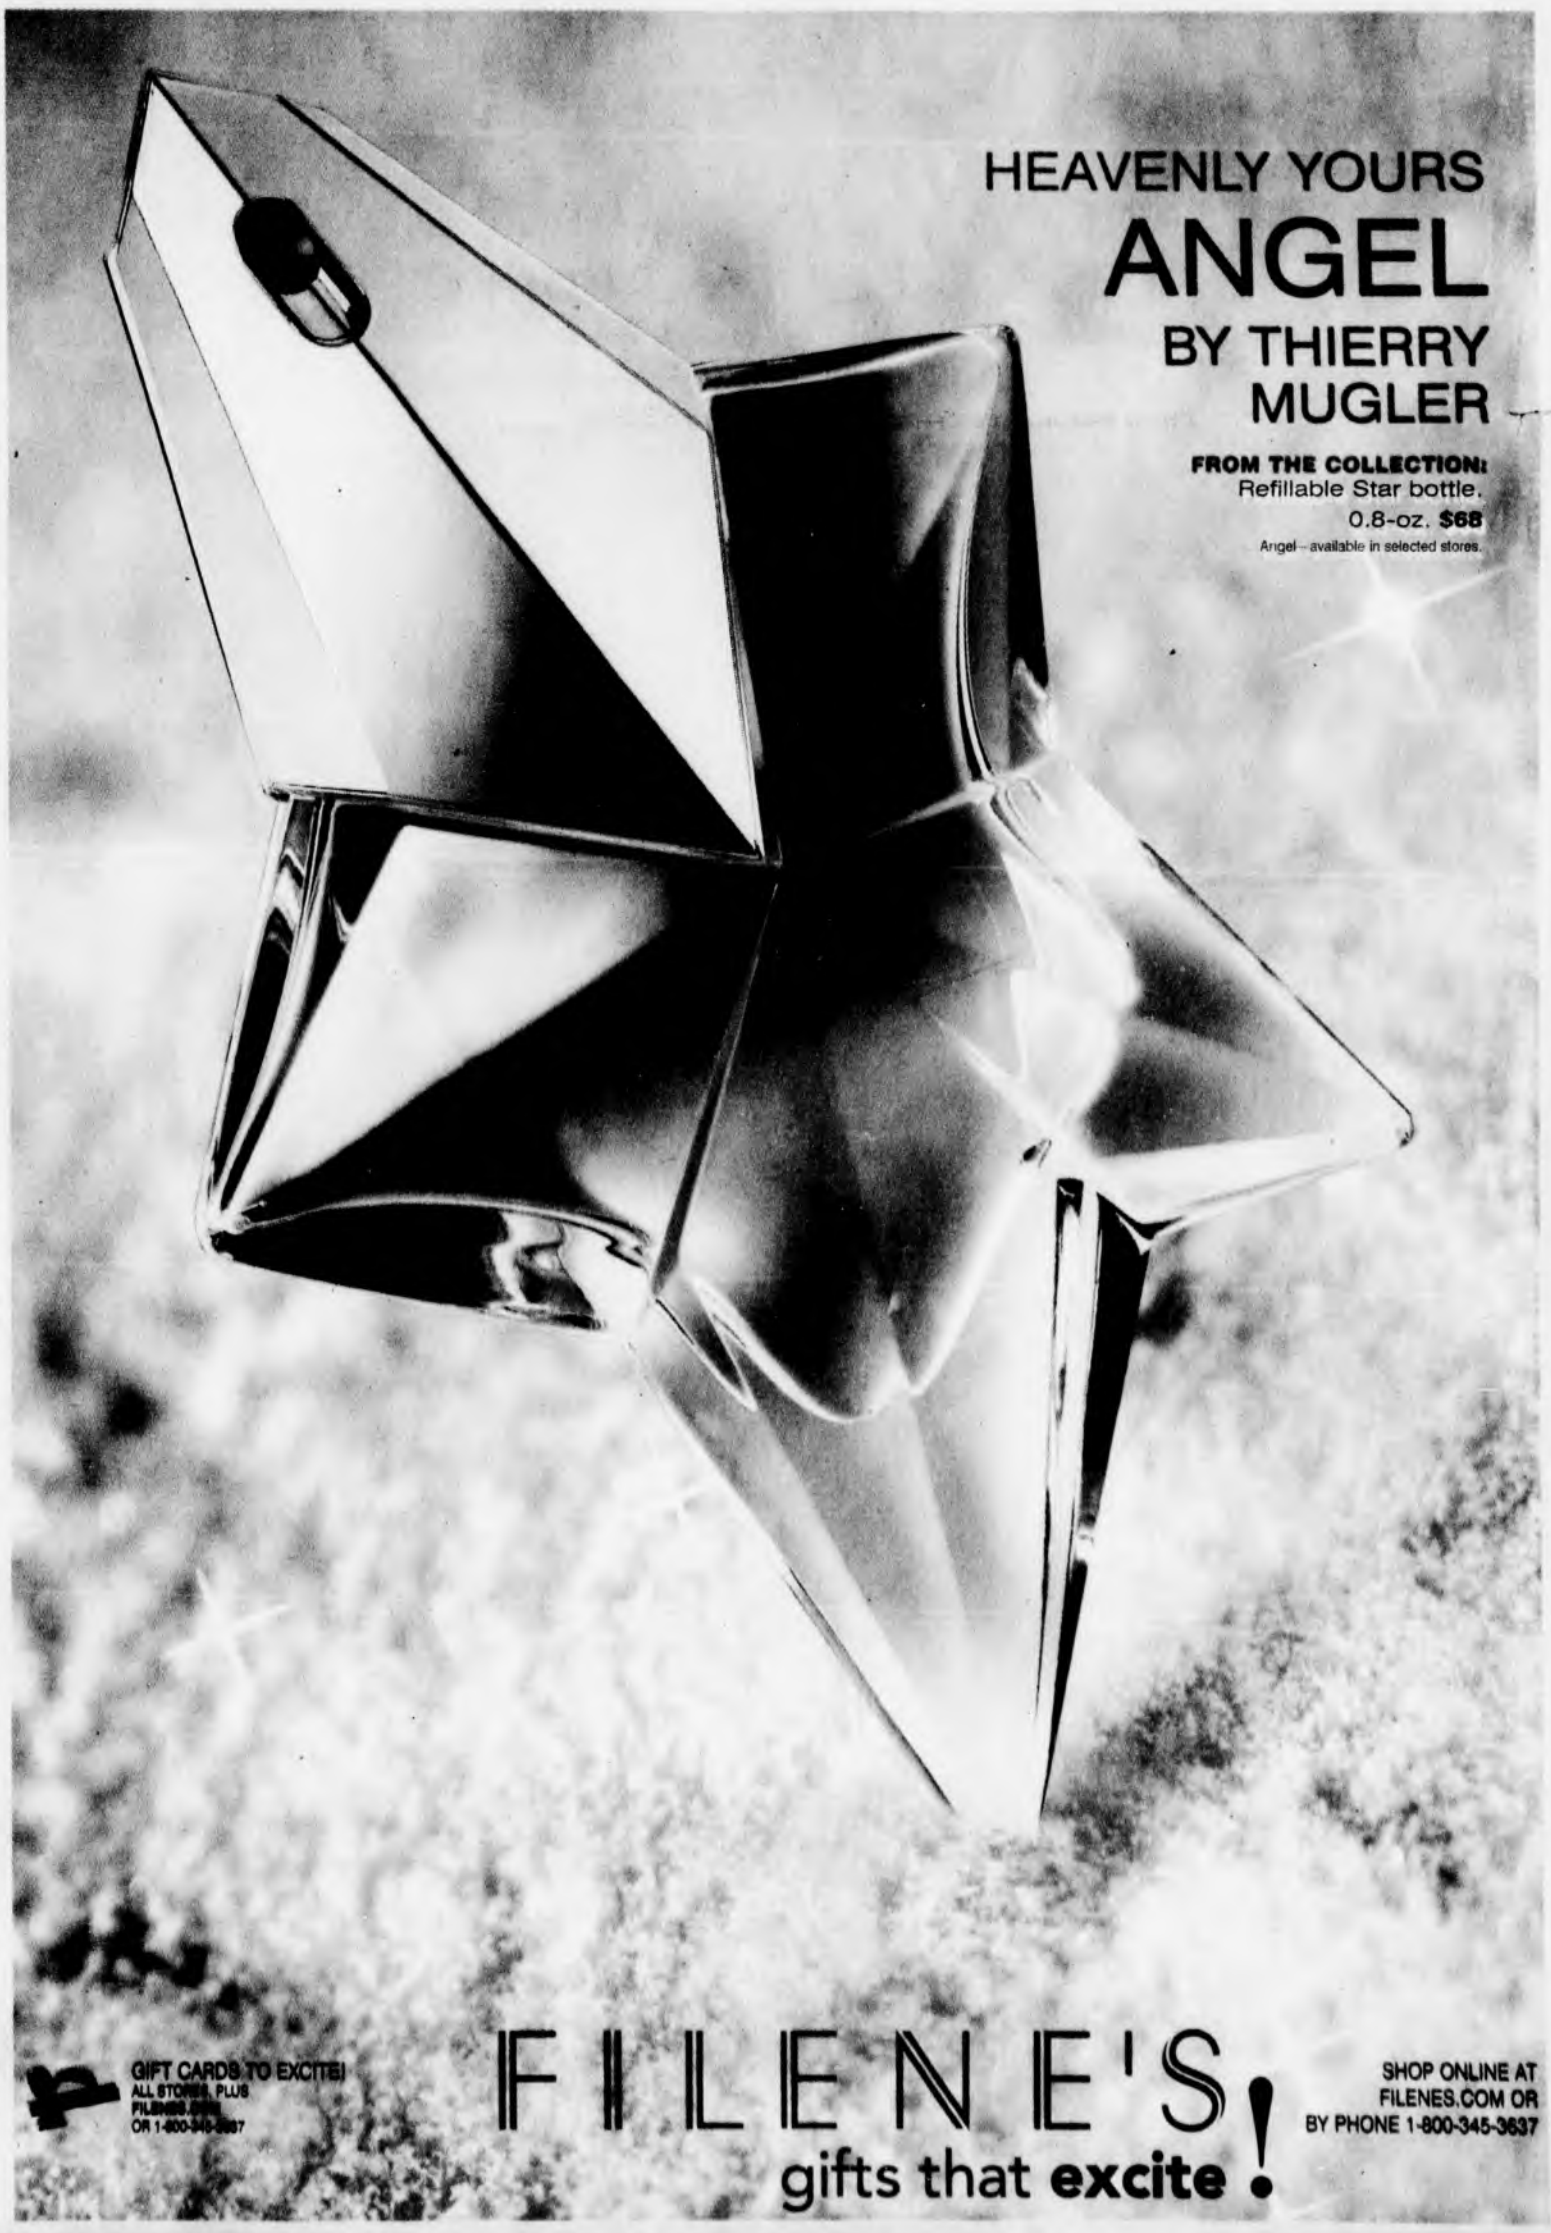
You are invited to bring a poem of the season or one that sheds light on something true for you. Following the readings, walk the labyrinth accompanied by Joanne Cavatorta on the Celtic harp.

Refreshments will be served. All are welcome, with or without a poem. For information call Elizabeth Torrey. at 781-749-0543.

Labyrinth holiday walks

Public opening for the upcoming holiday period at the Hingham Labyrinth include the regular monthly session on the second Tuesday, supplemented by additional events. Recognition of the Solstice on Dec. 21, will include an opportunity for individuals to walk the Labyrinth and also to share short poetry readings appropriated for the season. A New Years Eve walk is also scheduled on Dec. 31. All events are open 7:30 to9 p.m. The Labyrinth is located in the Old Ship Church Parish Hall, 107 Main St., (rear) in downtown Hingham.

The Hingham Labyrinth provides a means of meditation for individuals and groups. A Labyrinth Walk places one on a circular path toward a center place, which returns to the start. Admission is free to all who are cordially invited to sample this meditative experience. How individuals walk and what one receives differs. Persons may experience a sense of healing or other profound experience, or may simply enjoy a pleasant stroll in the company of others. The path is candle lighted with ambiance enhanced by appropriate music.



Holiday Public Season Openings:

All persons: Solstice, Tuesday, Dec. 21

All persons: New Years Eve, Dec. 31

Old Ship Members: Monday and Tuesday mornings, from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

Local woman's skills on display in new cookbook to benefit Project Bread

By Cynthia McManus
CORRESPONDENT

Bourbon Chocolate Pecan Pie.

Although to most of us it's simply a recipe name, the phrase takes on a whole new dimension when you're Hingham resident Barbara Sullivan, a professional indexer and a person who has chosen a vocation that brings order to an unruly alphabet.

Sullivan, a member of the American Society of Indexers is the owner of Alphabet Soup Indexing of Hingham. She has made it her business to take on an unsung but critical task that most of us take for granted as we leaf through the back of a cookbook in a search for recipes like "Bourbon Chocolate Pecan Pie" or "Cranberry Orange Nut Bread."

Without Sullivan's skill at anticipating how a person thinks when looking for a particular page in a cookbook, chefs all over New England would spend far more time searching than baking.

"It's like detective work," Sullivan explained as she described indexing, a process that uses whimsy as much as logic when preparing the often complex list and sub-lists of keywords that make up a book's index. "It's my job to try and get into the heads of those seeking information and give them a guide to getting that information quickly."

Hingham's Barbara Sullivan of Alphabet Soup Indexing.

Although good indexers make the outcome look effortless, the process is a lot more complex than the casual reader might realize Sullivan explained, noting that the work can be solitary, painstakingly slow and very intense due to deadline pressures. "The index is the final thing added to a book" before it's sent to the press for printing. "The last thing that a publisher wants is someone to throw that deadline off."

She likes the challenges of the job however. "There is something very satisfying about a job that puts everything in its logical place," Sullivan noted.

On a recent project Sullivan volunteered her talents as an organizational wordsmith to the indexing of the new celebrity cookbook The WCRB Horn of Plenty Cookbook II, a work spearheaded by radio station WCRB and the classical music station's morning program host, Laura Carlo.

"It's my job to try and get into the heads of those seeking information and give them a guide to getting that information quickly."

— Barbara Sullivan,
Alphabet Soup Indexing

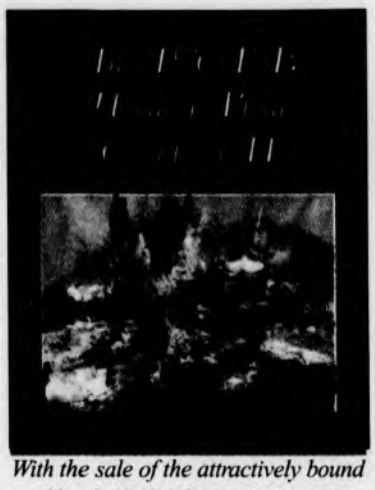
The cookbook, a sequel to one originally published in 1990, is filled with the favorite recipes of Classical 102.5 FM listeners and staff, as well as New England luminaries such as Pops Conductor Keith Lockhart, singer James Taylor, author Stephen King and a wealth of local celebrity chefs, including contributions from Todd English and Jasper White.

The book not only benefits the lucky recipients of the toothsome recipes offered up in the book, but a worthy cause as well: That of Walk for Hunger organizer Project Bread, an agency dedicated to eliminating hunger in Massachusetts.

With the sale of the attractively bound cookbook, WCRB hopes to raise over $100,000 to help Project Bread feed the hungry.

"I had submitted a recipe for the original cookbook so I was familiar with what had been done in the past. When she [Carlo] announced this past spring that she had started work on a sequel, I wrote her a letter and offered to work on the index. She got right back to me and I got to work."

And for Sullivan, the decision to volunteer her services was an easy one. "Our family is very community-service oriented," she explained, stressing that she is very happy to be a part of a project that raises funds for such a worthy cause.



"Our goal is to help the hungry locally by contributing to a Massachusetts-based charity," said Terri Gamble, WCRB's vice president of sales and marketing.

"Project Bread is the leading hunger relief organization in Massachusetts that provides direct service to hungry people statewide" adding that the cookbook is "A real labor of love that is the perfect vehicle for raising funds for the hungry."

Sullivan thinks that the follow-up to the popular 1990 cookbook of the same name is even better than the original — and not surprisingly she is quite pleased with the finished product.

"The recipes are great – and so is the index!" Sullivan laughingly reports adding that Carlo offered up a special 'thank-you' for Sullivan's work in the book's foreword.

And with the eye of a savvy businesswoman Sullivan has her sights set on future projects.

With the sale of the attractively bound cookbook, WCRB hopes to raise over $100,000 to help Project Bread feed the hungry.

"I'm wondering about the Hingham Journal. Has it ever been indexed?"

Watch out Community Newspaper Company. Here comes Barbara Sullivan.

The WCRB Horn of Plenty Cookbook II is available for $19.99 on-line at www.wcrb.com. The book is also available for purchase at London Harness, Footstock, Westwood Furniture, Regina Gifts and RTN Federal Credit Union.

Cohasset Brownies create a stir for Project Bread

Wooden mixing spoons decorated as holiday Santas, Snowmen, Angels and Teddy Bears were created by the girls of Cohasset Brownie Troop #4769 as part of a fundraiser for Project Bread.

Spoons make wonderful gifts, holiday decorations or ornaments, and when unwrapped, new wooden mixing spoons can be used for holiday baking.

For more than 15 years, Project Bread's Holiday Spoons Project has remained an inspiring way for young people to raise money to help feed the hungry in the Boston community. Children of all ages decorate wooden spoons and learn the essentials of fundraising to provide for families in need during the winter.

Each wooden spoon is hand decorated and comes with a holiday recipe. Unwrap the spoon and mix up a holiday treat. Spoons make wonderful gifts, holiday decorations or ornaments, and when unwrapped, new wooden mixing spoons can be used for holiday baking.

Spoon purchases support the children's creativity and empower them to be part of the solution to ending hunger.

Holiday spoons are on sale at Bakery at the Red Lion Inn, Cohasset. All proceeds from spoon sales support Project Bread.

Desserts needed for December Luncheons

During the month of December, The Cohasset Elder Affairs is in need of Luncheon Desserts.

Lunches are served each Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at noon. Although dessert is usually provided, The CEA will need your help for the month of December.

If you have extra cookies, breads or other desserts that you wish to share with the seniors, that will be most grateful. They can be dropped off at the CEA office (open from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday, and 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., Monday and Friday).

Crème caramel for the holidays

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Many years ago, I enjoyed an evening at Julia Child's home in Cambridge and many of her longtime French friends were doing the cooking. One huge crème caramel was served for dessert and it was the perfect combination of simple ingredients, elegant presentation, and good technique. This is, in fact, what great cooks usually prepare in their homes: something simple, something delicious.

We have made dozens of individually baked and served crème caramels, using ramekins as the container. To make this more of a centerpiece dessert, however, we decided to bake the entire dessert in one large container. We started with the recipe in my own Dessert Bible which included half milk, half light cream, three large eggs, three yolks, and one-third cup sugar as its main ingredients. For starters, we examined the caramel. The standard recipe calls for one cup of sugar and one half cup of water. We knew that two tablespoons of corn syrup would help to keep the caramel liquid. (It has a tendency to harden and stick to the dish.) Lemon juice, an ingredient sometimes added to prevent crystallization, was not necessary since none of the batches had any problems in this area. As usual, we noted that when sugar syrups start to darken in the saucepan, they turn quickly. It is best to take the saucepan off the heat regularly and swirl the contents. You want enough color to add flavor but a very dark caramel will be bitter.

As for the custard, we found that our original quantities — 1 1/2 cups each of milk and light cream — turned out best. (Heavy cream was too rich; half and half was too light.) We also confirmed that three whole eggs plus three yolks was sufficient to make a firm custard but also a delicate one. We increased the sugar from a third to a half cup. Salt and vanilla finished off the custard ingredients.

We tried a wide range of containers for baking including bowls, cake pans, pie plates and round soufflé dishes. The nicest crème caramel was baked in a 2-quart soufflé dish that was 7 inches wide. Cake pans and pie plates produced custard that was simply too thin and unattractive when unmolded. Finding the correct size bowl didn't work out for us either as the caramel pooled on the bottom and the finished custard didn't have that dark caramel soaked top and blond sides. Also, the custard didn't have enough sauce.

There was no question as to whether or not the crème caramel should be baked in a water bath. The water ensures gentle heating and even cooking. We also found by placing a towel under the dish the custard was creamier. Without the towel, small bubbles formed toward the bottom, which are a sign of overcooking. We tested baking the custard at temperatures from 300 to 350 degrees and 325 degrees was best. We baked them for about 70 minutes or until the temperature reached 175 degrees; the custard feels set but still jiggles in the center and a paring knife comes out clean. To prevent a tough skin from forming on the top of the custard we loosely covered the top with aluminum foil. Once completely cool, the custard unmolded easily. We ran a thin knife around the edges of the dish, placed a serving dish on top and flipped them over together.

A classic variation of this dish is made with espresso or coffee-flavored custard. We tried simply stirring instant espresso into the custard mixture but the flavor was shameful compared to custard made with lightly smashed coffee beans steeped with the milk/cream mixture. For robust coffee flavor, we used 1/2 cup beans that were allowed to sit for about fifteen minutes before straining.

CENTERPIECE CRÈME CARAMEL

The trickiest part of this dessert is making the caramel. If too pale, the caramel is bland and overly sweet. If left to darken too much the taste is burnt and bitter. Look for a rich honey color for the perfect flavor. The caramel will turn dark quickly once it takes on color. Removing the pan from the burner and swirling the contents is the best way to control the process.

For the caramel:
1 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup water
2 tablespoons corn syrup

For the custard:
1-1/2 cups whole milk
1-1/2 cups light cream
3 large eggs
3 large egg yolks
1/2 cup sugar
1-1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/8 teaspoon salt

1. Heat the oven to 325 degrees and adjust a rack to the center position. Fold a kitchen towel to fit in the bottom of a roasting pan large enough to accommodate a 2-quart soufflé dish or any deep, round baking dish about seven inches across. Place the soufflé dish on the towel and set aside.

2. For the caramel: Place the sugar, water and corn syrup in a heavy saucepan over medium heat. Swirl the pan frequently until the sugar dissolves. Increase the heat to high and bring syrup to a boil. Once the syrup begins to color, swirl it often. Cook until a rich honey color. (Remove pan from burner to control cooking speed.) Carefully and quickly pour the caramel into the soufflé dish.

3. For the custard: Bring 2 quarts of water to boil in a kettle. Heat the milk and cream in a heavy saucepan until steam appears. In a medium bowl gently whisk the eggs, yolks, sugar and salt until just combined. Try to work in as little air as possible. Pour about 1/2 cup of hot milk mixture into the eggs and whisk gently to combine. Add the rest of the hot milk again, stirring gently to combine. Add the vanilla and strain using a fine mesh strainer into the soufflé dish. Place the roasting pan in the oven and fill pan with boiling water to reach half way up the soufflé dish. Cover roasting pan loosely with aluminum foil. Bake until a paring knife inserted halfway between the center and the edge of the custard comes out clean, the custard feels set though the center, will remain jiggly, and an instant-read thermometer reads 175 degrees, about 70 minutes. Transfer to a rack and cool to room temperature. The custard may be covered and refrigerated for up to two days. Allow to sit out for about 20 minutes before unmolding and serving.

4. To unmold, slide a thin knife around the perimeter pressing the knife against the edge of the soufflé dish. Place a deep-sided serving dish over the custard and flip them both together. Lift off the soufflé dish and serve immediately.

Serves six to eight.

ESPRESSO VARIATION

Place 1/2 cup very lightly crushed espresso or coffee beans into the milk/cream mixture as it heats. Allow to steep for about fifteen minutes before proceeding with the above recipe. Be sure to strain with a fine strainer, as bits of coffee beans in the custard are unappealing. If you don't have a fine mesh strainer, line what you have with a triple layer of cheesecloth or a coffee filter.

Fond memories and some practical advice

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

For most of us, holiday activities revive fond memories of holiday seasons past, especially those from our childhood. When we were children, Christmas was a magical time of wishes and dreams, Santa, gifts, and family gatherings. The delicious smell of homemade cookies and gingerbread and the fresh scent of pine filled our homes.

One of my fondest recollections is of my family's annual pilgrimage into the forest to select our Christmas tree. My mom would bundle us up in our cozy snowsuits, hats, mittens, and red rubber boots and we would venture forth into the extensive woodland that surrounded our Catskill Mountain home. We spent hours tromping through the crusty snow searching for the perfect tree.

Those carefree days are long gone but traditions die hard and I still prefer a fresh tree to the perfect "near real" versions available from the superstores. Even most cut trees have become a little too perfect for my liking with their heavily sheared branches making it difficult to hang many of my unique ornaments that dangle on long threads. A decorated Christmas tree can be one of the most beautiful sights imaginable but it can also pose a serious hazard if it is not properly maintained throughout the holiday season. All cut trees should be recut and plunged into a container of warm water, preferably in a garage or porch before it is moved indoors. Allow the tree a day or two to drink and settle. Check frequently to be sure that the tree always has water which will reduce needle drop and the risk of the tree becoming a fire hazard. Provide your tree a cool environment away from heat sources. Some large, thirsty trees may require water both morning and night, especially the first few days, depending upon the size of the reservoir that your tree stand offers.

Many nurseries offer several varieties of balled and burlapped living Christmas trees at this time of year. A hole should be dug for these trees before the ground freezes solid. Fill the hole with leaves, straw, pine needles or even an old piece of carpet and consider covering the hole so it will not fill with water or snow prior to planting. Store a mix of soil and organic matter in a warm, dry, location to facilitate planting after the holidays. Carefully choose your planting site keeping in mind that most conifers eventually grow very large and require good winter drainage. A living tree should only stay indoors for approximately a week and be kept in a cool location away from heat sources. Slightly moisten the rootball prior to bringing the tree indoors and gradually acclimate the tree to warmer temperatures. An extended stay indoors may cause the tree to dry out or break its winter dormancy which may reduce its ability to survive a severe winter outdoors. After the holiday, gradually transfer the tree to cooler temperatures. Try to plant on a day when temperatures are above freezing, water deeply and apply a layer of mulch. The application of an antidesiccant spray will help the tree's needles retain moisture.

Holiday plants

In addition to our traditional Christmas tree, holiday plants furnish indispensable festive touches to my holiday decorating scheme. A strategically placed poinsettia can provide instant color to brighten even the darkest room, creating a handsome focal point or decorative element that brings warmth and vitality to any living space.

Christmas cactus, kalanchoe, amaryllis, and cyclamen plants are also available during the holiday season. New hybrids appear every season offering a wide variety of sizes, color combinations and forms suitable for every décor.

December is not the ideal time, however, to acquire houseplants. Cold outdoor temperatures and dry indoor environments pose serious challenges for all plants and certain precautions should be taken to ensure their survival. If at all possible, acquire plants on days when temperatures are above freezing. Be sure the plant is wrapped in a paper or plastic sleeve or bag to protect it from the cold, even when the temperatures are above freezing because a sudden, dramatic change in temperature can severely shock the plant causing nearly immediate leaf or flower drop. On very cold days, be sure the car is warmed up in advance of your purchase and make it your last stop so the plant does not sit in an unheated car while you run other errands.

Most holiday plants prefer bright light and cool temperatures. Select a location out of the sun and away from drafts or heat sources. Avoid growing plants on windowsills in winter due to the chill of the glass on very cold days. Even a plant given ideal growing conditions is likely to drop a few leaves as it adjusts to its new environment.

'Barrage' mixes music, song and dance in 'Vagabond Tales'

If you swoon to the fiery-pitched Irish step dancing of "Riverdance" and "Lord of the Dance," and your heart beats along with the percussive sounds of "Stomp," then "Barrage: Vagabond Tales" may be just the show for you.

With a young company of performers which includes seven violinists and vocalists, one drummer, one bass player, a guitarist and a percussionist, "Barrage; Vagabond Tales" — at Boston's Wilbur Theatre through Sunday — employs an imaginative mix of music, song and dance to tell the tale of a musical wanderer.

"It's a fusion of dance, song and instrumental music focused on the violin. It's kind of half musical, half play," explains Executive Producer Anthony Moore. "We play new and familiar music on the violin. It's a unique instrumentalization that people haven't seen before, using everything from Benny Goodman and Louis Prima to the Beatles and Bulgarian folk music."

Moore was one of a quartet of Calgary-based classical violinists who helped create "Barrage," because of their own interest in fiddling. "We found that by teaching students a little fiddle at the end of each regular lesson, we could really motivate them. After a while, we started performing as a group in modest places like nursing homes and county fairs. By 1996, we decided to go professional. We're very pleased and proud that this show has proven the universal appeal of the violin."

"Barrage" is on tour 40 weeks a year, visiting some 17 countries in North America, Europe and Asia. The need for instrumentalists who can dance while they play makes for some challenging casting calls. "We have great luck finding fantastic violin players, but we don't have a lot of luck finding fantastic players who are also dancers. We have to train them, because the entire show is fully choreographed, complete with magic tricks and even acrobatics."

"Barrage: Vagabond Tales" will be at the Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont Street, Boston, through Dec. 19. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com.

A Dickens of a show at Orpheum

Joyous music, ghostly special effects, and loads of holiday cheer are blended like the richest egg nog in Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," the oft-produced tale of the mean-spirited Ebenezer Scrooge and the ghosts who haunt him, being presented through Sunday at the Orpheum Theatre in Foxboro.

"Not only is this the one show which never fails to touch audiences of all ages, but from a technical standpoint, it's a wonderful challenge trying to bring Dickens' language to life in a fresh and exciting way," explains Weymouth's Steve Dooner who is directing Foxboro's "A Christmas Carol" for Bay Colony Productions.

Dooner has assembled a talented company of local artists and technicians — including Joe Siriani of Hingham as Scrooge — to ensure that the music, costumes, sets and special effects create just the right Dickensian atmosphere. "Having believable ghosts come and go is definitely a priority. But my highest goal is to bring the lively and musical language of Dickens to stage like never before. I think hearing Dickens' words, with all their drama and beauty, will be something our audience will love."

"A Christmas Carol" will be performed through Sunday, December 19, at the Orpheum Theatre, 1 School Street, Foxboro. For tickets and information, call 508-543-2787 or visit www.orpheum.org.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

STRAIGHT FROM THE SOURCE

To find out how humans track sound, a British research team outfitted individuals to walk the streets of London with microphones in their ears that registered the exact times sounds arrived at each ear. What they found was that low-pitched sounds surround the head and enter both ears nearly simultaneously; however, the brain is able to distinguish the small difference in time between when each sound enters each ear. That is what tells a person where the sound came from. High-pitched sounds, on the other hand, are heard by only one ear with just a shadow of the sound heard in the other. These new findings may help scientists develop a new technology for tracking sounds in noisy environments.

Hearing is a vital part of communication with the rest of the world. If your hearing is suffering from the effects of noise and noise pollution, age-related loss, disease or trauma, seek the professional attention of our board certified hearing expert. Because hearing loss varies by type and degree, we offer comprehensive evaluations by a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist and a complete line of hearing instruments to suit each and every person's particular needs. Come see us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, 534 Main St. (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, and have a free hearing evaluation. P.H. 781-337-1144.

P.S. At one time, the accepted theory of how humans locate the source of sound was based on the barn owl, which has special brain cells that are finely tuned to recognize specific sound pitches.

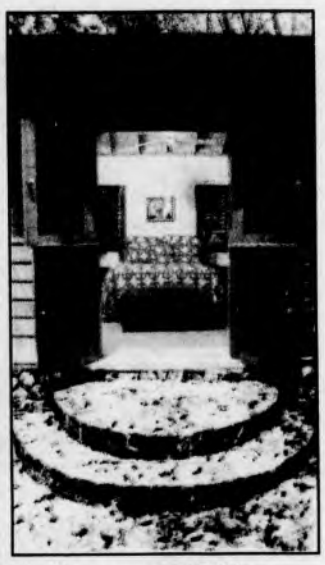
Take it easy at Goldeneye, Ian Fleming's luxurious Jamaica estate

By KEVIN PILLEY
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

ORCABESSA, Jamaica - "Relax, man," said Ramsey, giving me the first ingredient of "The Commander's" secret recipe for a happy life. "Drink water with your rum, eat a little red meat but more fish, swim, fish and keep the drinking, the cigarettes and the women in moderation (and at a long distance from your wife)." Ramsey Dacosta, now 66, used to be the houseboy for the British author Ian Fleming at his Jamaican home, "Goldeneye." It was here in this seaside retreat that Fleming completed 13 of his James Bond books, beginning with "Casino Royale" in 1952. The writer bought the northshore property in "the beautiful banana port of Orcabessa" (as he described the area in "Live and Let Die") for about $7,712 in 1946. That same year, playwright Noel Coward rented the property for two months. Fleming originally had been sent to Jamaica by British naval intelligence to stop U-boat sinkings in the Caribbean. He named Goldeneye, a property that was once a racecourse for donkeys, after a British Admiralty plan to defend Gibraltar. Fleming spent 18 winters at Goldeneye, writing four hours a day. In a newspaper interview, he described his writing style as "fast and with application." The writer died in 1964 at the age of 56. At the front gate today there is still a sign reading "For Sale or Rent," left there for nostalgia's sake.



The 15-acre estate, which includes private beaches and coves, remained vacant until 1976, when London-born Chris Blackwell, founder of Island Records, bought it from the Fleming estate (Bob Marley once considered buying the property too, according to Blackwell). Today, Goldeneye is an ultraluxurious all-inclusive resort, one of four properties Blackwell operates in Jamaica. Fleming's old house, the Ian Fleming House as it's called today, is a three-bedroom villa. His former bedroom still has the red bullwood desk on which he wrote with the jalousies shut to keep out the sun (there is a typewriter, but the original was sold in 1995). The bathtub is in a secluded garden location outside. Adjacent to the Fleming house is a large media room with a big video screen and little library that has a DVD collection (James Bond titles included). The rest of the property consists of just four one- to three-bedroom villas with glassless windows to let in the breeze and the sound of the pounding surf. Nothing much has changed since Fleming's time. It is, however, a little disconcerting when checking in to Goldeneye to be told Domino, as in "Thunderball," is waiting for you.

A kayaker enjoys the tranquil ocean water and warm sun at Goldeneye, an ultraluxurious, all-inclusive resort in Orcabessa, Jamaica.

The bathtub at the Ian Fleming House can be found in a secluded garden location outside.

A villa entrance at Goldeneye, an ultraluxurious, all-inclusive resort in Orcabessa, Jamaica.

The villas are all named after famous Bond heroines, with the exception, strangely, of Pussy Galore (of "Goldfinger" fame). Back in his day, Fleming entertained all the usual suspects at Goldeneye. Former CIA chief Allen Dulles was a guest (although President Kennedy was said to be a great fan of Fleming's writing, he never visited). Fleming described Truman Capote as a "most incongruous playmate" when he spent some time here. According to Dacosta, Fleming had a sense of humor and used to get a horse's carcass put in the lagoon so that when showing around his guests he could point to the circling fins of the sharks the carcass would attract and tell them that was the guests' special swimming area. On my visit, a couple from Pennsylvania wanted to throw me in the sea. Keen on conservation, they said they believed the number of travel writers should be reduced, because we are ruining a lot of wonderful places by writing about them. They didn't want me to write about Goldeneye. "It's too nice," they said. "It's real Jamaica. And that's rare." This island nation has been used for many Bond movies, and there are plenty of locations to please the Bondophile. Laughing Waters is where Ursula Andress (Honey Rider in "Dr. No") came out of the sea in a skimpy white bikini. The swamps around Falmouth were Dr. No's home in "Dr. No." The crew's hotel for that movie, Sans Souci, is where Bond (whom Fleming described as "a healthy, violent, non-cerebral man in his mid-30s with few perceptible virtues except patriotism and courage") seduced Miss Taro (Zena Marshall). Charles Swaby's Falmouth Swamp Safari was where Sir Roger Moore hurdled the alligators in "Live and Let Die."

But most people who visit Goldeneye spend the majority of their time on-property. They check out the pool, three beaches and private coral reef, which inspired much of "Thunderball." Deep-sea fishing excursions are available. And you can take a tour with Dacosta, around the gardens full of African tulips, yellow hibiscus, giant bunyan trees and what seems like every tropical fruit and nut tree imaginable. Meals and drinks are included in the resort's rates; the Jamaican cuisine is served in the gazebo overlooking the lagoon or in your own private villa. Another obligatory activity is to sit in the sunken garden listening to Ramsey talk about the local birds and "The Commander." Canned Fleming over a special Goldeneye rum punch is perfect. Under the almond tree you learn that Fleming went to Eton and Sandhurst (the British West Point); had a brother (Peter) who was a travel writer; and was a great antiquarian book collector æ he got the name James Bond from "Birds of the West Indies," written by one James Bond. At Goldeneye, you can't help but feel one with your surroundings and lucky, or as Fleming wrote, "since the main ingredient of living is to be alive this is surely a worthwhile prospect."

If you go

Getting there: Goldeneye is a 20-minute drive from Ocho Rios. The closest international airport is two hours away in Montego Bay, or you can fly from Montego Bay on Air Jamaica Express to Boscobel Aerodome, 10 minutes from the resort. Staying there: Winter rates at the all-inclusive resort are from $895 per night for two. Fleming's house, which sleeps six, goes for $3,600 per night. Special honeymoon packages are available. For reservations, call 800-OUTPOST or go to www.islandoutpost.com.

Christmas in Cohasset 50 years ago

Big winds, big job, Driver's Ed, and school chaperones

By Joel S. Pratt
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For 50 years my mother, Ruth Pratt, designed our family Christmas Cards. Her 1954 card showed a Christmas tree and Minot's light bending in the wind and the legend "1954 — Year of the Big Winds." It was, too. Hurricane Carol arrived on August 31: it was the largest storm to hit New England since the September, 1938 hurricane. On September 11, hurricane Edna roared through. Uncle Carroll and Aunt Edna Pratt received a good deal of ribbing that fall. Between Carol and Edna, hurricane Dolly passed by to the east. In October another storm went through Pennsylvania and New York. The year of the big winds indeed.

That summer, Scituate contractor Red Ward hired me as a carpenter's helper. My first 40-hour a week job paid a magnificent $ 1 per hour — with no deductions. The crew made sure that every hard or dirty job fell to me. "Need more shingles on the roof, boy!" "Heat up the tar and do the foundation." "Get those studs up to the second floor." They also did their best to complete my education in areas they felt were deficient. Profanity, lewd jokes and stories about bloody job-site accidents were my daily fare. There were compensations. Red let me take his truck on errands. I picked up coffee and doughnuts for breaks, and went to the lumber yard for kegs of nails. That's right: back then nails of all sizes came in wooden kegs weighing 100 pounds or more. More things for the helper to lift and lug.

The job was less than a mile from our house on Gammons Road. On the day Carol arrived, I pedaled to work

Teacher perk seen as benefit

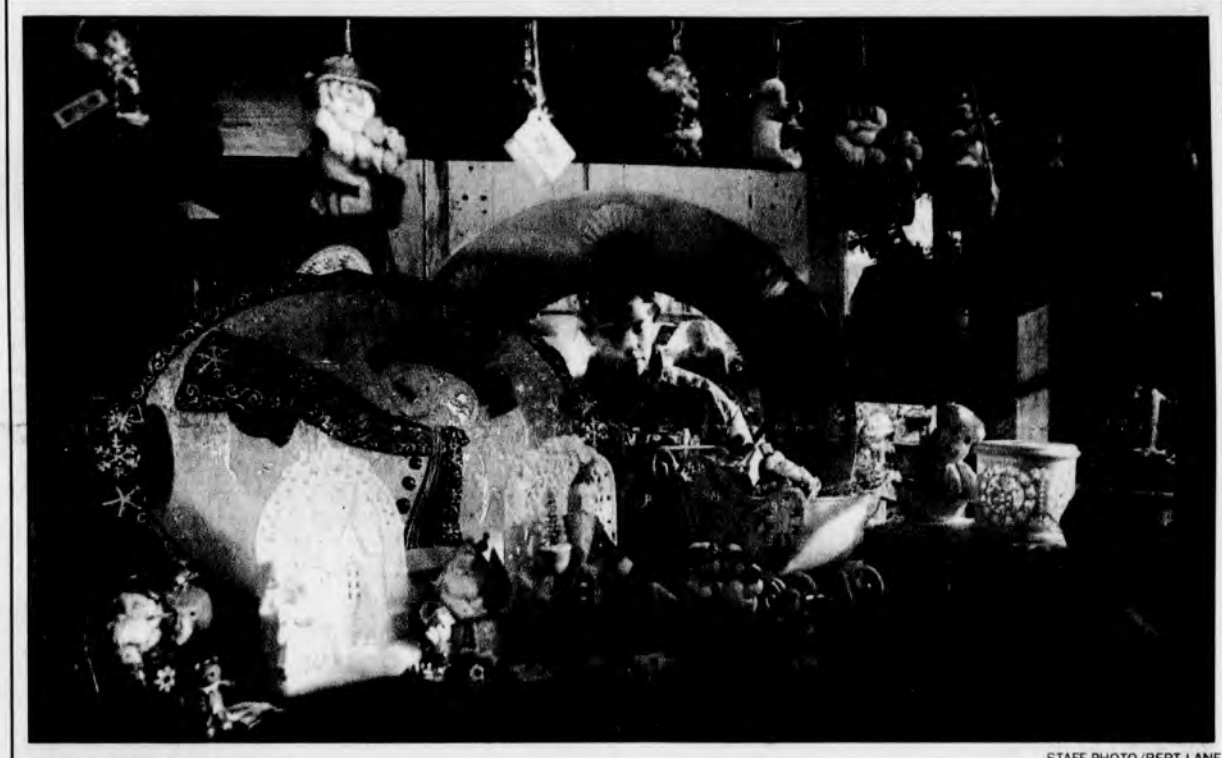
Kids can attend Cohasset schools

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With enrollment numbers climbing steadily year after year, the School Committee says it is becoming more difficult to maintain a balanced budget because more students means more expenses.

To that end, the question was raised at the Special Town Meeting whether the town can continue to enroll children from out-of-district who have a parent working in the schools.

Wig Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., asked how many teachers and staff, who live out of town, send their children to Cohasset schools free of charge, which could affect the school budget.



Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh, who said she would compile the information, presented her findings at last Thursday's School Committee meeting.

Currently, there are 12 children who live out of town and attend Cohasset schools as a benefit to their parents who are on staff.

"It certainly is a wonderful benefit," said Walsh, adding it is one that helps attract teachers to Cohasset, and is a factor in keeping them on board.

However, during budget discussions during Town Meeting, School Committee Chairman Rick Shea said enrollment figures are not what the district had planned for, and numbers are much higher than had ever been anticipated. He said in 1996, enrollment estimates showed there would be a steady increase of pupils with projected enrollment in 2010 at 1,480. "Enrollment today is 1,502," he said. With roughly 110 students added to the district over the past two years, "it's very difficult to

Field trip stopped short when buses collide

No one was seriously hurt

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When news traveled to middle high school Principal Jack DeLorenzo that two buses carrying Cohasset seventh-grade students on a field trip had been involved in an accident on the Southeast Expressway, he and Assistant Principal Michael Gill immediately hopped in the car.

Cell phones in hand, DeLorenzo and Gill communicated with those at the scene and at the school for the entire drive, to ensure everyone was kept abreast of the situation. Fortunately, students that were hurt only suffered from minor injuries.

"We were very lucky," DeLorenzo said.

At roughly 7:15 a.m. Monday, three buses carrying a total of 137 seventh-grade students left the middle high school to attend a play at the John Hancock building in Boston. DeLorenzo said the field trip had originally been scheduled for the fall, but was overbooked and was rescheduled for Dec. 20.

The buses were traveling north in the HOV lane on the Southeast Expressway in Dorchester when the accident took place. DeLorenzo said there was one car between the first and second bus, and the third bus was directly behind the second.

DeLorenzo said the first bus successfully merged back onto the highway, and was not involved in the accident. According to a press release issued by the Massachusetts State Police, information collected by Trooper Keith McAuliffe indicates the two buses involved in the accident suddenly came upon stopped traffic. Paul Dower, 57, of Abington, the driver of the hit bus, was able to stop his bus in time, but Patricia Purves , 45, of Rockland, was not able to stop in time and hit Dower's bus. When Dower's bus was hit, it was pushed into a 2005 Dodge Magnum, operated by 71-year-old Eugene Friedrich of Newport, RI. The two buses involved in the accident were carrying about 95 occupants in all, 90 of which were students.

The buses were traveling north in the HOV lane on the Southeast Expressway in Dorchester when the accident took place.

Friedrich and Purves were uninjured in the crash. However, Dower was transported to Boston Medical Center for treatment of minor injuries. Fifteen children were also transported to area hospitals, and two of the transported students received stitches in their chins.

"The bus wasn't going very fast," said DeLorenzo, which helped keep the number of injuries down. He said in total, six students went to Carney Hospital in Dorchester, five went to Boston Medical Center, and four went to Quincy Medical Center. DeLorenzo was told at the scene that weather did not play a role in the accident, but the cause of the accident is under investigation by the State Police.

State Trooper Tom Ryan, who was not on scene at the time of the accident, but had been briefed by those who were, said likely there were multiple factors which contributed to the accident, which may or may not include the weather. The accident was still under investigation at the time the Mariner went to press, and no one had been cited.

The buses involved in the accident were chartered from the Ingle Bus Service based in Hanover. Steve Ingle did not immediately return phone calls for comment.

After the accident, Ingle's sent two buses to the scene to transport the uninjured children to Florian Hall in Dorchester, where the staff gave them ice cream and cookies. Students were then transported back to

Strategic planning volunteers sought

The school department has sent out materials on the strategic planning initiative for the district, which outlines various goals for the future. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said it is critical to have community input moving forward, especially as the fiscal year 2006 budget process gets underway, and anyone interested in being part of the process is encouraged to contact the superintendent's office at (781) 383-6111.

RTF holiday hours and tree disposal

In light of the holidays, the RTF will close at 1 p.m. Friday Dec. 24, and 1 p.m. Friday Dec. 31. The RTF will not be open on Christmas or New Year's Day, but will resume regular operating hours both Sundays following the holidays, Dec. 26 and Jan. 2.

Christmas trees may be brought to the DPW parking area beginning Dec. 26. Please remove all wires and decorations. Residential brush will be accepted beginning Jan. 15 through April 30. No trees over 3 ins. in diameter. No contractors please.

Selectmen seeking committee members

There are a number of committees which will be starting up with the new year or are in need of new appointments, and the Board of Selectmen is looking for interested candidates to participate.

• In light of recent changes with the Comcast cable service in town, the Selectmen would like to reinstate the Cable Committee, which will be responsible for keeping residents informed of any changes in cable service.

• Selectmen are also looking for candidates interested in participating in a committee to review the School Committee budget process. Town Meeting voted to have TROIKA appoint the committee to take a close up look at why the school budget is over-budget. Town Moderator George Marlette will soon call a meeting to appoint interested residents.

• A Sewer Study Committee will also be formed to tackle some of the wastewater issues in town. Representatives from pertinent town boards will be on the committee, and the Selectmen are looking for three residents to participate. A charge for the committee will be drafted after the first of the year, to ensure it is not taking on the same role as the Wastewater Committee.

• A committee to interview a new liaison to the MBTA will soon be appointed, and Selectmen are looking for another resident or two to participate in that process. The liaison interviews will take place within the next two weeks.

• A committee will need to be formed to discuss the options the town has in terms of leaving the turntable in the municipal lot uncovered permanently. The appropriate historical boards in town will be part of the discussion, as well as the Village Revitalization Committee, but Selectmen are also looking for residents to participate. The turntable project discussion will go hand-in-hand with discussion of improvements to the parking lot and the MBTA crossing at Pleasant St.

• A Beechwood Ball Park committee will be formed to help finalize plans for improvements to the area. Members of the DPW, Recreation Commission and other sports related groups will be involved as well as residents.

Residents interested in participating in any committee are encouraged to contact the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

School emergency communication technology is on its way

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Shortly, it will no longer be necessary for members of the school department to rely on cell phones to ensure all parents are kept up-to-date on emergency situations that arise, such as the school bus accident which occurred this week.

The school department has signed a three-year contract with Notification Technologies, Inc. which will provide an outbound communication tool for the schools called Connect-Ed. Supt. Denise Walsh said with the technology in place, at the touch of a button, she would be able to send out a pre-recorded message to every parent of every child in all three Cohasset schools, which can be received within minutes.

With the system in place, parents can be the first to know of a situation going on at the schools, before hearing it on the radio or television as breaking news. The program allows the superintendent or principal to record a message with his or her own voice, which Walsh said she feels is reassuring for parents to hear.

As many as six phone numbers can be assigned to each student, and the numbers are called in succession until someone answers.

The system can detect if an answering machine has picked up, and that information is recorded for the schools. In addition, the phone numbers of certain students can be flagged by category, such as those who participate in band or a particular activity, or by grade, so specific messages can be sent to specific homes if a practice is cancelled, rather than notify the entire student body.

The schools will soon be sending out a test message to homes...

Walsh said the technology is currently in the process of being installed, and many staff members have already been trained in how to use the program. She added she hopes to have a trial run before the holiday break. Unfortunately, the program was not ready at the time the accident took place.

But middle-high school Principal Jack DeLorenzo said cell phones proved to be very helpful during Monday's emergency situation, and said he was able to stay in touch with staff at the school while at the accident scene and at the hospitals. He added many of the students were calling their parents from cell phones to inform them of the situation right from the bus, even before the schools could reach them.

Walsh said there are three categories under which the outbound calling technology can be used. During an emergency when information needs to be provided very quickly, or in an instance such as a school closing; for community outreach, such as reminding parents of upcoming concerts or MCAS tests; and for attendance, where a message can be sent to a designated number left by a parent to report a child is not in school that day. If more than one number is designated for a child, a specific number where a parent can be reached, such as a cell phone, can be designated as the number to be called if an absence is being reported.

In addition, Walsh said if need be, she could access the technology from her cell phone during a conference and launch a message from off-site. However, "Until we're that high-tech, we'll take it slow," she said.

The schools will soon be sending out a test message to homes and Walsh asks families to "Please be patient with us while we set it up," as their could be kinks in the system. She said she heard in another town of a new principal who sent out a welcome message to introduce herself, but accidentally sent a 3 a.m. wake-up call to every home in the school district. She said she will take every precaution to ensure a similar mistake does not happen in Cohasset.

Until the system is completely operational, Walsh said parents are advised to listen to local media outlets for weather-related school cancellations. Once the system is running, parents can expect to receive a district-wide message roughly once per month, which could provide an update for special events or information parents could have received in a backpack flier.

Information about the program will be sent home with students in the near future to ensure parents will be introduced to the system prior to receiving their first message. For more information, please visit the Notification Technology Inc. Web site at www.notification.com.

Cohasset where their parents picked them up. The first bus, which was not involved in the accident had turned around to go back to the school just after the accident, and those children were sent home early.

DeLorenzo said everyone he spoke to throughout the day, who had come into contact with the students, commented on how well-behaved they were and how calm they were despite the circumstances. "We're very proud of our students," he said.

Trooper Ryan said in his experience — with the combined situation of being locked in a center lane of traffic in a well-traveled area, as well as the frigid temperatures — "it would be a difficult situation for anyone," let alone students who were watching their classmates being taken to the hospital on stretchers. That is "certainly a very disturbing image," he said. However, he added the troopers on scene and emergency medical team which responded did everything they could to make it as comfortable a transition as possible, both for those who were taken to area hospitals by ambulance and those uninjured students who were transported by bus.

By the time the school day came to a close, all students had been released from the hospital and were either home or on their way. DeLorenzo called the injured students that night to make sure everyone was OK.

DeLorenzo said he is extremely grateful no one was seriously hurt, and expressed thanks to everyone who helped out including those on the scene, at the hospitals, and at the Florian, as well as all the parents, students and staff. "I'm starting to write my thank-you's already," he said.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS

Happy Holidays Cohasset! Enjoy your family and friends, holiday cheer and a great week off to all of those lucky enough to be on vacation.

OH BOY!

Welcome to the world to Liam Patrick Campbell born on Nov. 11, 2004 and weighing in at 8 lbs., 1 oz.

Liam's mom and dad are Meghan (Donnelly) and Mac Campbell. Liam is the first grandchild on either side and his very proud grandparents are: Dianne and Bernie Donnelly of Hingham and Linda and John Campbell of Cohasset. Congratulations to all.

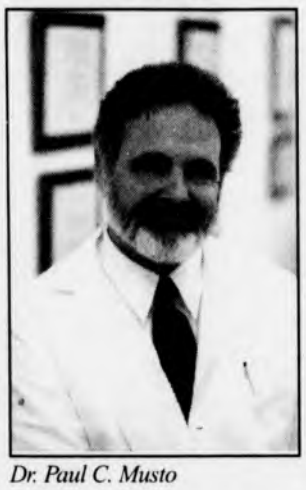
BEST WISHES

Dama Dow, Cohasset School bus driver wants to wish all of her children on the bus and their families a wonderful, happy and safe holiday! She looks forward to seeing all of you in 2005!



AP SCHOLAR AT BC HIGH

William J. Kemeza, President of Boston College High School, is pleased to announce that the College Board in recognition of his exceptional achievement on the College-Level Advanced Placement (AP) Examinations has named Andrew Flynn of Cohasset, a senior at Boston College High School, an AP Scholar. About 17 percent of the more than one million high school students in almost 15,000 secondary schools worldwide, who took AP Exams, performed at a sufficiently high level to merit the recognition of AP Scholar.

NEWCOMER'S CLUB GREETINGS

The Scituate/Cohasset Newcomer's Club would like wish everyone a happy and safe holiday. The club asks that you enjoy your family and friends during this most joyous season. As always, the club continues to accept new members to the Newcomer's "family" — it's never too late to join in on the fun. To learn more about the club visit www.scnewcomers.com_or email/call Jen Harris at or 544-3910.

TOP DOC AT QUINCY MEDICAL

Dr. Paul C. Musto

Paul C. Musto, MD, will assume the presidency of the Quincy Medical Center (QMC) Medical Staff, effective Jan. 1. Dr. Musto is Board Certified in Internal Medicine, Hematology and Medical Oncology. He practices with Commonwealth Hematology/Oncology in Quincy. Dr. Musto, a Cohasset resident, joined the QMC Medical Staff in 1983 and previously served as Chief of Oncology and Chief of Medicine at QMC. As the current Vice President of the Medical Staff, Dr. Musto is the Chairman of the Patient Care Assessment Committee and Co-Chairman of the Cancer Care Committee. Congratulations.

ON STAGE

A recent production of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" was performed recently at Inly School in Scituate. The musical kicked off the school's annual winter "Coats for Kids" charity campaign. Last year, Inly's community of 240 students collected more than 300 coats for those in need. Cohasset cast members were Sarah Antonuccio, Harry, Claire Oswald, Jessica Reagan and Sam Game, who worked on Lights. The cast members are all in the Elementary-2 class (grades 4-6); Sam is in the Middle School (grades 7-8).

2005 SEADOGS

A big high five to Cohasset eighth graders Kyle DeSisto and John Sturino who were recently named early selections to the 2005 South Shore Baseball Club "Seadogs" 14-and-Under Division AAU Travel Team Baseball Program. As members of the "Seadogs," Kyle and John will compete against other AAU organizations in Massachusetts for the right to appear in the AAU Baseball National Championships in Sarasota, FL this coming August. "Competing in the National Championships is a thrill of a lifetime," says Frank Niles, President of the South Shore Baseball Club. Congratulations boys!

SUPER-LAWYER LIST

Town Counsel Paul R. DeRensis was recently named one of 2004's Massachusetts SuperLawyers along with five other members of his firm, Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis & Holland, P.C. The list of 2004 Massachusetts Super Lawyers is based on surveys of more than 37,000 lawyers across the state aimed at selecting as Super Lawyers the top 5 percent of Massachusetts attorneys in more than 60 practice areas. Mr. DeRensis' practice is concentrated in the area of municipal law, but also includes some work in the areas of contract and employment law and non-profit corporations.

REC WINTER PROGRAMS

Please watch the Mariner regarding registration details of a variety of after school recreation programs for children aged 4 through grade 8.

Details for a number of programs will be made available during early January 2005. Pre-registration will be necessary for each program at the recreation office Town Hall. All programs will be specifically age appropriate by design and limited in number. Most programs will meet directly after school until 4:30 or 5 p.m., however, some specialized programs for older students such as Volleyball and Basketball clinics may be held during early evening hours.

That is it for this week. Send me all news that you have no later than Tuesdays at noon.

New Year's Eve with Aerosmith tribute band

'Draw the Line' has local roots

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Neill and Tricia Byrnes have rung in the New Year Aerosmith-style more than a few times in the past. The Hingham couple rocked out with the rest of the sold-out arena crowds at some of Aerosmith's now-legendary Boston-area New Year's Eve concerts for close to a decade from the mid 1980s to the mid 90s.

The rockin' New Year's Eve bash Aerosmith shows during this particular era are legendary in the sense of being a legend within the legend within the overall career of the renown Bad Boys from Boston, one of rock 'n roll history's most famous and infamous stories of success and excess.

The Byrnes' can fondly remember these and other shows during the era, at Boston's Orpheum, the Garden, Fleet Center and the Worcester Centrum. Neill even worked with the Aerosmith Fan Club at the holiday show on the '97-'98 Nine Lives tour at the Fleet Center, handing out "goodie bags" and pink masks sporting the familiar Aerosmith Wings logo to reveling fans.

"The New Year's Eve shows became a sort of tradition with Aerosmith in the 80s and 90s," said Neill Byrnes. "They began right after the band regrouped and started its big comeback around that time. And I guess the whole thing was a sort of thank-you gift to the hometown fans."

More recent years, however, have found Aerosmith moving the New Year's Eve extravaganza to Japan, or not scheduling one at all, which is the case this year, as the band is currently taking a year or more off from performing. In the meantime, the Byrnes' have taken their "fanship" a few steps further than most; Neill Byrnes is the lead singer and Steven Tyler persona of Draw the Line, billed as the only Aerosmith tribute band recognized by Aerosmith, and his wife, Tricia, is the DTL manager, handling the business end of the tribute band operation from her independent home company at Fine Productions.

FROM WWW.DRAWTHELINE.NET

Hingham's Neill Byrnes of Draw the Line, right, with Steven Tyler of Aerosmith.

On New Year's Eve, the Byrnes' and Draw the Line will ring in 2005 Aerosmith-style, but in their own way. Fine Productions presents The "Livin' Like a Rock Star" Ball!!!, an Incredible Evening in the Grand Ballroom at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Braintree, with doors opening at 9 p.m. The whole DTL crew, also including sound and stage personnel plus assorted other friends, promises a rollicking evening of Aerosmith music and appreciation, holiday festivities plus a cool variety of other perks and surprises.

"We're planning to do this show full-out," said Byrnes. "We want to make this almost like a theatre stage show. And we're hoping to make it a yearly thing, and keep the tradition alive.

"Being a longtime Aerosmith fan, I've noticed that the fans around the Boston area tend to be very possessive about their hometown rock 'n roll band that made it big. They miss the annual New Year's Eve shows that Aerosmith did in this area around a decade ago. And they felt almost betrayed when the band moved the whole yearly event to Japan. It left a huge void for a lot of people, including myself. We'd like to put together something as close to one of those great Aerosmith New Year's Eve shows as possible," Byrnes said.

DTL's rockin' Aerosmith New Year's Eve is an all ages show, with general admission tickets priced at $40, for children age 10 and over $20, for children under 10 free. VIP tickets are also available at $75 each and includes a cocktail party with hors d'oeuvres, cash bar, party favors and a champagne toast "On Stage" with the band at midnight. All tickets include a discount room rate at the hotel of $99.

As for the virtual Aerosmith concert itself, Byrnes' is promising a "big production," three hours long, with an more than 30-foot long stage, brand new and bigger-than-ever sound system and laser lighting and elaborate stage props. All this plus, of course, letter-perfect recreations of rockin' Aerosmith classics old and new.

Byrnes, who's a vocal and visual ringer for Tyler onstage, grew up in Hingham and graduated from Hingham High School in 1987. Drummer Chris Pereto (as Joey Kramer) is also a Hingham native, graduating HHS in '91. Bassist John Finnerty, a convincing Tom Hamilton match, currently lives in Hingham. Guitarists Ryan McHugh (as Brad Whitford) lives in Randolph and John Rosario (as Joe Perry) in Cranston, R.I.

"People coming out for the New Year's Eve show can rent rooms at the discount rate at the hotel for the night, making it an open occasion for people with kids," Byrnes says. "We feel that you really can't beat the overall deal for the night out on New Year's Eve. And with our upgraded stage production I can honestly say that no one up to this point has seen Draw the Line do a show like this. We want to make it a show that people will be talking about for weeks to come."

Tickets for Draw the Line's New Year's Eve bash are still available and can be ordered by mail at Fine Productions, 2 Brewster Road, Hingham 02043. Also, by credit card at www.drawtheline.net in person at any DTL shows or by Next Ticketing at 617 423-6000 or: www.nextticketing.com

Town wants harbor seawall to stay virtually the same

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town can opt to have a granite curb installed at a 45 degree angle, which would allow cars to drive up on it to park, keeping cars out of the street but leaving enough space for pedestrians on the sidewalk.

It's back to the drawing board for Christine Player of Vine Associates, who has been working on a redesign of the seawall between the Atlantica Restaurant and the Mill River Marine boatyard.

In light of a public hearing held Tuesday, during which concerned residents and the Board of Selectmen gave their feedback on the plans, it seems everyone likes the area virtually the way it is. Although the area is in need of a facelift, most would like to see only minimal changes.

The area along the seawall is a heavily traversed pedestrian area, and the walkway along the seawall is cracking and is in need of repair for safety reasons. Over the years the seawall itself has also begun falling apart. Repairs were made to the wall in the early 1990s, but the solution was only temporary. Past Town Meetings have appropriated $15,000 to fund preliminary studies of the area, $25,000 to cover preliminary engineering and design costs, and most recently at the Special Town Meeting Dec. 6, $600,000 was appropriated for final engineering, design, and repair costs.

All changes proposed by Vine Associates would work within the footprint of the existing structure. Currently, the existing seawall consists of semi-mortared and semi-cut stones, with a height ranging from 5.9 feet to 8.9 feet in certain areas. The old seawall, which has mortar missing between its stones, would be replaced and laid on top of a concrete foundation for stability. "We can reuse stones that are already there if they're good enough," said Player, which would preserve some of the history of the wall, as well as cut down on costs.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer also suggested with the MBTA projects happening around town, there will be a lot of granite at the town's disposal from bridges and structures being torn down. "Can we use that?" to reconstruct the wall, he asked.

Player said if the town chooses, it can use stones from a source in town, and that can be incorporated into the bid document to ensure the town gets what it wants.

Beside the seawall runs a bituminous paved pedestrian walkway which varies in width from 5 to 6 feet. There are numerous areas of settlement and cracking, as well as small sinkholes in the walkway. The proposed reconstruction project involves the installation of a new 5-foot wide concrete pedestrian walkway and stone/brick buffer strip along the full length of the seawall. However, at the request of those present at the hearing, Player said the buffer strip could be removed and the sidewalks could be kept as asphalt if the town chooses.

Planned repairs to the roadside edge of the new walkway include the installation of granite curbing. However, because currently the sidewalk has no other barrier than a white painted line, which allows for parking on the street, adding a curb to that part of town could negatively affect the parking situation. Player said if the town chooses, it can opt to have a granite curb which is installed at a 45 degree angle, which would allow cars to drive up on it to park, keeping cars out of the street, but also leaving enough space for pedestrians to use the sidewalk.

A pedestrian railing currently extends along the top of the seawall for approximately 290 feet, and then abuts a chain link fence for the remaining 21 feet of the wall. The railing consists of two 2x6 foot horizontal timbers. Although it is in good condition, it does not meet the minimum height and rail spacing requirements per order of the Massachusetts building codes. Because there are no codes for railings on seawalls, Player said her company uses the building codes as a guide.

Her recommendation is to install a new ornamental rail fence along the top of the seawall which meets the requirement of being at least 42 inches in height with a spacing of rails that prevent the passage of an object 4 inches or more in diameter, such as those used in Hingham Harbor. Everyone in attendance at the public hearing was opposed to the proposed fence and said they liked the fence the way it was.

"We design for maximum safety," said Player, adding the height of fencing, the width of sidewalks and the curbing is all done at regulation requirements. However, she said waivers can be applied for if needed and the town can be in complete control of how the project ends up.

Player said she would be more than happy to meet with representatives from the town to make a site visit to the proposed construction area to help everyone envision the changes that will take place. She said ultimately, every decision will be made by the town, and she will work with it to ensure the project is a success. She said she will be working to compile cost estimates of the various ideas expressed at the meeting, and she will come back before the Board of Selectmen at some point in January. Once construction begins, which could be as early as this spring, or the end of this summer, she estimates the project will take roughly seven months to complete.

Jerusalem Rd. Estates to appeal judge's ruling

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In 1996, the town of Cohasset signed an intermunicipal agreement with Hull for the purpose of preventing and lessening water pollution in areas of critical concern.

Although plans to tie-in to Hull's municipal sewer lines have been temporarily squelched, developers for Jerusalem Road Estates are not giving up the fight.

Charles Humphreys, attorney for the developers said after years of working on beginning construction for the project, he sees the Dec. 9 ruling by Norfolk Superior Court Judge Isaac Borenstein as one more obstacle to overcome, and the battle to build is "far from over." As far as he's concerned, "It's just business as usual."

A common thread between many developments in town, Jerusalem Road Estates, a proposed 25-home subdivision to be located across from Straits Pond, is pursuing a wastewater solution. The project, which has been in the works for the past eight years, has soil and ledge conditions on its 43 acres which make it infeasible for an on-site system. Until a wastewater solution can be found, the project is hamstrung.

In 1996, the town of Cohasset signed an intermunicipal agreement with Hull for the purpose of preventing and lessening water pollution in areas of critical concern. As part of that agreement, Cohasset constructed a sewer line to transport up to 80,000 gallons per day of sewerage from the North Cohasset area to be treated at the Hull treatment plant. After the agreement was made, the Commission established a policy that the sewer line could only be used to connect existing dwellings and areas of critical environmental concern.

Jerusalem Road Estates has filed three separate applications with the Sewer Commission for a sewer connection, one of which proposes using some of the town's capacity in Hull by connecting to the line that currently exists. The development also applied to connect to the town sewer line and offered to pay the town $100,000 for the use of the pipe. The Sewer Commission denied both applications stating there was a lack of capacity, as it would like to see how homes which have already connected affect the system before tying any other homes in.

The development also negotiated a deal to purchase capacity outright from the town of Hull, and offered to pay that town $650,000 to treat roughly 14,000 gallons of wastewater per day. The terms required the development to install a private sewer forced main some 2,000 feet eastward to Atlantic Avenue in Hull, which would cost about $250,000 including connecting two Hull homes. Jerusalem Road Estates also offered to allow the town to use any unused purchased capacity after the development tied-in, but the Sewer Commission denied all requests.

Humphreys said the bottom line is, "We want to put a direct line to Hull," and if the town refuses to give the project capacity, "it is an inherent right for us to provide our own."

However, Borenstein's judgment states under the town's rules and regulations, "The Cohasset Sewer Commission has the exclusive authority to create and supervise a system of sewers in Cohasset and private sewers," and he believes the board was acting within its full authority and discretion when it denied the applications.

Humphreys said the decision will soon be followed with a motion for reconsideration and an appeal, and said he is optimistic for the future. "There have been many other issues we've had to resolve," he said, including issues with town boards as well as the Department of Environmental Protection. Humphreys added, at the end of the day, "The question is, do we have a right to contract with another town when our own town refuses (to provide a sewer connection)? We don't think that's an unreasonable request."

Christmas tree pickup is offered

Tired of strained backs, scratched car roofs and cleaning up pine needles and tree sap? Why deal with the hassle?

Project Safeguard, the Cohasset community initiative that offers information to local youth and their parents around the issues of adolescent-related health and wellbeing, announces its annual Christmas tree pickup fund-raiser.

Tired of strained backs, scratched car roofs and cleaning up pine needles and tree sap? Why deal with the hassle? Call Project Safeguard and it will have a representative pick up your tree at your home after the holidays. For a small donation, it will make sure your tree is transported to the transfer station. It's as easy as that and you'll be helping to support an important local service organization in the process.

Don't wait until after Christmas. Call now to schedule a pickup. The pickup dates are Sunday, Jan. 2, and Saturday, Jan. 8. The fee is $15 per tree and $25 for two trees. The fee for seniors is $10 per tree. All checks should be made payable to "Project Safeguard." To schedule a pickup, call the Info Line at "The Garage" at 781-383-2492. Leave your name, address and phone number, and any unusual instructions. Be sure to specify a pickup date. On pickup day, leave your tree by your driveway by 8 a.m. and tape your check (in an envelope) to your door. If you'd like to leave the check in a different location, you should indicate this on your Info Line message.

If you have any questions, call Sally Sisson (781-383-6190) or Coleman Nee (781-383-6958), Project Safeguard community reps.

Also, volunteers are needed to help with this year's pickup. If you own a pickup truck and can spare a couple of hours on either or both pickup days, your help would be appreciated. Give them a call.

Volunteers needed over holidays

Are there any college students home during the holidays who would like to help at Cohasset Elder Affairs? There is a variety of volunteer opportunities available. On completion of your volunteer hours, you will be given a letter recognizing the hours you have volunteered.

The CEA is looking for a volunteer to assist, one or more days a week as an Office Receptionist/Office Assistant. Currently The CEA is also in need of volunteer van drivers. This is a commitment of approximately 3 hours a month. Call Martha Horsefield, Volunteer Coordinator, at 781-383-9112.

FOOD PANTRY DONATIONS

Margie Steele and Moira Stansell of the Cohasset Food Pantry load up a car full of donations with kindergarten teacher Julie DeWaal. Students in all three kindergarten classrooms have been bringing in food items to donate to the pantry, and their generous contributions have produced 12 gift baskets to be given to area families, as well as roughly six bags of groceries to help stock the food pantry's shelves.

Memory Tree at South Shore Community Center

This holiday season will be enriched by remembering, in a tangible way, the joy our loved ones have shared with us in seasons past. Commemorative lights will shine on The Memory Tree on the lawn of the South Shore Community Center. Your tax-deductible contribution will help continue quality programs at SSCC. Participation options are:

Individual: Forget me not white lights for a gift of $5; Angel: Individuals, businesses or professionals giving $15 or more, forget me not white lights; Archangel: Individuals, businesses, professionals giving $50 or more, forget me not white lights. Please make checks payable to The South Shore Community Center, P.O. Box, 631, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

'Twas the Night Before Christmas

Or an Account of a Visit from St. Nicholas by Clement Clarke Moore (1779-1863)

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse;
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there;

The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugar-plums danced in their heads;
And mamma in her 'kerchief, and I in my cap,
Had just settled down for a long winter's nap,

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I sprang from the bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.

The moon on the breast of the new-fallen snow
Gave the luster of mid-day to objects below,
When, what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer,

With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick.
More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled, and shouted, and called them by name;

"Now, DASHER! now, DANCER! now, PRANCER and VIXEN!
On, COMET! on CUPID! on, DONDER and BLITZEN!
To the top of the porch! to the top of the wall!
Now dash away! dash away! dash away all!"

As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky,
So up to the house-top the coursers they flew,
With the sleigh full of toys, and St. Nicholas too.

And then, in a twinkling, I heard on the roof
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof.
As I drew in my hand, and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.

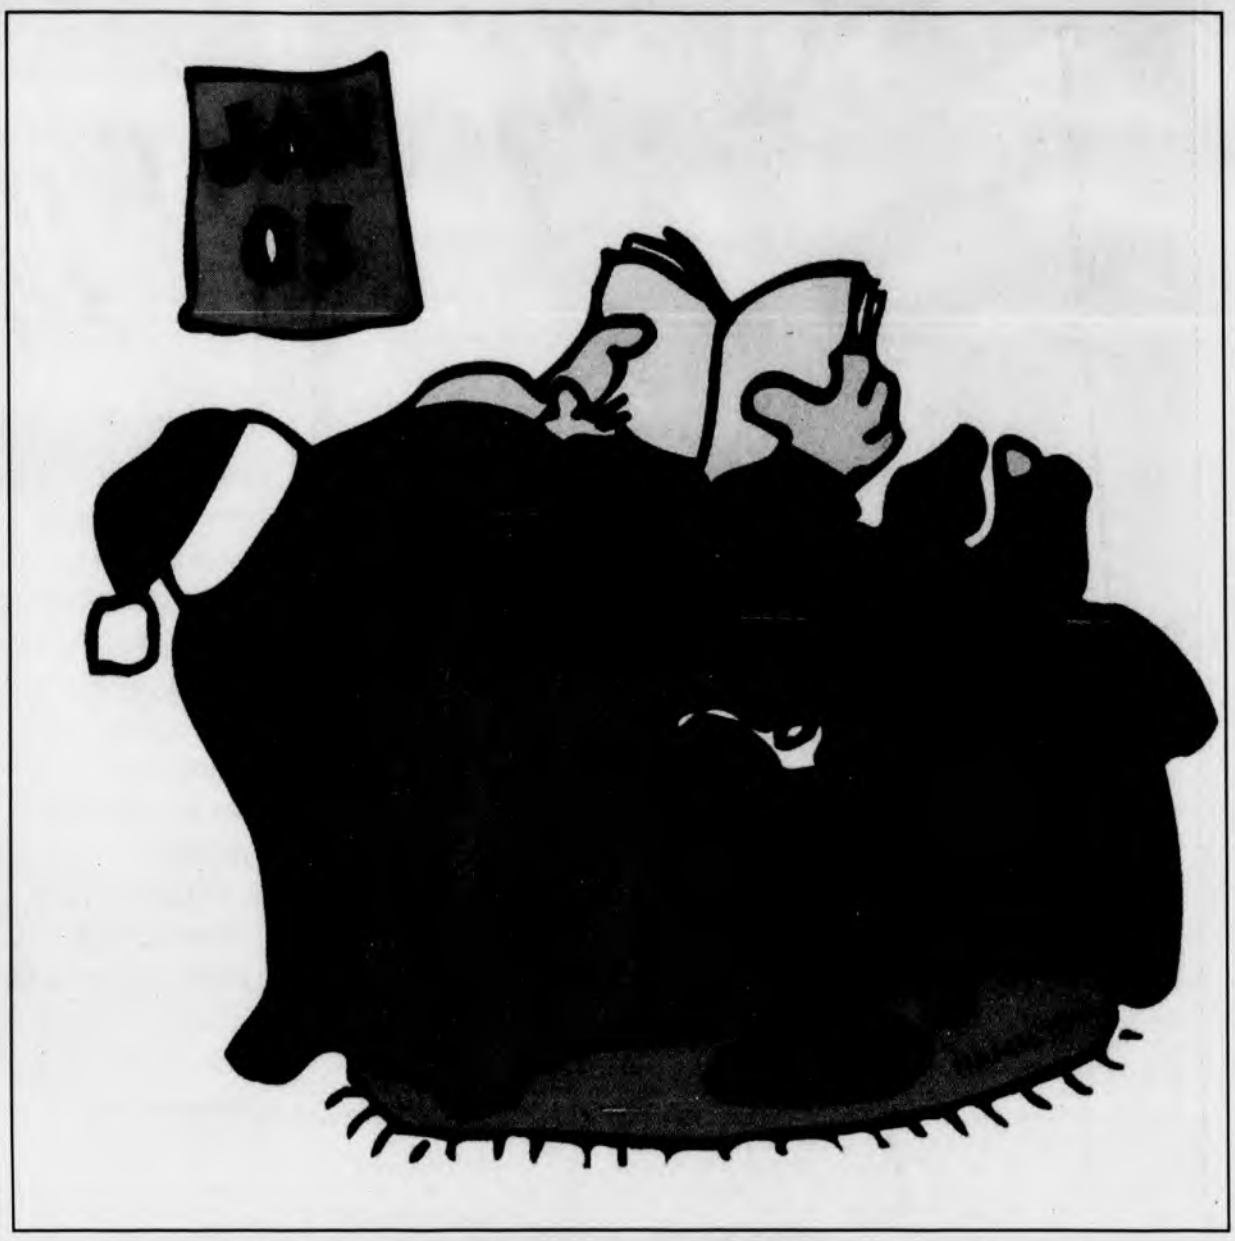
He was dressed all in fur, from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot;
A bundle of toys he had flung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.

His eyes — how they twinkled! his dimples how merry!
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry!
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard of his chin was as white as the snow;

The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath;
He had a broad face and a little round belly,
That shook, when he laughed like a bowl full of jelly.

He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf,
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself;
A wink of his eye and a twist of his head,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread;

He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work,
And filled all the stockings; then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose;



He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle.
But I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight,
"HAPPY CHRISTMAS TO ALL, AND TO ALL A GOOD-NIGHT!"

According to sources cited at University of Toronto English Library, the original 1823 version has the last two reindeer named, "Dunder and Blixem." Also according to the UTEL, this ballad was written in 1822 for Moore's two daughters, Margaret and Charity, and a year later was anonymously published in the Troy [New York] Sentinel on December 23, 1823.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Keep the sand in 'Sandy' beach

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was sent to the Department of Environmental Protection with a copy to the Mariner for publication.

I love Sandy Beach for one big reason: the sand. I am an eager beach lover who grabs my pail at 9 o'clock in the morning in the summer. What's the point of going to Sandy Beach if there's no sand?

Our feet will probably bleed to death. It's a really small beach — most of the coast is rocks. (Cohasset means "rocky place.")

I have a sibling coming along in April. They won't have a beach to love and enjoy. I know a lot of people who love a "sandy beach." Think about the town. We need a "sandy beach" so please change your mind.

Zoe Whilton
fifth grader

Editor's note: Zoe is responding to a column a few weeks ago regarding the EPA's proposal to restore/build a sand barrier and allow the beach to return to its natural rocky state.

A reading of 'The Christmas Angel'

By John Hooper Dean
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The public is welcome to "Our Weeping Angel" in the Hingham Cemetery at 2 p.m., Christmas Day, Dec. 25 (rain or shine or snow) for a reading of my poem, "The Christmas Angel."

The Weeping Angel monument in the Hingham Cemetery was commissioned by my great, great, grandfather John Sewall Hooper upon the death of his dearly beloved wife, Maria, in 1891. John was a close friend of the sculptor, William Wetmore Story, who was widely John Sewall Hooper upon the death of his dearly beloved wife, Maria, in 1891. John was a close friend of the sculptor,

HEALTH NOTES

Get a move on – at the Community Center

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"The first wealth is health." —Ralph Waldo Emerson

This Christmas season, right here in Cohasset, we have one of the better best kept secrets. Who ever said physical activity is all work and no play? In fact, it can be just the opposite! There is no need to think of strenuous workouts that are painful and boring. Instead, imagine doing fun physical activities you enjoy and look forward to. Many of your neighbors are enjoying the fellowship of interesting activities while getting a good workout at the South Shore Community Center.

Despite the proven benefits of physical activity, more than 50 percent of American adults do not get enough physical activity to provide health benefits. Twenty-five percent of adults are not active at all in their leisure time. Activity decreases with age and is less common among women than men. According to the Center for Disease Control, people of all ages who are generally inactive can improve their health and well-being by becoming active at a moderate-intensity on a regular basis.

Regular physical activity substantially reduces the risk of dying of coronary heart disease, the nation's leading cause of death, and decreases the risk for stroke, colon cancer, diabetes, and high blood pressure. It also helps to control weight; contributes to healthy bones, muscles, and joints; reduces falls among older adults; helps to relieve the pain of arthritis; reduces symptoms of anxiety and depression; and is associated with fewer hospitalizations, physician visits, and medications. Retired inactive males have higher mortality than any other group. Moreover, physical activity need not be strenuous to be beneficial; people of all ages benefit from participating in regular, moderate-intensity physical activity.

Insufficient physical activity is not limited to adults. More than a third of young people in grades 9–12 do not regularly engage in vigorous-intensity physical activity. Daily participation in high school physical education classes dropped from 42 percent in 1991 to 32 percent in 2001 (CDC, 2002).

It's difficult to imagine the range of activities at the Community Center. Many see it as a place to take their kids, but the center has a full range of services and activities for folks of all ages, and they're constantly adding more.

One of the most popular activities is Tuesday Bowling in the three lanes under the Center. Beginning at 9:30 a.m. until noon upwards of 25 people show up to compete and swap stories with their friends. It's one of the best examples of exercise combined with entertainment; the exercise from the bowling and the entertainment from the stories being swapped.

Many of the Center's activities are sponsored by State funding but for those mentioned here, a $3 donation is customarily requested.

Another popular function is Karen Kirkendahl's 7:30 a.m. low impact aerobics fitness class on Tuesday and Thursday mornings. The wife of one of the Board of Health members attends, and it's an exhilarating experience for both of us.

On Wednesdays at 10 a.m. Holly Pereira, a yoga trainer, holds a yoga class called 'The Body Proud' It's popular with those who need to energize and lessen the tensions in their life.

Thursday at 1:15 p.m. Stephanie Whiting teaches an ancient system of total relaxation and rejuvenation involving lessons in posture, muscle tone and relaxation adjustment.

At 10 a.m. on Fridays, Paula Luoma, a certified Physical Therapist teaches us how to better cope with our arthritis. The course is reputed to relieve moderate problems osteo-arthritis.

These are just a few of the Community Center/Counsel on Aging programs designed to keep us all in touch with our friends and to swap lore about the best way to cope with some of our ailments.

And in January, we'll have an opportunity to get into a van and go from the Community Center to Weymouth to the MDC pool for swimming, one of the best exercises for anyone; particularly good for backs and joints.

Exercise and fellowship; the key to aging gracefully.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

From left, fifth-graders: Meghan Burke, " for my mom, dad, and brother to be happy." Scarlett McQuade, "that no one is hungry on Christmas." Erica Burke, " for the world to be happy and not sad."

From left, fifth-graders: Alexiree Hastings, "for everyone to have a lot of presents so they can be happy." Michaela Hastings, "that I could build homes for the homeless."

From left, fifth-graders: Abby Brown, " for my whole family's health for the new year." Alison Whelan, "that the troops in Iraq will have a happy holiday." Danielle Frederick, "that all the families with someone in Iraq will still have a Merry Christmas."

Merry Chrismukkah!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Leave it to television, in this case the Fox Channel, to solve our great national dilemma, halt the decline of Western civilization as we know it and make the world safe for Santa Claus.

The folks at Channel 25 have come up with a way to keep Christ, or at least a part of him, in Christmas without disappointing those Jewish kids who wanted a set of Lionel electric trains for the holiday but couldn't get one because Santa never visited their houses.

I was surfing the cable last week when I stumbled across something called "The O.C.," in which one of the lead characters was wearing on his head a red beanie fringed in white fur with a white pom pom on top.

The yarmuclauses, I'm told, sold out even before they made their debut on "The O. C."

Now, I've been to Brookline and Sharon and the darned thing looked like a yarmulke to me but the guys on the TV kept calling it a "yarmuclaus" and said they were a Jewish-Christian family celebrating "Chrismukkah."

It took a while but I finally got it — Chrismukkah is a combination of Christmas and Hanukkah, which I suppose makes it all right to give every kid electric trains and sing Chrismukkah carols in a public school classroom.

I'm not sure about those nativity scenes on the common though.

"What Jewish boy or girl growing up doesn't feel a little jealous?" Josh Schwartz, creator of "The O. C." told USA Today. "They get all the good songs, the tree, Frosty and Rudolph. We get dreidels. It's not the same."

You can tell that Chrismukkah is taking hold among the people for whom Christmas used to be the most important holiday of the year — the half of the population that sells presents to the other half.

Warner Brothers, which produces "The O.C.," is already selling yarmuclauses for $15.95 apiece, boxes of Merry Chrismukkah cards for $15.95 and "Menorah & Candy Canes" wrapping paper for $12.95.

The yarmuclauses, I'm told, sold out even before they made their debut on "The O. C."

And Ron and Michelle Gompertz (he's Jewish, she's Christian) are selling cards featuring Santa's reindeer that have menorah antlers for $15 a dozen and "Merry Mazel Tov" mugs for $11.99 from their Web site "Chrismukkah.com."

The Gompertz expect to make $35,000 on the sale of cards alone.

Maybe if Chrismukkah really catches on we can expect some enterprising merchant to come up with a new holiday combining Kwanzaa or Ramadan or whatever it is turns Buddhists, Hindus and Bahais on during the winter solstice.

And if it really, really catches on maybe we'll have a new holiday in the spring.

How about "Eastover?"

Meanwhile, I'll just stick to the plain, old fashioned "Merry Christmas!" to all.

News about the MBTA is anything but merry

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

It was a bad week for the MBTA – and next year isn't looking too good, either.

In the span of fewer than five days, the transit authority's leaders weathered a tough audit that made front page headlines questioning how the T could have collected so little in new revenue from its parking operations while its private contractor made out great; endured catcalls and charges of betrayal over plans to renege on long-promised expansion of the Green Line; and fended off accusations that the T's going back on its commitment to reserve Dorchester jobs for women and minorities.

But, as they say on late-night TV, that's not all. These developments occurred hard on the heels of the recent acknowledgement a $255 million investment in Green Line cars from the Breda corporation, once the source of pride and promise for the T, has become a debacle each side blames on the other, none of which helps the riders.

Another thing they say on late-night TV is: "Wait! There's more!" And there is. Fares are up, ridership is down, and the general manager is again warning of budget problems ahead even as the authority backpedals on earlier assurances of expansion and improvement.

The immediate problem was the report from State Auditor Joseph DeNucci, finding that although the MBTA is starved for cash, and although two million more riders parked their cars at MBTA facilities in the past six years, the authority collected only $300,000 in additional revenue from the increased parking. The parking operators reaped $16 million from the pickup in business. "The existing agreement only enriches the parking operator at the T's expense," the audit found.

But DeNucci's work was only a detail of a dreary picture. The authority appears over committed and under funded; perhaps the real issue is whether a big reform of the authority's operations a few years ago did any good. The 1999 "forward funding" initiative in the state budget was supposed to establish an environment where the T could start running more like a business – establish its operations goals and manage its priorities so that it wouldn't have to turn to the Legislature for an annual bailout of unpredictable size.

The political dynamic is reasonably, and unhappily, clear. Legislators want to be able to think, and say, they solved the MBTA's budget difficulties with the "forward funding" reform. They'd like to avoid, or evade anyway, the re-emergence of another budget-busting problem child. But the authority, after raising fares twice in four years, is obviously at a decision point: break its budget or break its promises.

That puts the ball back in the Legislature's court, or will eventually. After people leave hearings like last Wednesday's, at which about 300 people lambasted the administration for suggesting it would modify or scrap plans for trolley service to Jamaica Plain and Somerville, they call their reps. And, "We did something about that in 1999" is not a good enough answer. Only sound business practice is, yet the legislators don't control the day-to-day business of the T.

Businesses have to deliver a product people want at a price they can afford, while covering their costs sufficiently to continually deliver new and better goods. The MBTA is clearly having difficulty with that dynamic. And that implies that for the agency's leadership, the bad weeks aren't going to end with this one.

• Romney asks for Big Dig transfer of power — The transportation debacle with the most news punch didn't fail to make its share of headlines. Back from a series of meetings in Washington, the governor told reporters at the State House that the state could lose $81 million federal dollars as punishment for not being aggressive enough in recouping overruns and the cost of defects on the Central Artery project. Romney proposed legislation to set up a new cost-review commission for the Big Dig, as U.S. Transportation Department Inspector General Kenneth Mead has requested.

• In Washington, state lobbies for continuation of Medicaid break worth $600M — Besides the Big Dig, Romney had health costs on his agenda during the mid-week sojourn to D.C. The governor met with Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson on the subject of a Medicaid waiver worth about $600 million a year to Massachusetts. Put in simple terms, the federal government is on the verge of changing its rules for reimbursing health care services provided by state programs, and it looks like Massachusetts might soon be on the hook for services now underwritten by Washington. Official word will come in January as to whether Romney's lobbying, and that of other governors and congressmen, made any difference.

• Governor, seeking a thaw, hosts power dinners with democrats — His communications director insisted Gov. Romney was simply in the holiday spirit, but veterans at the State House saw a good measure of realpolitick in the governor's burst of hospitality toward Democratic leaders over the past 10 days. His candidates trounced in the November election, the governor must now depend on the kindness of Democrats to accomplish anything on the Hill. So he invited Senate President Travaglini and House Speaker DiMasi to a North End restaurant two weeks ago, and his Belmont home last week. And last Tuesday night, the Romneys hosted the state's constitutional officers for dinner. Attorney General Thomas Reilly didn't accept the invitation; he was busy attending an event of his own, to raise money for an expected bid to unseat Romney in two years.

• Commissioner approves auto insurance decrease, orders reforms — Insurance Commissioner Julianne Bowler ordered statewide auto insurance premiums decrease an average of 1.7 percent in 2005. The new rate, which takes effect Jan. 1, 2005, will result in an average decrease of $18.30 per vehicle, leaving an average statewide annual premium of $1,063. The ruling makes big changes in how high-risk drivers are apportioned to a statewide risk-sharing pool; decreases surcharges for a first accident or violation, at the expense of repeat offenders; and sharply increases premiums for inexperienced drivers, while offering a new 5-percent incentive to those young drivers who complete a motorist training course. Gov. Romney said the state is now halfway done with the job of reforming auto insurance; Reilly highly praised Bowler's decision.

• Charter school closing proposed — The Roxbury Charter High School for Business, Finance and Entrepreneurship apparently neglected to practice what it teaches – or taught, since Education Commissioner David Driscoll this week proposed closing the school. Dept. of Education officials say it's been badly managed. It would be the first charter school closed by the state.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on two roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

SNOWPLOWS (S 2400)

Senate 26-13, approved an amendment requiring motor vehicles to remove their snow blades and hitching mechanism by May 15 each year and prohibiting them from being reinstalled until October 15. The measure exempts state, county and municipal vehicles and any vehicle over 26,000 pounds and allows temporary reinstallation of the plow and hitching mechanism if there is snowfall during the restricted period. It also permits owners to remove only the plow if the hitching mechanism can be folded flat and leaves no protruding surface. Amendment supporters said the bill would save lives and prevent injuries. They pointed to accidents that result in serious injuries caused by these hitching mechanisms that go through the window at head level of other vehicles during a crash. Amendment opponents said the bill is another example of government overregulation to solve a problem that is not proven to be widespread. They noted that the snowplow attachments are used for other purposes including logging and towing. Some said it is hypocritical to exempt state and municipal vehicles while burdening private vehicles with this requirement. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment requiring motor vehicles to remove their snow blades and hitching mechanism. A "Nay" vote is against the requirement).

BULK PURCHASING OF PRESCRIPTION DRUGS (S 2400)

Senate 39-0, approved an amendment creating a single purchasing unit under which the state would buy prescription drugs in bulk for all its state agencies and programs that provide drugs to residents. The amendment also requires all drug companies to annually disclose the value and purpose of any gift or payment provided to any doctor, hospital, nursing home, pharmacist or any other person authorized to prescribe, dispense or purchase prescription drugs in Massachusetts. Another section creates the Healthy Massachusetts Discount Card Plan designed to allow residents without adequate coverage for prescription drugs to take advantage of discounted prices for these drugs. Amendment supporters said this landmark amendment is a major step toward lowering the skyrocketing cost of prescription drugs purchased by the state and would save million of dollars. They said it is outrageous and fiscally irresponsible for the state not to pool its drug purchases in order to negotiate bulk rates from drug companies. They also noted that the section requiring gift disclosures by drug companies would give the state more information on how some companies are manipulating health care providers into prescribing the company's drugs. Some said that the Healthy Massachusetts Discount Card Plan would help struggling residents who cannot afford to purchase prescription drugs. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ELDERLY ABUSE (H 1116)- The House and Senate gave final approval to and sent to Gov. Romney legislation requiring directors and outreach workers of local councils on aging to report suspected abuse of an elderly person to the state's Department of Elder Affairs. The measure adds these directors and workers to a long list of mandated reporters of elderly abuse including physicians, emergency medical technicians, dentists, nurses, social workers, police officers and firefighters. Both branches also attached an emergency preamble to the bill in order to make it effective immediately rather than in 90 days.

TENANTS' WATER AND SEWER BILLS (H 5001)- Gov. Romney signed into law a bill allowing landlords to install meters and bill their tenants for the amount of water and sewer services used. The legislation would allow landlords to bill only new tenants and only if the landlords install water conservation devices for all faucets, showerheads and toilets in the unit. Tenants in public housing units would be exempt from having a meter installed in their units. Supporters said the measure would preserve resources by encouraging reduced water use by many tenants that often use more water when their landlords are paying the bills. Opponents said the bill is anti-tenant and would increase rents that are already skyrocketing.

PROHIBIT SURCHARGE FOR MAILING INVOICES (H 4398)- The House has postponed final action on a bill prohibiting companies from charging a fee or penalty to a customer who receives the company's bill or invoice by U.S. mail instead of by e-mail. The measure does allow companies to offer a discount to customers who choose to receive their bills or invoices by e-mail. Supporters said many companies prefer that customers receive their bills on the Internet because the companies save printing and postage costs. They noted that many consumers do not have Internet access and/or prefer to receive their bills by regular mail. They pointed out that the legislation would ensure that companies are prohibited from taking the next step and charging these consumers an extra fee to receive their bills via regular mail. Both the House and Senate have given near final approval to the proposal and only final approval is needed in each branch prior to the measure going to the governor.

ELDERLY WATER CHARGE ABATEMENT (H 3001)- The House approved an amendment to legislation allowing cities and towns to abate the first $500 of water charges paid by low-income seniors over age 65 who meet certain requirements. Under the bill, individual seniors would qualify for the exemption if their annual income equals less than $16,000 while married seniors would qualify with a joint income of less than $24,000. Another provision requires that these seniors have lived in Massachusetts for at least ten years and have owned property in the state for at least five years. Sponsors of the amendment noted that the key local option provision "allowing" cities and towns to offer the exemption is vague. The amendment adopted by the House provides that the exemption be allowed only if voters agree to it at a regular municipal election.

Making the case in Superior Court for local say over Greenbush impacts

GREENBUSH VIEW

MARTHA A. R. BEWICK

Hingham attorney Joseph M. Fisher, Chairman of the Hingham Conservation Commission and Doug Wilkins, of Anderson & Kreiger LLP, of Cambridge, attorney for Advocates for Transportation Alternatives, in Suffolk Superior Court at the conclusion of their arguments on the Hingham wetlands variance on Greenbush.

The Hingham Conservation Commission, Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA), the MBTA and the Massachusetts Attorney General's office, representing the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), recently met in Suffolk Superior Court to present the case for and against the granting of the Hingham wetlands variance on Greenbush. This is one of a number of legal contests underway currently.

Under the design/build method of construction, the MBTA began the Greenbush project without having wetlands, water quality, and endangered species permits in hand, as any other applicant, public or private, is required to do. The agency is trying to leapfrog or expedite environmental requirements to keep the project on schedule. The Conservation Commission was presenting arguments to support its statutory role in regulatory processes at the local level. AfTA was there to challenge the variance procedures, and ask for proper hearings, among other arguments.

Joe Fisher, Chairman of the Hingham Conservation Commission, and Doug Wilkins, of Anderson & Kreiger LLP, attorney for AfTA, presented briefs and arguments to Judge Nonnie S. Burnes, followed by agency representatives. Fisher, a Hingham attorney, argued that the MBTA is being allowed by DEP to proceed with the Greenbush project without having presented sufficient plans or information to the Hingham Conservation Commission. He said that Massachusetts statutes set forth procedures which are being violated by the MBTA and the DEP.

When impacts affect more than 5,000 square feet, as they do in Hingham on the Greenbush project, there is an automatic denial that the Hingham Conservation Commission must issue. The question comes as to how and where the Conservation Commission and DEP properly participate in the permitting process. The dilemma arises where DEP says that Hingham must deny a permit, so therefore all permitting for the variance will be handled by DEP. Hingham argues the Commission is still required to scrutinize the project details, hold public hearings, ensure that abutters are notified, and transmit its findings to the state agency.

Fisher pointed out that the statutorily required hearings before Massachusetts conservation commissions is the "only place the public has a forum, and where other town boards have an opportunity to comment" on the details and impacts of wetlands impacts. Conservation commissions are uniquely situated to represent the local interests. He noted, by way of one example, West Street abutters within 100 feet of proposed mitigation work in wetlands replication have never been notified of the proposed action, as required by statute. The wetlands replication work was not fully developed, and the process was "short-circuited because of insufficient information." His conclusion was that in providing inadequate and insufficient information, the MBTA and the DEP have "stripped the Conservation Commission of its ability to do its job."

Conservation commissions in Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate have all expressed concern that some issues they raised were ignored by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection in the process that is being challenged here.

Fisher then speculated that the MBTA's response would be "So what? What's the harm?" The Judge responded: "Yes, that's my question. Is this just make work?" Fisher responded in turn that going through the Conservation Commission is a formal procedural process. "There's no short-cut getting through the Hingham Conservation Commission under the statutory scheme and regulatory schemes." He cited both regulatory and policy reasons to support the position of the Conservation Commission, and acknowledged that "we could have another statutory scheme, but we don't." He summarized by noting that the Hingham Conservation Commission is by statute a public forum, which uses local expertise, and that the courts have acknowledged this role.

Conservation commissions in Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate have all expressed concern that some issues they raised were ignored by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection in the process that is being challenged here. The Massachusetts Association of Conservation Commissions is also reviewing the implications of these actions.

Wilkins stepped up to make four arguments on behalf of AfTA. The first was AfTA's agreement with the Hingham Conservation Commission, that there was a lack of detailed project information given to the Commission, and that the MBTA is required to follow proper procedures. When asked by Judge Burnes how the Commission would properly respond given that it must deny the project based on its size, Wilkins responded that the Commission could deny, but then give conditions which would issue were the variance to be granted. Wilkins also pointed out that the MBTA could have chosen a different permitting path, going to DEP first, and then to the Commission with full plans and complete information. They chose not to go this route. Wilkins stated that the Commission's requirement to review detailed plans and information is "not meaningless by any means." He also pointed out that there are issues of a similar nature which go down the line to Cohasset and Scituate. In Scituate's case, plans have not been sufficiently developed so as not to affect resources, drinking water supply resources among others.

Whole project

In a second point, Wilkins said that the Variance had considered only the Hingham portion of Greenbush as the "project." He then noted that the DEP had compared the public benefits of the entire 17.7 mile Greenbush project to the negative impacts of just the Hingham section, rather than to the negative impacts of the whole project. Thirdly, Wilkins argued that AfTA had been denied a hearing before the Administrative Law Judge. AfTA had introduced arguments that the overriding public benefits were actually non-existent or insubstantial, that the air quality impacts were neutral, and that there would be an increase in certain pollutants. (DEP now states that if there is not a reduction in particulates and NOx emissions from Greenbush diesel engines, that they will require mitigation for the emissions generated by Greenbush.) He pointed out that issues of transportation alternatives were issues for the DEP Commissioner to decide, and that she should not have been relieved of her right and obligation to hold a hearing on these matters. In this case, the Administrative Law Judge, and the Commissioner had deferred to the MBTA 's study of alternatives.

Finally, Wilkins argued that the "taking of endangered species is not allowed" Judge Burnes asked if there were no overriding public purpose provision in the endangered species act, and Wilkins said "no, the ruling cannot be given." Wilkins finished by saying that the variance was unlawful, and should be reversed and remanded to the DEP.

Arguments by the Attorney General and the MBTA counsel objected to those presented by Fisher and Wilkins. (to be continued next week.)

Weather is focus of Jan. 5 talk at Lifesaving Museum

As the winter weather season rolls in, the public is welcome to hear meteorologist Rob Gilman discuss some of the incredible storms he's seen hit the South Shore, as well as the forecasting techniques that help him warn us of what's coming next. The event is 7 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 5 at the Hull Lifesaving Museum on Nantasket Avenue. Admission is $3 for members and $5 for non-members. Rob Gilman is WATD's resident meteorologist. His live reports begin at 5am each day, and air throughout the day. "And if there is a storm brewing, we'll stay on the air as long as necessary," Rob says.

Rob grew up on the South Shore watching weatherman Don Kent on TV, then studied meteorology at Penn State. He got his start in radio with the college's campus radio station, and has worked at Accuweather, and WRKO Radio, Boston. His forecast appears daily in the Patriot Ledger.

Rob grew up on the South Shore watching weatherman Don Kent on TV, then studied meteorology at Penn State.

How does Rob actually forecast the weather? "I don't just look out the window," he says. "That's like looking into a room through a keyhole. You see part of the room but you can't see the guy behind the door who's holding the gun!"

Instead of the keyhole approach, Rob relies on up-to-the-minute information from satellites and hourly FAA computerized forecasts. He is in constant touch with weather stations at Blue Hill, Logan Airport, and other airports throughout New England, and also talks regularly with amateur weather watchers on the South Shore.

"Weather can be very different in Hingham or Plymouth than on Route 128, or even Boston. My forecasts are specifically for people who live and work on the South Shore," he says.

Big winds, big job, Driver's Ed, and school chaperones 50 years ago through driving rain. Red had us secure loose material and get all the tools under cover. There was not much else to do so we left before noon. I wheeled my bicycle home rather than chance riding in the gusty downpour.

Carol knocked out power and phones for many days. Then Edna hit and sent us back to cooking meals on the wood stove and eating by candlelight. Back then phone lines were often strung from tree to tree. Underground burial was expensive as were extra poles. After Carol, power and phone repair crews and trucks came from all over the east to help. A New York Telephone Company truck from Brooklyn worked in our area. The linemen had never seen wires hanging on trees: they had neither long ladders for tree climbing nor tree trunk hangers. To them, Cohasset was as remote as Tasmania. They came back after Edna's visit, no better equipped.

Trees - big ones - were down everywhere. One landed on the roof of a house on Sohier street now owned by my Aunt Helen Pratt. Across the street the Music Circus tent hung from its poles in tatters. Rainfall from the two storms totaled over 11 inches. The Cohasset Fire Department answered calls to pump flooded cellars all over town.

Before 16, you are a growing kid. At 16, you truly become a big kid. A big kid with a real summer job. A big kid with a driver's license. Even though I had been driving for three years, Pop insisted that I take Driver Education. I could get a license without Driver's Ed, but his insurance would suffer. After my first session behind the wheel, the instructor said I passed — he needed more time to work with less experienced learners. One May day, the DMV License Examiner came to Cohasset High School. All of the candidates were apprehensive. One by one we were called out of class for the dreaded road test. One by one we came back smiling and waving our provisional licenses. Everyone passed! Even a classmate everyone called 'Lead foot.' That fall, a new Driver Ed car with dual controls was given to Cohasset High School — too late for my class to use.

Having a driver's license and money in my pocket brought a new dimension to the Christmas Holidays. I could go shopping on my own! Although our '51 Chevy was only three years old, the upholstery was fraying badly. I took Route 3A to an auto accessory store on Neponset Circle. There I bought a present for my parents: new seat covers for the car. They were a garish blue. I liked them. Pop liked them. Mother did not.

Now I could go on dates without a parent as chauffeur. Our school dances were pretty staid — Rock-and-Roll had not arrived. Boys wore ties and jackets, girls wore sweaters and skirts. And - always - we had to invite teachers as chaperones. No telling what kids might do without supervision. No one would ever ask a chaperone to dance. However we did serve them Coke and cookies. They smiled and, I suspect, pretended to be enjoying themselves. Our favorite chaperones really did enjoy themselves. Coach and Mrs. Everett 'Evie' Dorr could jitterbug with an abandon and skill that we teenagers couldn't hope to match.

That Christmastime I had my first accident. My Naval officer brother-in-law Bob asked me to drive him to Christmas shop at the Hingham Ammunition Depot Post Exchange. It was snowing when we set out. On North Main Street a truck pulled out of a driveway ahead of us. I hit the brakes and was surprised when our speed didn't change. I was more surprised that our direction did change - rapidly. The Chevy spun through one full 360-degree circle and commenced another. It plowed through the hedge in front of the old Brockton Edison office and came to a stop on the driveway facing out to the street. The brakes had not slowed the car but the hedge did. Bob had disappeared: he was hunkered down under the dashboard, hoping to survive uninjured. I had my license. I knew how to drive, right? Wrong. New drivers don't really learn about driving until they have a few close calls. This was my first.

We continued on to Hingham — with me still driving. The exchange was small but Bob knew exactly what he wanted to give Cindy. They went to Illinois that Christmas so I did not see her reaction on opening Bob's gift. He had gotten her something he was sure would please her and show his deep affection for her — a lovely new fishing rod with a spinning reel!

I wonder how many fish he caught with it.

Who's the top citizen?

See form this page

In keeping with an 11-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

The deadline for nominations for the 2004 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 7. Please see the nomination form on page 12. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Nominations may also be sent by email to mford@cnc.com.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2004 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2005.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

Former Massachusetts governor and presidential candidate, Michael Dukakis, acknowledges the standing ovation he received after talking to Democrats from the Marshfield Democratic Town Committee and the Plymouth County Democrat League at the Bridgewaye last Thursday.

Dukakis tells local Democrats it's time to get back to basics

Former governor fires up party during meeting at Bridgewaye

By Elizabeth Malloy
EMALLOY@CNC.COM

During his early political campaigns, former Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis said he recalls knocking on every door in his precinct to get his name and message out to voters.

In recent campaigns far less of that kind of campaigning is taking place, Dukakis said, and that is why the party is struggling on a national scale and has failed to put a Democratic governor on Beacon Hill since his final term ended in 1990.

Dukakis brought his message to party members from across the state at the Plymouth County Democratic League's monthly meeting last Thursday at the Bridgeway Inn in Marshfield. Dukakis told the group that getting back to the grassroots level — complete with precinct captains and door-to-door canvassing — that worked for him would help strengthen the Democratic Party.

He also said work had to begin soon.

"I think the effort has to begin in the spring," Dukakis said. "You can't parachute in a bunch of kids into a state two weeks before the election and expect to win."

While the Massachusetts Democratic Party was celebrating this election day after keeping nearly every elected Democrat in office, and adding a few more, on a national level the party is struggling. Sen. John Kerry's loss in the presidential election was especially tough for Democrats, as was losing more seats to Republic and in both the House and Senate in November.

While the next presidential election is four years away, Bay State Democrats are putting most of their efforts on the next gubernatorial election in two years.

"The goal should be to visit every single voting household in Massachusetts, no matter where they live how they're registered, no matter who they are," Dukakis said.

The son of two Greek immigrants (according to him, his mother was the first Greek-American woman to go to college), Dukakis first became governor of Massachusetts in 1974. He lost reelection to Edward King in 1978, but then beat King in 1982, and won again in 1986.

Massachusetts Democratic Party leader and Marshfield resident Phil Johnston introduced Dukakis by noting the a special relationship the former governor had with the South Shore and his many supporters here.

"He was a guy who cared about us, who cared about the South Shore," Johnston said. "We're going to have a railroad train down here on the South Shore, hopefully one day before I die, and the person we'll have to thank is Mike Dukakis."

Dukakis said that grassroots campaigning is about more than going door to door. During a question and answer session with audience members, Dukakis said that he didn't believe more conservative media outlets like Fox News really had much of an impact on the election, but said if Democrats wanted the media to more aggressively investigate the Bush administration's policies, those in the party need to approach the media directly.

The former governor also said that the Democrats should not give up on typically "red" areas as quickly as they have. He said that they needed to talk to people such as evangelical Christians who are said to have voted overwhelmingly for Bush and other Republicans.

"If you're not talking to them, then gays and guns are going to carry the day," he said.

Much of the evening focused on what Massachusetts Democrats need to do in order to get another one of their own into the governor's office, and Dukakis reminisced about his terms in office, calling it "the best job anyone could have."

Dukakis said John Kerry, who once served as his lieutenant governor, ran a better presidential campaign than he did in 1988 against George Bush, and noted how this year was the first time the Democrats matched the Republicans in fundraising. However, he said that there was still a need for more grassroots campaigning and getting the Democratic message directly to more people.

"Given what I know about winning presidential campaigns — that and 50 cents won't buy you a cup of coffee — but for whatever it's worth, this is what he have to do," he said. "Moderate and low income people in this country ought to be Democrats."

Out-of-town enrollment seen as a benefit for school staff

keep budget increases at 2-1/2 percent," he said. [Prop. 2-1/2 prevents municipalities from increasing their tax levy more than 2-1/2 percent over the prior year without an override].

But allowing those who work for the district to send their children to Cohasset schools is nothing new. "This has been a benefit for quite a while," School Committee member Rick Flynn said at last week's board meeting. He said allowing staff to enroll their children in Cohasset schools has "always been viewed as a positive benefit," which allows the town to attract better teachers and retain them. "It has worked out well over the years," he said.

Flynn said having students from other towns attend Cohasset schools should be looked at as a benefit comparable to the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity, or METCO program. The METCO program is intended to expand educational opportunities and reduce racial imbalance, by permitting students in certain cities to attend suburban public schools in participating communities.

While Flynn said in both instances people tend to just look at the numbers, the benefits of allowing both METCO students and students of staff members to attend Cohasset schools far outweighs the cost.

The 12 students of staff members who currently attend Cohasset schools, when spread out over 13 grades, does not impact the schools as much as it might appear, Flynn said. While he said he understands why some might compute the match of 12 students at $8,600 a piece — and figure the town could save a little more than $100,000 if those students did not attend — he explained that is not the way the budget works. In fact, "It has very little (financial) impact," when those students are added to the district.

Cohasset schools are viewed as some of the best around, Flynn said. He said teachers, who might consider teaching in other districts that pay a higher salary, might consider staying in Cohasset to allow their children to receive a better education than their hometown could provide. The benefit of Cohasset's being able to retain some great teachers due to the enrollment option helps keep up the high standards of education the town has, he said.

The latest copy of the collective bargaining agreement between the Cohasset School Committee and the Cohasset Teachers' Association, effective from 2002-2005, states: "If the Superintendent of Schools determines that space exists at the chosen grade level, then children of staff will be permitted to attend the Cohasset schools. Their attendance will be reviewed each year and continued enrollment will be determined by space availability. Placement will be allowed in the regular education program."

Despite steadily climbing enrollment figures, Flynn said unless something very drastic happened in terms of the amount of staff members, who wanted to enroll their children, it will continue to be a benefit the town is happy to provide. "If all of a sudden we saw a dramatic increase, it might be a different story, but it's been mutually beneficial over time and doesn't seem to be detrimental," Flynn said.

Collective bargaining discussions between the teachers and the school department are currently underway.

Although Cohasset opens its doors to both out-of-town METCO students and children of staff members, it does not participate in a state program

School Choice, which would open doors to any student wishing to attend Cohasset schools from any town. Through the Department of Education, every year School Committees in Massachusetts have the option of participating in the School Choice program, which asks participating districts who send their children to other schools to pay tuition to that school to educate the out-of-town students. Statistics dating back to 2003 from the DOE show Cohasset has not been participating.

Girls hoops on winning path

Lady Skippers 3-0 after winning SSVT tourney

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Wins are piling up faster than iPod backorders on the internet.

The Lady Hoopsters have catapulted themselves to a 3-0 record, a start identical to last year's outstanding record.

Clearly, Christmas has arrived early for the team. The Skippers want to dispel the critics who said last year's success was a "fluke" performance. So far so good.

"This team exhibits much potential," said Cohasset head coach John Levangie. "Despite a shallow bench, we contain a lot of raw talent. As the second-string players progress, I expect to see even better things from the girls." Levangie also expressed satisfaction with the leadership styles of co-captains Casey Anderson and Nicole Whitney.

With Anderson consistently scoring more than twenty-five points per game, Cohasset's offense seems to hold few flaws. But is the defense up to par? A quick glance makes the answer quite obvious in a positive way.

"We remain a defensive team," said Anderson. "Our rebounding needs some work but we are very quick. If we put our minds to it, we can contain any team in our league."

Perhaps the Skippers could use a little help on the boards. Yes, they lack the height of some of their competitors. Yet, you will likely see Mia Lieb-Lappen, Katie James, and sophomore Lacey Richardson ripping down rebounds like Shaq.

Let's take a look back at some of the game details. The Skippers traveled over to South Shore Voke Tech for part one of that school's tourney on Wednesday, Dec. 15.

"We knew nothing about Voc. Tech," said Levangi. "We didn't

All-Scholastic football team

Cohasset's Durkin, Casey, Ferriera selected among area's elite

With so many talented players on quality teams, this team has been the most difficult of the fall season.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 22, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top football players in Marinerland for this honor:

Joe Durkin - Senior (Capt.)
Running Back - Cohasset

The top back on a team that loved to run the ball…A South Shore League and Eastern Mass. All-Star…A durable workhorse that consistently got 20-25 carries each game…Finished the year with over 1,700 yards…Along with his teammates, stepped up big in the team's huge regular season clash with Norwell: He went for 114 yards on 12 first half carries in that game, and finished with 144 yards on 21 carries…One of three senior co-captains (along with Matt Casey and Ted Straughn) that CHS head coach Tony Rolfe credits with setting a good example for what turned out to be a strong, cohesive team…Playing hockey this winter, as a winger on the first line (after making the adjustment from defenseman in the middle of last season)

Matt Casey - Senior (Capt.)
Center/Linebacker - Cohasset

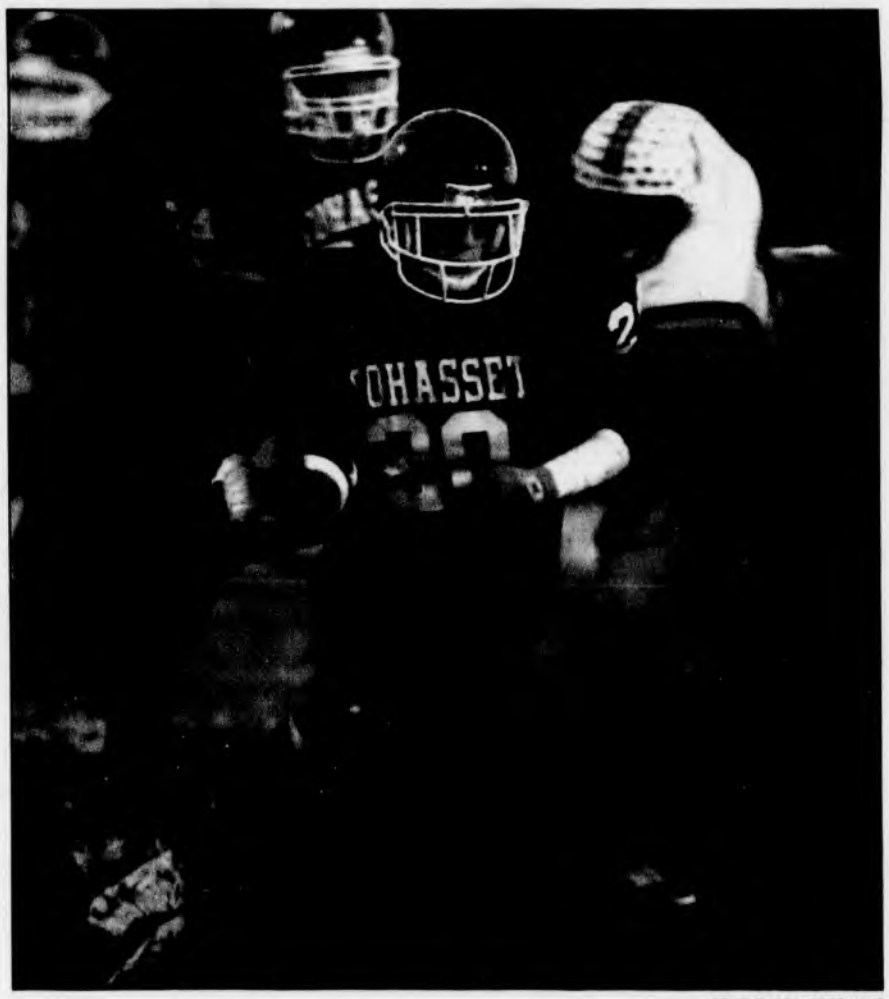
Matt Casey

Anchored a remarkable offensive line that helped the Skippers average over 200 yards per game on the ground…A South Shore League All-Star this season…Small for the position (listed at 175 pounds), but plays bigger and stronger…A tough-nosed kid always looking to hit somebody…Also an agile lineman, frequently pulling to the outside for a block…One of the team's leading tacklers on the defensive side of the ball…A big reason why his coach calls his offensive line the strength of his team…Also a wrestler at CHS; finished fourth in the sectionals last season in that sport at the 160-pound class… "One of the best players in the South Shore League," according to head coach Tony Rolfe



Kelvin Ferriera - Senior
Defensive End - Cohasset

Simply put, a terror to opposing offenses on the defensive front…Used his 6-foot-1, 210-pound frame to muscle his way past offensive linemen and into the backfield…A very strong athlete who is quick off the ball…Made a huge hit during the team's playoff game with Westwood that led to a safety…Also blocked a punt in the third quarter of the game against Norwell, putting the Skippers in great field position that led to the touchdown that put the game away…In that same game, part of an outstanding team effort that shut down a vaunted Clippers rushing attack…Being looked at by colleges in the area

Guy Matisis - Senior (Capt.)
Linebacker - Hingham

There weren't many opposing offenses that could move the ball successfully with this 6-foot, 210-pound linebacker chasing them down…Big and strong, Matisis' fierce play on both sides

Hockey opens season with win

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

At times it wasn't pretty, but no one can complain too much about the result.

Despite a number of penalties and a late charge by Wareham, the Cohasset hockey squad opened its season the right way with a 5-3 win last Saturday night at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham.

Mark Bouchard and Ted Straughn each scored two goals, and Dan Sullivan scored once. Straughn's goals came in the third period after Wareham had tied the game at three.

Crandon Leahy had two assists, while Mark Donovan and Brian Straughn had one each.

After Cohasset led, 3-0, after one period, the visitors made a comeback over the second and third periods.

Much to the chagrin of head coach Ben Virga, the Skippers committed a slew of penalties in the second period, and finally paid with 1:54 remaining in the frame. Wareham's Mike Dunphy, who had been causing problems all night with his speed and puck-handling, put Wareham on the board with a breakaway goal.

Less than five minutes into the third period, Trevor England notched the game-tying goal for Wareham, and the visitors appeared to have all the momentum.

That momentum seemingly shifted on a dime, however, as Cohasset dominated the last 10 minutes of the game. Almost immediately after England's goal, Ted Straughn had a backhand in front of the net that was of the ball was instrumental to the Harbormen's ride to the Div. 2A Super Bowl berth…On defense at linebacker, this Eastern Mass. All-star led the Hingham gridders (11-2) in tackles, racked up a pair of interceptions, and recovered a fumble…On offense at fullback, Matisis continually plowed through defenses inside the red zone for scores…Rushed for more than 100 yards several times this season and scored a pair of long TD's in a playoff win over Wilmington…Also a talented wrestler at HHS, Matisis plans to continue his athletic career in college.

Mike Perkins - Senior
Wingback - Hingham

This Eastern Mass. All-star was one of the favorite targets of quarterback Mike Quinn as the pair continually connected for big gains all year long…Was also part of a three-pronged running attack that ran all the way to a Div. 2A Super Bowl berth...Was also a gem on kickoff and punt returns, averaging runs of 35 yards…Was a force both on offense and defense for Hingham…On offense, Perkins rushed for five touchdowns, while catching passes for two others…As a wingback, Perkins ran back an interception for a score…He also blocked a field goal this year and made a pair of crucial stops inside the 10-yard line in a tight 12-0 win over Oliver Ames…Perkins plans to attend college in the fall.

Mike Quinn - Senior Quarterback - Hingham

To put it bluntly, Quinn's stats say it all…This Eastern Mass. All-star quarterback had a hand in 17 offensive Hingham (11-2) touchdowns this season, passing for eight, rushing for nine…Tallied an 18th at on defense, intercepting a pass for another TD…Rushed for more than 100 yards in several games this season, including a 46-27 lashing of Silver Lake, producing 482 yards of offense in the process…Also threw for 99 yards in that game…Was instrumental to the Harbormen's run to the Div. 2A Super Bowl and rushed for a pair of TD's in a crushing 27-19 loss to Feehan…Also tossed the game-winning TD in a 7-0 victory over Duxbury to win the Patriot League title at 8-0…The PL All-star plans to attend college in the fall.

Mike Goulet - Senior (Capt.)
Tackle - Hingham

This 6-foot, 1-inch, 245-pound tackle was a major reason why Hingham had so much success offensively this season, anchoring an extremely talented line…The Patriot League All-star knew his role was to block for the Harbormen's talented trio of backs and Goulet's play on the line helped the offense rack up 482 total yards in a 46-27 stomping over Silver Lake…He and the offensive line were also instrumental in Hingham's (11-2) ability to outscore opponents 237-105 this season, 34 of those points coming in a stunning season-opening loss to Gardner…He speed and skill on the line helped Hingham get by Duxbury (7-0) to win the PL title and advance to the Div. 2A Super Bowl game…Goulet plans to attend college in the fall.

Hugo Souza - Junior
Halfback - Marshfield

There wasn't much this multi-talented athlete didn't do for the Rams this season…A starting halfback, defensive back, receiver, kicker and punter, Souza's spent nearly every minute on the field for Marshfield and more than proved his worth…This Eastern Mass. All-star rushed for more than 1,000 yards and was a key part of the Rams' three-pronged running game…Could also set blocks for teammates while on the run…An Old Colony League All-star, Souza returns for another year next fall. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "Hugo is an all purpose back. He was never off the field. He's a very good athlete and was one of the smartest runners we have. He can see the cut before he gets there."

Scott Doherty -
Senior (Capt.)
Halfback - Marshfield

Another key element of the Marshfield running game, Doherty was the focus of many opposing defense after sneaking up on them a year before…Still rushed for more than 800 yards this season, despite being the one to watch…A two-year Old Colony League All-star, Doherty missed one game after sustaining a thigh muscle pull in a slugfest against Brockton, but never missed a practice despite the injury…Was one of the fastest backs on the squad and doubled up on the defensive side of the ball as a safety…The senior is also a talented lacrosse player at MHS…He is looking at a number of schools, like UMass Amherst, Northeastern, and Univ. of Maine, UNH, where he will continue either his football or lax career. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "If he got one step on a defender, he was gone. He had speed and you can't teach that. He's going to blossom at the next level."

Austin Clark - Senior Guard - Marshfield

This Eastern Mass. All-star was a major reason why Souza and Doherty had so much success running the ball this year…Cited as his coach as being one of the best offensive linemen ever to play at MHS, Clark was as powerful a blocker as they come, pushing around his 6', 255 pound frame for the good of his teammates…Also an Old Colony League All-star, Clark was also strong on the defensive side of the ball as an end.∴The senior is considering continuing his football career at either Wesleyan, St. Anselm, Stonehill, Bentley or Merrimack. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "Whenever we needed a few extra yards, he's who we'd run behind. He's the best we had technically. He worked hard all year and made himself into a great offensive lineman."

Steve Chuilli - Senior
(Capt.)
Defensive line - Marshfield

This Old Colony League All-star had one major job on the Marshfield squad: stop the run…Indeed opposing offenses didn't have much luck running the ball inside against this talented 6-foot, 5-inch, 250-pound tackle, even though he played the entire year with a banged up back…It was later determined that strain was caused by fracture in his foot…Chuilli was a crucial part of a defense that shut out four teams this year and came up big in thrilling wins over Xaverian (15-14) and Bridgewater-Raynham (28-11)…Chuilli is considering continuing his football career at several Div. 1 colleges. Marshfield coach Lou Silva: "The last three games he really gutted out with that bad back. He was still our main run stopper and had the ability to move up and down the line with two or three guys on him."

Anthony Garofalo - Senior
Defensive back - Rockland

Shined at many positions this year for the Bulldogs as Garofalo did just about everything…At defensive back, Garofalo picked off five passes, two of which he returned for touchdowns…The Patriot League All-star was also used at quarterback, running back, and receiver, while also kicking punts, kick-offs, extra-points, and field goals…Came up big in several games this season, most of which were down the stretch where Rockland won their last five games of the year to finish at 7-4 (6-2 PL, tying Duxbury and Silver Lake for second)…Garofalo is planning to attend college next fall. Rockland coach Ken Owen: "Some of his stats didn't do him justice because he was used in so many different places. He was the best all around athlete we had."

Chris Fucillo - Junior
Offensive tackle - Rockland

This 6-foot, 3-inch, 265-pound tackle was a presence on the field for the Bulldogs…One of the bigger linemen on the team, Fucillo was a key blocker for backs like Garofalo and Dan Comeau, while also being among the leaders in tackles…Strong and powerful off the ball, Fucillo routinely out-muscled two to three defenders at a time…Not only a talented athlete at RHS, Fucillo is among the leaders in his class academically as a straight A student…Just a junior, this Patriot League All-star already has his sights set on attending an Ivy League college. Rockland coach Ken Owen: "Chris has a lot of pull on the line and is great out in front. He has a bright future both on the football field and in the classroom."

Jeff Smith - Junior
Quarterback - Silver Lake

See Jeff run, see Jeff throw, see Jeff catch and tackle and kick...How the Globe left this guy off their All-Scholastic Team is the biggest mystery since D.B. Cooper (kids, ask your folks) ... Patriot League All-star ran for more than 1,000 yards, and he's the quarterback ... Blinding speed (4.45 in the 40) has college scouts drooling ... Not so much a great quarterback as he is a great player ... Tends to force passes at times, but with experience he could learn to harness his arm strength and become a devastating package ... Teams design defense specifically to keep him inside the pocket ... If he gets around the corner on the option, you're at his mercy ... Returned the opening kick against tough Bridgewater-Raynham 84 yards for a touchdown on Thanksgiving and later intercepted a pass in the secondary ... Kicks off and often gets in on the tackle. ... Coach Bubba Ashby: "He's the fastest player I've ever had the pleasure of coaching." ... Enjoy the show next year.

Josh Doherty - Junior
Defensive end/Tight end -
Silver Lake

Quite simply, a football player ... At 6-foot-3, 215 pounds, this Patriot League all-star can dominate on both sides of the ball ... Soft hands and long reach make him a favorite of quarterback Jeff Smith on rollouts ... Better get a linebacker on him because defensive backs just bounce right off ... A nasty first step makes him a nightmare for offensive tackles ... One of those players who always seems to be around the ball ... Stats don't do him justice ... A great blocker who clears lanes for Silver Lake's impressive array of runners ... Coach Bubba Ashby: "He might be the best player I've ever had at Silver Lake." ... He and Smith could take the Lakers a long, long way next season.

Greg Thornton - Senior
(Capt.)
Running Back - Norwell

A no-brainer selection for this team…A South Shore League and Eastern Mass All-Star…Finished the season with 2,009 yards rushing and 24 touchdowns…Capped off his remarkable season with another 200-yard game on Thanksgiving against Hanover…Named the Eastern Mass. Div. 3 player of the year by the Boston Globe…Accomplished all of this after being a back-up last season…A shifty runner with a knack for breaking tackles…Also had five interceptions playing in Norwell's secondary, including a pick against Hanover…Named Norwell's Offensive Player of the Game that day…An excellent baseball player, looking at playing that sport in college…According to Norwell head coach Jim Sullivan, Thornton's instincts, maturity, and ability to read the field played as much a role as his talent in his success this season

Adam Nogueira - Senior
(Capt.)
Offensive Line/Defensive Line - Norwell

The leader of an offensive line that propelled a Clipper running attack that averaged over 250 yards per game this season…Also a stalwart on the team's defensive line, as part of a unit that was among the league leaders in points allowed…A South Shore League All-Star this season…A three-year starter…On top of his offensive and defensive duties, was the team's place-kicker this year, performing well on extra points…One of five Norwell co-captains to help lead a team that featured a lot of athletes with limited varsity experience…Also on the NHS ski team…Called by Norwell head coach Jim Sullivan the "spiritual leader" of his team, and its defensive leader as well

James Carven -
Senior (Capt.)
Quarterback - Hanover

One of the most athletic players on the South Shore, Carven is a playmaker…This Patriot League All-star shined as both a mobile and accurate quarterback and very strong defensive back at Hanover (2-8)…At quarterback, Carven threw for seven touchdowns, while running in six himself for a total of 13…He threw for just under 1,000 yards this season…As a defensive back, Carven picked off one pass…Was the star of the Thanksgiving Day contest two years ago when his interception in the end zone preserved a slim Hanover victory…Carven went 4-for-11 on Turkey Day this season and was named the Offensive Player of the Game…Just a junior, Carven will return to lead the Indians next year. Hanover coach Paul Costello: "He has an uncanny knack for picking out the open man. He's just as dangerous running as he is passing. He has all the tools."

Devon Davis - Senior
Receiver/QB - Abington

This South Shore League All-star was one of the more versatile athletes on the Green Wave squad (6-5, 2-3 SSL) this year, playing consistently as a back and receiver…His ability to throw the ball came up big several times this season on trick plays and when starting QB Tim Wells sustained a concussion…At QB, Davis tossed three touchdown passes, including the game-winning TD in a comeback win over Wareham…Went 7-for-13 for 73 yards in a 24-14 win over neighboring rival Rockland…As a defensive back, Davis was an opposing receiver's nightmare…Caught a pair of TD passes and ran for two more…Davis plans to attend college in the fall. Abington coach Jim Kelleher: "Davis can play halfback, fullback, cornerback and he has been our quarterback before. He has saved the day (many times this season)."

Andrew Dominguez - Senior
(Capt.)
Quarterback/Kicker -
Braintree

Andrew Dominguez

Did a lot of everything for the Wamps this year, playing quarterback, kicking and punting … A Bay State League All-Star this year…Ran for seven touchdowns, threw for six more…Converted almost all of his extra points and kicked several field goals, including the game-tying and game-winning kicks against league rival Natick in November…Did all of this despite never being a place-kicker until this year…Led an offense that averaged over 21 points per game…Decided to play basketball at BHS this season, and will be a key contributor to that team as well…Braintree head coach Bill O'Connell: "He's a kid who always gives you everything he's got and he's a kid I trust out there, a kid I can count on. He works hard at his kicking and at quarterback."

Pat McGrail - Senior
Wide Receiver - Braintree

Pat McGrail

One of the best receivers in the state this season… Named to the Bay State League and Eastern Mass. All-Star teams…Broke the school record with 50 receptions this season… Finishes his BHS career with over 100 catches, also the program's record-holder in that category…Also played well at cornerback in his first season in the defensive backfield…An excellent all-around athlete also playing basketball this winter…Braintree head coach Bill O'Connell: "He has great natural ability. He can catch the ball and run with it after the catch. He is a gifted receiver. He gets double and sometimes triple-teamed, but he has still had a great year and a great career."

Colby Hawkins - Junior
Running Back - Scituate

A workhorse that carried the load for the Sailors running attack this season…A Patriot League All-Star this season…Carried the ball 305 times this season, quite an achievement for someone listed at 160 pounds…Made the most of those touches, running for 1,386 yards…Also scored a team-high 11 touchdowns…Will be one of the top players on a team next year that will be looking to improve on its record and contend in the Patriot League…Came out for the SHS wrestling team for the first time this season, and has impressed coaches there with his athleticism and instincts

Honorable Mention:

Hockey opens season with win

saved.

Within the next 90 seconds, Cohasset had another good scoring opportunity and forced a couple of icings with good pressure in the offensive zone. At that point, it seemed as though the worst the Skippers could do was a tie.

With 5:48 left in the game, Ted Straughn made sure his team did one better. Following up on a rebound from a shot by younger brother Brian, Ted was all alone in front for the put-back to give Cohasset the 4-3 lead.

After that it was Cohasset that played as if it were a goal down. The Skippers had a few great chances on net, with Donovan just missing on a backhand and the Wareham goalie stoning Brian Straughn on a breakaway opportunity.

The defense, meanwhile, led by Leahy and fellow senior Tim Pilczak, kept Wareham in check. The visitors failed to get a shot off in the last five minutes.

Ted Straughn tacked on the Skippers' fifth and final goal of the game for good measure with all zeroes on the clock, as he put the puck into an empty net.

Virga said he was pleased overall with the season-opening performance and hopes the team's subsequent games go a little differently than they did last season.

"Tonight was a great start," Virga said. "Last year, we won [the season opener] against Scituate and then didn't play well for a while after that. Hopefully, this year will be different."

Leahy, who played a solid all-around game with his two assists and defense, said the win should be a harbinger of success to come.

"We just have a lot of heart on this team," he said. "We have a pretty good squad this year."

Perhaps at no point in this game was that heart more evident than in the first period. Cohasset allowed 14 shots and committed three penalties. On top of that, there was a 20-minute delay while Wareham's Krista Kelso lay on the ice after being checked in front of the net. She was taken to the hospital for precautionary measures and released. She was back in school this week.

Despite all of that, Cohasset led at the end of the period, 3-0.

Sullivan, a junior forward, started the scoring at the 10:46 mark with an unassisted goal in front of the net. Bouchard scored the first of his two with 4:11 left, as Leahy fired a great pass from the blue line that hit Bouchard in stride on the left side of the ice. The junior went far side for the score, which came shorthanded.

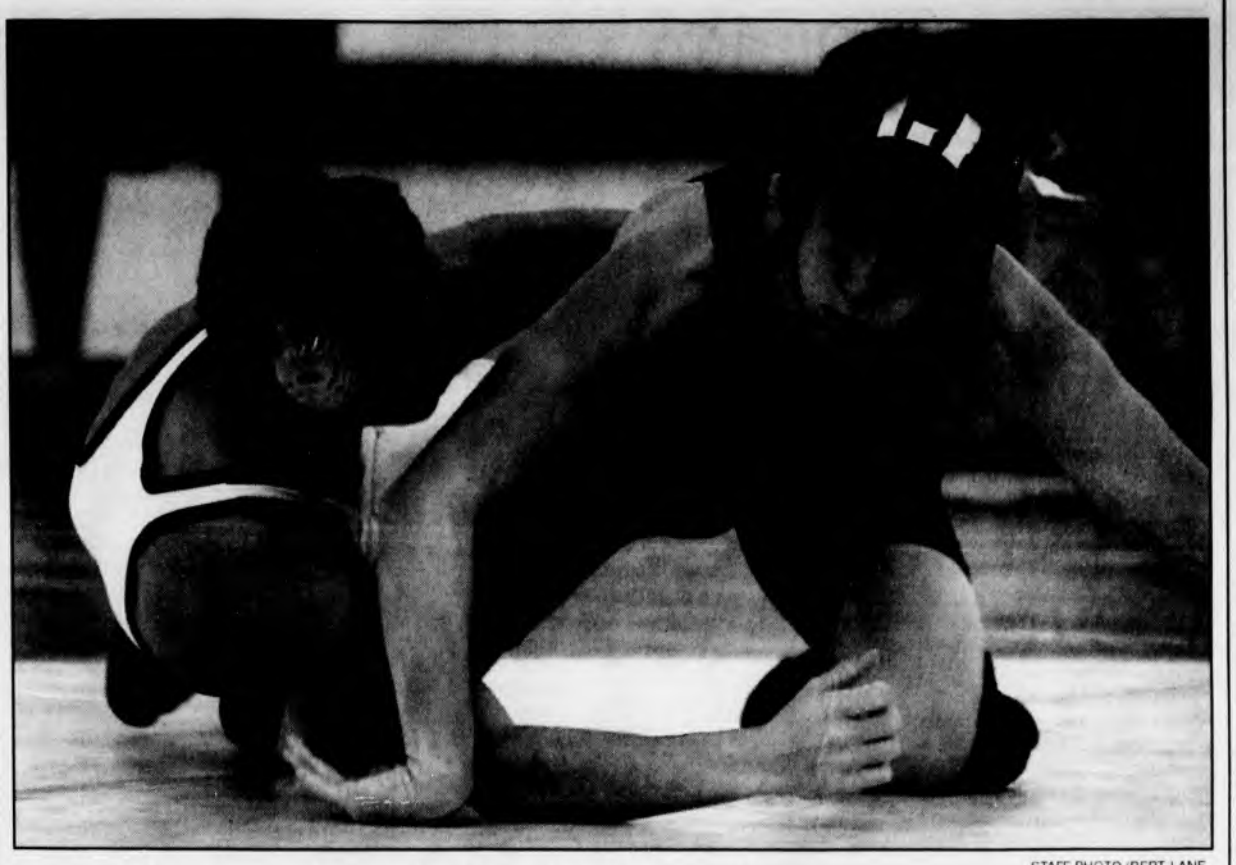
With 1:17 left, Bouchard struck again. The goal was again started by Leahy, who played the puck along the boards into the zone right as he was getting hit by a Wareham checker. Donovan collected the puck on the right wing and made a great pass across the ice to Bouchard, who scored from the left side before the Wareham goalie knew what happened.

The penalty kill crew, led by Ted Straughn, Donovan, Pilczak and Leahy, did a great job in that first period as Cohasset spent almost half the time shorthanded. Included in that was a 54-second stretch where they were down two guys.

Virga said before the season started that one of the team's goals would be to cut down on its penalties, a chronic problem in years past. They will certainly have to do a better job of that than they did against Wareham if they are to have a successful season.

And while the coach acknowledged those problems after the game, that didn't stop him from praising many of his players. He had particularly good words for Brian Straughn, a junior winger whose improvement from last year is evident in the fact that he now plays on the first line with his brother and right wing Joe Durkin.

"Brian has worked extremely hard to get in shape and to commit himself to the team," Virga said. "If you tell him what he has to do to play, he does it."



Cohasset does not play again until Wednesday, when the team travel two hours west to take on East Longmeadow. The Skippers have spent the last few winter vacations in the annual Bourne tournament, but were not invited back this year, according to Virga.

The coach says he "tries to do something different" each year, hence the long bus rise to the Springfield area.

Westwood game postponed

Due to the middle school busing accident on Monday, the Skippers' schedule game at Westwood was postponed. Virga said Wednesday night that the game will likely be made up on Saturday, Feb. 19.

That means an 11-day layoff between games, so it will be interesting to see how Cohasset comes out and plays against East Longmeadow next week.

Continuing success

The Cohasset wrestling team continued its undefeated season with victories over Hanover, Canton and Dedham in a quad meet last Friday.

After taking on Duxbury and Scituate yesterday, the Skippers will be taking part next week in the annual Marshfield wrestling tournament.

Cohasset went into yesterday's meet with a 7-0 total record, the first time in program history they have started off that well.

Winning all three matches in the quad was Nick Cambi. Recording two wins each were Jake Watts, Kevin Dinsmore, Jon Littauer, Matt Casey, Colin Regan and John Keniley.

know what to expect. The girls just walked into the gym and tried their best."

Apparently, the low-key approach succeeded. The Skippers defensively bore down on Voke Tech. all over the court. Anderson led the offensive charge with 26 points, followed by Chelsea Grossman with nine, and by Nicole Whitney with six. The final result: a sweet 50-44 victory in the Skippers' season opener.

Two days later the Lady Skippers swooned into Mashpee Falcon territory with avengeance. Cohasset shined defensively in their first league game of the season. Playing in their sturdy zone, the girls kept the Falcons low to the ground allowing them only 37 points.

Once again, Anderson showed no mercy by pouring in 32 points. Grossman turned in a very admirable performance at the point guard position. Katie James gave her team a lot of second chance opportunities thanks to her aggressive rebounding. She also contributed eight points of her own. This time, the Skippers distanced themselves even farther from their opponent with a 61-37 win.

Less than 24 hours later, the girls boarded the travel bus to Hanover for the conclusion of the SSVT Tourney. In the championship game, the Lady Skippers battled Holbrook.

With barely any time to recover from the previous night's game in Mashpee, the Skippers found themselves working harder for the W. Anderson contributed 28 of the team's final 38-point total. Nicole Whitney a few shots from downtown.

Coach Levangie cited Katie James, Lacey Richardson, and Mia Lieb-Lappen for their excellent rebounding. With a complete team effort, the Skippers walked off the floor at the buzzer posting a 38-28 victory.

To date, things look good for the Skippers. And yet, they have only started the season and many areas need fine tuning.

"If we want to make it to the tourney, we need to strengthen our rebounding." Anderson said. "We must do this to go against the good teams with height like Harwich and Abington."

Fans can only hope Levangie's team will continue their exceptional performance.

Cohasset's Chris Bryan has emerged as one of his team's top scorers early in the season.

The Skippers' Nick Zappalo drives to the basket during Cohasset's game against Avon last week.

Boys hoops still trying to find their way

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Things were looking good for the Cohasset boys basketball team with six minutes to go last Saturday against Holbrook.

In the consolation game of the annual South Shore Voke Tech tournament, the Skippers were up by seven at that point and looked like they were headed for their first win of the year.

Some turnovers down the stretch, however, turned the game the other way, and Cohasset would go on to lose, 55-49.

Freshman guard Pat McCarthy led the team with 16 points, followed by 14 from Trevor Brady and 12 by Chris Bryan.

Cohasset head coach Dorian Bryant said the tough loss is a part of the maturation process for his young team.

"We're going to go through our growing pains, and this was just another one of those," Bryant said. "We lost our focus a little bit toward the end, and it cost us."

This was the team's second tough loss in this tournament, as they lost by two to Avon four days earlier. The coach says part of his job as he guides his team through this stretch is to focus on the kids' mentality and make sure they stay confident.

"I think they were a little disappointed they didn't win," Bryant said of the Holbrook game. "When you're going out to compete, you always want to win. Our overall spirits are up, though."

Recent team practices have focused on a number of things, including defense and basic fundamentals. Bryant says there has also been a lot of position work with his young guards, such as McCarthy and fellow freshman Mike Bilodeau, to help cope with the man-to-man pressure that they have been facing so far this season.

The coach is hopeful that the team will be able to work out the kinks in the coming days and weeks.

"They're starting to get our offense, and knowing the level of play expected of them," Bryant said. "We're concentrating more on defense. We're trying to eliminate some of those lapses down toward the end of the game."

Cohasset gets another shot at Holbrook on Tuesday, when they take on the Bulldogs in the first round of their annual holiday tournament. Wednesday night, Cohasset will play either Sacred Heart or Hull.

SCIENCE CENTER

The following January programs are offered at South Shore Natural Science Center, 48 Jacobs Lane in Norwell. For more information, or to register for a program, please call the Center at (781) 659-2559 or visit: www.ssnsc.org.

Feed the Animals

An ongoing program, every Wednesday at 3 p.m. and Saturday at 10 a.m. Free with admission. Come watch the naturalist on duty feed the animals.

Tales from the Wild

For children ages 3-5, every Friday from 10:30-11 a.m. (except holidays and vacation weeks). Free with admission. A half-hour of storytelling that will delight youngsters (and accompanying adults, too). Extend your stay with a visit to the exhibit halls or a walk on the trails. Call in advance if you plan to attend. Limit 12 children

Parents and Tots

Wednesdays, 9:30-10:45 a.m.

Session I: Jan. 5, 12, 19; $21 members/$24 non-members - per session; additional family members are half-price; papooses are free.

Winter walks, checking out squirrel tracks, perhaps trailing a fox. There are stories in the snow. Dress for the weather. Pre-registration and pre-payment is required. Limit eight children.

Adventures in the Winter Woods

Tuesdays - specify morning (9:30-11:30 a.m.) or afternoon (1-3 p.m.) session; for kindergartners; Jan. 18, 25 and Feb. 1, 8, 15 and March 1, 8, 15 (an eight-week program). $110 members/$126 non-members .

Through outdoor explorations, creative activities, stories and song, children discover the natural wonders of a woodland in winter and learn about wildlife who make their home in Jacobs Woods. Dress warmly for the outdoors. Pre-registration and pre-payment is required. Limit eight children.

Animal Tails

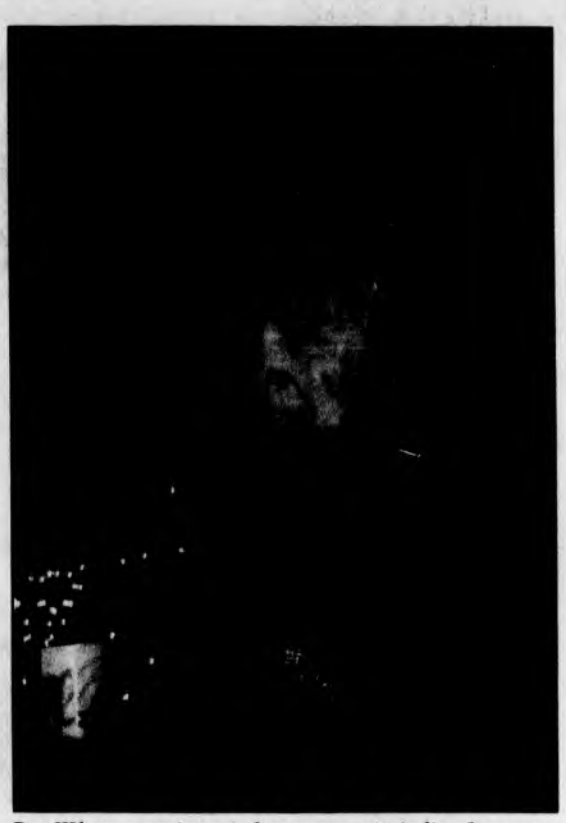
Thursdays, specify morning (9:30-11 a.m.) or afternoon (1:30-3 p.m.)

Session I: Jan. 6, 13, 20; $42 members/$54 non-members for each three-week session.

This program features outstanding nature stories and activities for children ages 31/2 to 5 years. Pre-registration and pre-payment is required. Limit eight children.

Wild, Wacky and Wooly

Saturday, Jan. 22 - 10:30 a.m.-12 p.m.; $6/members, $9/non-members per parent/child pair; additional family members are half price.



Follow young Max on his journey to "Where the Wild Things Are", learn what it means to be a "wild thing", and meet some real (but not scary) wild things up close. After listening to "What Will Little Bear Wear", another Maurice Sendak story, you'll share a snack and have a wild thing parade. Pre-registration and pre-payment required.

Holiday festival is a hit

SCIENCE CENTER

Native Flora art exhibit

The South Shore Art Center presents a national juried exhibition of botanical art. "Native Flora: Botanical Treasures of the Northeaster Seaboard" will be on display from Jan. 7, to Feb. 20. More than 60 pieces by 36 artists are included in this exhibition of works representing flora that is native to the coastal areas of the Northeast.

The works include original images of a plant or parts of a plant (such as the flowers), that are beautiful as well as scientifically correct using a variety of media including watercolor, graphite pencil, colored pencil, pen and ink, etching, oil or acrylic paint.

As part of the Art Center's 50th anniversary celebration, several special events will expand the reach and educational opportunities of this unusual exhibition.

- The exhibition opens with a reception, on Jan. 7, free to the public, 6 to 8 p.m.
- A lecture by Peter Alden (author of 14 Audubon guides and an expert on flora in the region), on Nov. 30,. 2005, 4 p.m. will be open to the public. Alden's talk, "Our New Non-Native Flora," will discuss invasive plants and their impact on local flora.
- Area garden club members and all interested are invited to visit the South Shore Art Center for high tea at 4 p.m. on Feb. 16, 2005, in the Bancroft Gallery amidst the Native Flora exhibition. Participants will view a narrated American Society of Botanical Artists slide presentation on the history and appreciation of botanical art, and enjoy a guided docent tour of the exhibition.
- Funding from the ASBA has enabled the Art Center to offer an educational program for area middle school students. This two-part outreach program will allow science students to explore the exhibition while learning about the native species growing in the area and how they are depicted by botanical artists.

South Shore Art Center Gallery hours: Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday noon to 4 p.m. For information about visit www.ssac.org or call 781-383-2787.

Local participating artists include Ronald Casimiro, Hull; Peggy Daniels, Hull; Kay Kopper, Pembroke; Karyn Koulopoulos, Wrentham; Gloria Markiewicz, Hingham, Julie Sims Messenger, Scituate; Sarah Roche, Cohasset; and Susan Zuger, Hingham.

Packages to soldiers are sent with love

Donations provide reminders of home, happy times

By Amanda Gontarz
CORRESPONDENT

Christmas has been put on hold this year for the Yanosick family of Scituate.

The family won't rip into any presents wrapped up in Santa Claus paper under the Christmas tree on Saturday morning. There won't be any carols playing on radio and there will be no homemade mashed potatoes.

"You don't know how much sending a little snowman or Santa in these care packages can mean to these guys. During my first deployment, my aunt sent me a little penguin wearing a Santa hat. Things like these get the guys laughing and keep them laughing. They need things like that to keep them going."

- Patrick Hurney, a Pembroke soldier

The Yanosicks won't be celebrating Christmas until 20-year-old Justin returns from the Middle East.

"The family is happy to wait until Justin comes home to have Christmas," said Justin's mother, Maura Yanosick. "If he comes home in July, that's when we'll have it."

Her son was deployed to the war in May for what was originally slated to be a yearlong duty; however, the family received a surprise gift earlier this month. Justin and his National Guard unit based out of Braintree, for which his mother is co-leader of the Family Readiness Group, should be returning to the United States and their families by early February.

"He's thrilled we're going to hold off on celebrating the holiday until he comes home," Yanosick said. "He wanted to know if I would make my homemade mashed potatoes when he gets home. They're his favorite."

It was Justin's two teenager sisters who asked if the family could push Christmas back until their older brother returned from the war. Though they will have to wait some time for a big celebration and presents, the family will mark the holiday with some Christmas spirit and open up small stocking gifts, Yanosick said.

With two young girls who still believe in Santa Claus, Christmas must go on in the Frechette home and Amy Frechette is making sure this Christmas goes on just like any other year. But, with her husband, Marc, serving in Kuwait, this year will be noticeably different for Frechette and her daughters.

It will be Frechette's mother, not Marc, who helps her put the presents from Santa under the tree after the girls go to bed on Christmas Eve.

"I'm not sure how I'm going to be on Christmas Eve or morning, or how I'm going to be when I'm putting the gifts under the tree," she said. "But I have to be strong for the girls. I don't want Christmas to not be there for them. I'm not going to skip Christmas because he's not here. Christmas is something they look forward to, something I look forward to."

With Marc serving as a specialist in the National Guard, Frechette said she has found support through the Quincy based unit's Family Readiness Group, whose members are there to help the spouses, children and parents of soldiers. While she also is a volunteer with the FRG, Frechette finds strength and support in the group and her children will receive some special gifts this Christmas because of the efforts of military support groups like the FRG.

GIFTS of HOPE
YOUR COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER CARES

Her daughters will receive extra presents this year from people around the area who wanted to adopt military families for the holiday season.

"I told them that people are doing this because they are thankful for what Daddy is doing and this is how they want to show it," Frechette said.

While groups like the Quincy and Braintree FRGs are making sure the families of deployed soldiers are able to make it through the holiday season with everything they need from presents to moral support, other local volunteers have banded together to provide the deployed soldiers with some holiday spirit.

Care Packs, a Weymouth-based group, has sent more than 50 care boxes this fall to the soldiers serving in the war and another two dozen are nearly reading for shipment.

"I hope that our efforts at CarePacks help the soldiers at holiday time simply by giving them some of the comforts of home," said organizer Neal Skorka. "What we put into our packages is not nearly the same as being at home, but hopefully it will give them a break from the routine of a difficult life away from friends and family."

Skorka said in addition to the personal hygiene products and high-calorie food items, each care package is shipped with a letter from a student at a local school.

"People have been so generous, that we should be able to send packages at least through spring 2005," he said. "As long as funds and goods come in, through direct donations and our fundraisers, we'll keep shipping packages. We are already working with the Braintree National Guard family support group and St. Jerome's Church in North Weymouth by providing them with care packages for soldiers connected with them. And several schools have sent us cards made by their students to be included with each package."

Further down the South Shore, a Pembroke group is into its fourth year of support for local soldiers and the families they leave behind. The Pembroke Military Support Group began shortly after the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, 2001, and their range of support may be one of the widest, from care packages and welcome home parties for the soldiers to support meetings and flower bouquets for the families of soldiers being deployed.

While they are volunteers looking out for the families of deployed soldiers, many of the members of the PMSG have a family member or friend serving in the war and know firsthand what it's like.

With a 23-year-old son in the military, Cheryl Poole said she has found local residents who don't have a loved one serving in the war to be quite sensitive and understanding to her situation.

"At lunch time, I'd rush home and sign onto the computer because my son was usually on at the same time and that way I could talk to him, even if it was just for a few minutes," she said. "One day a woman at work said to me, 'If you're late coming back from lunch, it's OK' because she knew why I was going home every day."

Patrick Hurney, a Marine who served on the front lines when the Iraqi war began, said it is important for people in the United States to help the deployed soldiers keep up their spirits, especially at the holidays.

"You don't know how much sending a little snowman or Santa in these care packages can mean to these guys," said Hurney, who grew up in Pembroke. "During my first deployment, my aunt sent me a little penguin wearing a Santa hat. Things like these get the guys laughing and keep them laughing. They need things like that to keep them going."

Holiday thanks to those in the armed forces

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee would like to thank the following residents who are currently on active duty, some of whom are serving in Iraq and Afghanistan and will not be home for the holidays. The Committee is still working to compile a full list of all those who are serving in the War on Terrorism and anyone with names of soldiers currently on active duty are encouraged to contact Chairman of the Committee Glenn Pratt at gpratt@suburbancompanies.com.

The Committee and the town thank all the brave men and women who have made the commitment to defend our country, and hope for the safe return of all those who are stationed overseas.

Christmas worship at St. Stephen's

Christmas worship at Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., features three services for a variety of worship celebrating Christ's birth. The Christmas Eve Family Holy Communion services will be held on Friday, Dec. 24, at 5 p.m. The star of Bethlehem will be lit on the church tower. The Rev. Beth Wheatley-Dyson will tell a story for children in place of the sermon.

A second Contemplative service, will be held at 7:30 p.m. The Christmas music for this worship will be of Bach, Corelli, and Christmas Carols and will be accompanied by Dr. Fredrick Guzasky, organist and Sargis Karapetyan on the violin.

The Festal Candlelight Christmas Eve worship will take place beginning at 11 p.m. A special program of Christmas music will precede the service beginning at 10:30 p.m. with organ and trumpet.

Christmas Day, Saturday, Dec. 25, will be celebrated with the worship of Holy Communion at 10 a.m. highlighted with the singing of Christmas carols. The church school is busy preparing an Epiphany Pageant to take place on Sunday, Jan. 9, at the 10 a.m. worship celebrating the appearance of Jesus to the Three Kings representing all the world. Children will portray angels, shepherds hurrying to Bethlehem, Joseph and Mary with baby, and of course the Three Kings bearing their gifts.

OBITUARIES

Mary Ann Sestito

Mary Ann (Umbrianna) Sestito, age 97, of Cohasset, died Dec. 18, 2004 at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home following a long illness.

Mrs Sestito was born in Rockland and was a Cohasset resident for 66 years. She was the daughter of the late Angelo and Mary (Geloran) Umbrianna. She was educated in Rockland public schools and was a homemaker who loved to cook and knit.

Wife of the late Carl S. "Bumpy" Sestito, she leaves her son, Anthony C. Sestito of Cohasset, her daughter, Rose M. Calvi of Hingham; her sister, Rose Monti of Weymouth; and her nine beloved grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. She was the sister of the late Vincent, Antonio, George, John, Michael and Joseph Umbrianna.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Dec. 22 at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Donations may be made in her memory to The Etrusco Associates, 1 Common Street, Scituate 02066; or to The Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home, 1 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset 02025.

Edward F. Goff

Edward F. Goff, 76, of Sarasota, Fla. and formerly of Cohasset, a retired police officer, died Tuesday, Dec. 7, 2004 following a long illness.

Mr. Goff worked as a Metropolitan District police officer from the 1950s through the 1970s.

He was a former member of the George H. Mealey American Legion in Cohasset and the American Legion in Oneca, Fla.

He served his country during World War II with the U.S. Navy in the Pacific Theatre of Operation.

Born in Boston, he lived in Cohasset for many years before retiring to Florida in 1983.

Husband of the late Phyllis M. Goff and the late Mary "Beth" Goff, he leaves his two daughters, Nancy Hatch of Sarasota, Fla. and Rhonda Clarizio of Plainfield, Ill.; his four sons, Edward, Jr. and Richard Goff, both of Cohasset, Mark Goff of Melbourne, Fla. and Keith Goff of Daytona Beach, Fla.; and his 14 beloved grandchildren.

A graveside service will be held Jan. 15, 2005 at Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset at 1 p.m.

A celebration of life will follow at the George H. Mealey Post in Cohasset for both Ed and Beth.

Some last minute gifts for gardeners

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

Through heavily frosted windowpanes, I pause briefly from my holiday decorating and baking to view the snow-covered landscape on a chilly December afternoon. A flash of brilliant scarlet suddenly appears as a handsome male cardinal perches on the feeder hanging outside our kitchen bay window, its fiery plumage accentuated by the backdrop of a stately blue spruce shrouded in glistening pure white snow. Tufted titmice and chickadees flit back and forth from the feeder to the nearby shrubbery where they perch among the branches to crack open and feast upon sunflower seeds. Although the official arrival of the winter season may be more than a week away, our recent snowfall has provided the perfect setting for the holiday season.

Those leisurely days of browsing through the malls, specialty shops, and on-line for the perfect gifts are over and the time has come to make those last minute acquisitions for neighbors, friends and family. For the gardeners on your list, there are numerous possibilities to delight and educate both the casual dirt-digger and the passionate hobbyist. Magazine subscriptions, books, tools, gloves, garden ornaments, and when in doubt, the all-purpose gift certificate to the gardener's favorite nursery or mail order catalog, should please every gardener.

No matter what the level of expertise, a gardener can never acquire too many gardening references. Books about landscape or garden design basics often enable a new gardener to get off to a good start. A reference that reviews ornamental trees and shrubs is often invaluable for homeowners as these plants serve as the fundamental "bones of the landscape" and should be the first additions to a design. A text that explains and illustrates pruning techniques is also an absolute must for every gardener's bookshelf. Many gardeners are interested in pursuing specific garden themes and would welcome references that focus on a particular topic including shade gardening, container gardens, wildlife habitats, house plants, water gardens, perennials or even more specialized plant collections including roses, lilies, herbs, ornamental grasses, and hosta. The serious collector may enjoy The Adventurous Gardener by Ruah Donnelly that provides directions and descriptions of where to buy the best plants in New England.

Magazine subscriptions are particularly welcome during the dreary winter months to inspire and inform the gardener on your list. A subscription to one or more gardening magazines offers a yearlong guide to the latest trends in gardening, delectable new plant introductions and innovative design concepts.

My personal favorites include

Fine Gardening (www.finegardening.com)

People, Places & Plants (www.ppplants.com.)

Horticulture (www.hortmag. com)

Garden Gate (www.GardenGate Magazine.com)

Once I have placed my order, I purchase a copy of the magazine at a local newsstand and wrap one issue for the recipient to open, especially if there is insufficient time to receive a special gift notification.

Quality tools are a perfect gift since many gardeners have a tendency to spend their available resources on plant material and purchase inexpensive implements only to have them bend or break during their first season of use. Well-made, heavy duty trowels, pitchforks, spades and shovels are worthwhile investments and should be available at local nurseries and hardware stores, through mail-order catalogs or on-line. Perhaps my most valued tool is my Felco pruning shears. Clean cuts are a necessity for the health and survival of all plants, trees and shrubs and few pruners can match the quality of the Swiss-made Felco which tends to be the pruner of choice for professional nurserymen. Several styles are available in addition to replacement parts and blades making these rather costly by-pass pruning shears a long-term investment.

Nifty tools

There are numerous other nifty tools available to make gardening chores, particularly weeding, a little easier. Long-handled cultivators and hoes enable gardeners to spend a little less time on their knees. For those who prefer to get up close and personal with their weedy invaders, there are dandelion diggers, weed slicers, hand cultivators and the Cape Cod weeder that gets into many a difficult spot to extricate weeds between paving stones, railroad ties and hard to reach places. A kneeling pad might be an ideal companion gift for hand tools as the ground tends to get mighty hard after a few hours of weeding and is often damp, especially in the springtime.

Gardening gloves are a terrific stocking stuffer.

Garden accessories in the form of statuary, benches, sundials and garden ornaments are additional suggestions for gardening enthusiasts. Most gardeners also share a love of nature and wildlife in addition to their passion for plants. Hummingbird feeders, bird feeders, birdhouses, and birdbaths can be enjoyed by all ages.

A membership to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society (www.masshort.org makes a wonderful gift as it offers multiple benefits including tickets to the New England Spring Flower Show with special members' viewing hours. Many programs and special events take place at the new suburban home of the Society at the Elm Bank Reservation in Dover. Trial gardens, plant society display gardens and acres of beautiful grounds can be found at this tranquil setting.

Last, but certainly not least, is the all-purpose gift certificate to the gardener's favorite local nursery or mail-order catalog. For those of us who passionately collect plants, a gift certificate often alleviates some of the guilt associated with overspending on plant material. In this time of hectic schedules, this quick and easy solution may be the perfect choice for the gardeners on your list, enabling them to purchase plants, tools or garden ornaments they might otherwise do without.

Suzanne Mahler is an avid gardener, photographer and lecturer who has been developing the 1.5-acre property surrounding her home in Hanover for more than 25 years. Her weekly gardening column 'Green Thumbs Up' has appeared in the Mariner newspapers for nearly a decade. She is a member of two local garden clubs, past President of the New England Daylily Society, an overseer for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and is employed at two garden centers.

French toast casserole – Voila!

THE KITCHEN DETECTIVE

CHRISTOPHER KIMBALL

Never heard of French toast casserole? Here's the concept. The night before serving, use a casserole dish to soak several slices of dried bread in a simple custard (eggs and milk). The next morning, add a quick topping and throw it in the oven. Voila! An easy, all-in-one breakfast. Of course, badly conceived and executed, this simple dish can turn out like a soggy bread pudding. We decided to begin our investigations with the bread.

It makes sense to use one loaf of bread for the recipe. A one-pound baguette worked better than a Pullman or sandwich-size loaf with regard to fitting the whole slices in a baking dish. The bread does need to be dried out in an oven before soaking, otherwise it quickly turns damp and soggy. (This step is not necessary if you are throwing this dish together just before you bake it.) As for the eggs, some recipes use only 4 eggs and lots of heavy cream while others use 8 eggs and milk. We settled on 6 eggs combined with two cups each of milk and half-and-half (both light and heavy cream were too much) which eliminated any "eggy" overtones but kept the French toast nice and moist.

Some recipes use a very sweet topping and only a hint of sugar in the French toast itself. We decided that 1/4 cup of sugar was about right for the custard mixture since we were not going to opt for the supersweet sauce. A teaspoon and a half of vanilla, a half teaspoon each of cinnamon and salt, and, if you like, a tablespoon of rum, bourbon or even orange liqueur. The latter is a matter of personal taste — we like the bourbon.

Some toppings are over-the-top affairs with corn syrup, sugar, butter and nuts. Too much of a good thing for us. We prefer a simple brush of melted butter followed by a drizzle of maple syrup when serving. Simple does it. As for method, we found we could soak the bread for as little as forty minutes and still achieve excellent results. That makes it pretty easy to prepare the French toast the same day you plan to enjoy it. We soaked the bread slices in a large shallow bowl and turned them halfway through the soaking period. Otherwise you can employ the day- ahead preparation, which involves drying the bread in the oven before soaking. Since the bread sits in the custard for at least eight hours using this method, turning the slices isn't necessary; they absorb ample liquid through and through.

We tried baking the French toast at 325 degrees and 350 degrees. The 350-degree version was best — it baked up quicker (50 to 60 minutes) and the slightly higher temperature produced a beautiful golden top. This dish is best served a few minutes after baking — reheating can make it limp and rubbery.

FRENCH TOAST CASSEROLE

This recipe can be made the night before (see variation below) or assembled from scratch in the morning with a soak time of 40 minutes. If preparing this dish the night before, the bread does need to be dried out in the oven.

6 large eggs
2 cups whole milk
2 cups half-and-half
1/4 cup sugar
1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1 tablespoon orange liqueur, dark rum or bourbon (optional)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 loaf French bread, about 16 ounces, cut into 1/2-inch slices
3 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted

1. Whisk the eggs, milk, half-and-half, sugar, vanilla, optional liqueur, salt and cinnamon in a large shallow bowl. Add the bread slices and toss to coat. Submerge as much of the bread as possible and allow to sit for 20 minutes. Gently rearrange the bread so the slices that were on top are now at the bottom of the bowl. Soak for an additional 20 minutes.

2. Meanwhile, grease the bottom and sides of a 9" x 13" baking dish using one tablespoon of butter. Heat the oven to 350 degrees and adjust a rack to the center position. Melt the remaining 2 tablespoons butter. Arrange the custard-soaked bread slices in fanned out rows in the prepared baking dish. Pour any remaining custard over the bread. Brush the surface with the melted butter. Bake until golden brown and puffy, 50 to 60 minutes. Cool for 10 minutes before serving with maple syrup, fresh fruit or preserves.

Serves 6 to 8

MAKE-AHEAD FRENCH TOAST CASSEROLE

Place bread slices in a single layer on two baking sheets and toast in 325-degree oven until dry and lightly colored, about 25 minutes, reversing the sheets halfway through the baking time. Arrange the slices in two layers in the prepared baking dish and pour the custard mixture over the bread. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 8 to 24 hours. Remove plastic wrap, brush with melted butter and bake as stated above.

Docket No. 04E0105-PP1

To Dane Williams of Marblehead in the County of Essex, respondent; and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Eleanor Herrmann, General Partner of Hermann Associates, Limited Partnership, a limited partnership established under the laws of the State of California of San Mateo in the State of California representing that she holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows:
A certain parcel of land together with the buildings thereon situated on King Street in said Cohasset and containing about a half (1/2) acre of land, more or less, and being shown as Calvin's Orchard, and bounded
Northeasterly by said King Street;
Southwesterly by land formerly of John Burbank, Jr.;
Southwesterly by a stone wall separating the premises from property belonging formerly to John Bubank;
Northwesterly by other land formerly of John Burbank.
Containing approximately 22,850 square feet of land, more or less.

setting forth that she desires that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than four hundred ten thousand ($410,000.00) dollars, and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate & Family Court, 35 Shawmut Road, Canton, MA 02021 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the nineteenth day of January 2005, the return day of this citation.

Avoid scrooges and catch the Stooges this holiday season

Foxboro's Orpheum hosts film festival Dec. 26-28

There was a time, not too many years ago, when "The Three Stooges" were never farther away than the nearest UHF channel. These days, however, the boys are a little harder to find.

Fortunately, for South Shore Stooge-ophiles, Foxboro's Orpheum Theatre will welcome back Moe, Larry, Curly and Shemp, too, for the third annual Stooges film festival. This year's roster of classic shorts will include "Love at First Bite," "Who Done it?" "Calling All Curs," "From Nurse to Worse," "Grips, Grunts and Groans," "Hoi Polloi," and "What's the Matador?"

"The Three Stooges Film Festival is one of our very favorite events here at the theatre. We always get such great response and it looks like we're in for another big crowd this year," says Orpheum Managing Director Bill Cunningham. "The festival begins December 26, the day after Christmas, which tends to be a time when families want to do something together. That's one of the reasons for high ticket sales. The other is that the Three Stooges tend to have strong male audience appeal. Last year a number of moms came to purchase tickets as stocking stuffers for their kids and ended up purchasing tickets for their husbands as well. We saw lots of fathers and sons and even grandfathers. It's something silly and fun that they can do together."

As an added feature of the film festival festivities, there will be a Stooge look-a-like contest, so if you're planning on a cutting your hair in a Curly-like wiffle, now would be the time!

The Three Stooges Film Festival will be presented at the Orpheum Theatre, 1 School Street, Foxboro on December 26, 27, and 28 at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. each day. Tickets are currently on sale at the box office, by telephone 508-543-2787 or on-line at www.orpheum.org.

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

TOO PUMPED

No one knows about the danger that loud music poses to hearing better than rock musicians, like Peter Townshend of "The Who". After years of playing amplified rock, one of his favorite charities is H.E.A.R. - Hearing Education and Awareness for Rockers. Both he and his fans have spent many hours standing in front of towering guitar amps, getting blown away by power chords. The unfortunate fact is that the tiny hair cells of their inner ears were also getting blown away, which translates into permanent hearing loss. Anyone who listens to high-decibel music is at risk for hearing loss, which is why big-name musicians are spreading the word about protecting your ears.

Rock musicians, factory workers, and tool operators wear ear protection while working. Why not take a lesson from them? The noise levels in many instances in our lives is enough to cause hearing to deteriorate. Do you spend a good deal of your time in a noisy environment? Have you been experiencing hearing difficulties regularly? There really isn't a good reason to wait for the problem to go away because it won't. Call us today instead at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER 781-337-1144, for a free painless, comprehensive hearing test at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. An estimated 52% of classical musicians and 30% of rock/pop performers suffer from noise-induced hearing loss.

So much to sea

From massages to martinis, here are 9 ways to keep cruising fun

Herald travel editor Fran Golden and L.A.-based writer Jerry Brown are co-authors of "Cruise Vacations for Dummies 2005" (Wiley Publishing, $21.99). The book, available at bookstores and such online Web sites as amazon.com, is designed to help first-time and experienced cruisers have a carefree vacation. In the excerpted chapter that follows, the authors discuss their favorite things to do shipboard.

People-Meeting and People-Watching

Who are these people you're vacationing with? Find out. You live within a small onboard community, and you can discover a lot about fellow passengers and crew just by observing. If you're shy, park yourself off to the side of the deck or in a lounge and just watch the action. But striking up a conversation is even better.

Making Believe at the Martini Bar

Think glamour. Think rich and famous. Put on your tux or ball gown and head to the fancy bar before dinner. While you sip that dry martini (shaken, not stirred, if you please) or enjoy fine champagne and caviar, think Hollywood. You're Lauren Bacall, he's Humphrey Bogart, and you're off on your latest adventure. Have fun pretending. Relaxing with Shipboard Massages As if cruising isn't relaxing enough, you can turn into jelly at the ship's spa. Drifting off as the massage therapists perform their finger magic is the ultimate shipboard indulgence and well worth the price of admission.

Competing in Silly Contests

What is it about cruises that brings out women who reveal their entire sex lives and men who take off their shirts and put their chest hair on full display in front of an audience just to win a refrigerator magnet? Have these people no shame? (Maybe not, but they sure are fun!)

Filling up at the Midnight Buffet

At the stroke of midnight, the chefs truly go culinary-crazy. They present mountains of food and such inventions as vegetable flowers, chickens dressed like little men and fish cut up and put back together to look like fish again, all surrounded by extravagantly decorated cakes and awesome ice sculptures. You need to bring photos home to show your friends!

Entering the Passenger Talent Show

Watch the proud parents when their kids perform, see a man croon romantically to his wife on their anniversary, hear the dirty old man who insists on telling off-color jokes, and enjoy a singer who shows so much promise you wonder why you haven't seen her on "American Idol."

Watching Movies in Your Cabin

With all you can do on cruise ships, why would you stay in the cabin and watch movies? Because many of the movies are free, with no commercials, and you can enjoy a comfortable place to catch up on the flicks you missed at home. But mostly, because you can.

Ringing for Room Service

Feel like a Caesar salad or a corned beef sandwich at 3 a.m.? Pick up your phone and order it. Don't like to appear in public before you have a few cups of coffee? Go ahead and ring for a waiter to bring some java to your cabin. You can call as many times as you want. And the service is free (although tipping the waiter is a nice gesture).

Gazing at the Deep Blue Sea

You can watch the sea during the day to see the water, the shoreline and maybe some sights, but one of the best times to stare at the ocean is in the dark of night. Breathe in the fresh air. Howl at the moon if you like. Feel at one with the sea.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 13 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Cohassett Mariner in supporting The South Shore Womens Center in supporting the effort to help local military families this holiday season. A donation of any size goes a long way.

Please make your tax deductible check or money order payable to:
102nd FA
Family Readiness Group
(Quincy National Guard)
or Pembroke Military Support Group

Mail to:
Gifts of Hope,
c/o Anne Rodwell,
16 Enterprise Drive,
Marshfield, MA 02050

(Please do not make your check payable to this newspaper or to Gifts of Hope as that will only delay disbursement efforts. Thank you.)

Gifts of Hope. You can help.
